DOMINION DEFICIT $162,191,000 OVER-ALL

Budget Speech of Dunning Includes C.N.R. Deficits in Total

Trade Relations With Great Britain Discussed Shortly, Says Dunning; Removal of Hindrances Indicated

Situation in Some Provinces is Clouded With Uncertainty

INTEREST RATES LOWER

Net Liabilities of Dominion Are $3,008,000,000 Budget Shows

Ottawa, May 1.—(CP)—Presenting a picture of slow but consistent economic improvement but warning difficult economic problems remained to be solved, Finance Minister Dunning in his Budget Review in the House of Commons today, disclosed a deficit of $162,191,000 in the over-all financial activities of the Dominion during the fiscal year ended March 31.

Making his second Budget speech since entering federal politics, the first having been delivered six years ago today, Mr. Dunning gave $372,100,000 as the total revenues of the last fiscal year, against expenditures for all purposes of $534,291,000.

Revenues of 19 Ministries

Total revenues were $10,229,000 better than the previous year but total ordinary expenditures were $23,987,000, and increase of $14,287,000 over last year, but $18,000,000 less than was authorized by vote and statute. Extraordinary expenditures such as relief and Canadian National Railways deficits brought the total up to $534,291,000.

A year ago a surplus was shown of nothing; rather a deficit over expenditures of $3,700,000, but a deficit when all expenditures were considered, of $116,613,000, according to Mr. Dunning's figures.

The Minister explained the present government was in power slightly over five months of the last fiscal year.

'Real' Improvements

The minister quoted figures to show a "real and steady" improvement in the economic situation, the removal of unemployed from relief rolls was not keeping pace with expansion of industry. Wage rates were higher and there was less part time employment.

While trade of 34 leading countries had increased 4.4 per cent, Canada's trade had increased 11.3 per cent, the increase being such the Dominion had moved from eighth to sixth place among the nations in world trade.

Imports during the fiscal year were valued at $483,803,000 against $532,416,000 the previous year, while exports, excluding gold and silver bullion, were $768,615,000 compared with $695,551,000. Total exports and exports over imports was shown by the minister, but he mentioned gold or invisible exports. To this the minister said were added $118,000,000 for tourist expenditures and an estimated favorable balance of $110,000,000 in income, thus covering the total surplus to $445,000,000 which would be a favorable item in meeting foreign commitments.

After detailing the steps already taken to ensure that the terms of the Canada-United States agreement and subsequent trade conferences with Japan, the Minister said it was hoped that in the near future, to open active negotiations with several other countries for bilateral agreements for the removal of hindrances now hampering International Trade".

Trade Relations Considered

Attention was now being given trade relations with the United Kingdom, the Minister said, "and I am happy to be able to state that discussions will shortly take place between representatives of the two governments."

Mr. Dunning made special reference to financial relations with the provinces and observed that the picture was "clouded by the uncertainty" financial position of some of the Provinces. It was no secret, he said, that for some years the credit of the four Western provinces had been maintained by support, from the Federal Government, the heroic efforts by the Provincial Governments to curtail expenditures.

Loan Scheme Approved

It was the intention of the Government, the Minister continued, to proceed with loan council conversion schemes with some modifications. He mentioned with regret the recent default by Alberta on a bond maturity and remarked that both British Columbia and Saskatchewan were finding it possible to meet bond maturities this month without help from the Dominion, the latter through the Bank of Canada, providing a page of loan council legislation.

Highlights of Budget

Ottawa, May 1—(CP)—Following are highlights of the financial review for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1936, presented today by Finance Minister Dunning in the course of his budget speech:

Total "over-all" deficits of $162,191,000 compared with $116,134,000 a year ago.

Revenues for the last fiscal year $372,100,000, an increase of $10,229,000 over the previous year; expenditures for all purposes, $534,291,000.

General decrease in interest rates and increase in volume of security flotations, both government and private.

Canada's trade increase in last year 11.3 per cent compared with average increase for 24 leading countries of 4.1 per cent.

Total trade gain of $152,000,000 with surplus of exports over imports $216,000,000, exclusive of gold or tourist trade which bring total surplus to estimated $445,000,000.

Trade negotiations proposed with several countries and discussions with United Kingdom on Ottawa conference trade agreements to be opened soon.

Loans to provinces reach grand total $116,500,000. Further loans to be made only under proposed loan council scheme which will be proceeded with.

Loan Council Legislation Amended, Says Dunning; B.N.A. Act Changes Seen

Ottawa, May 1 (CP)—The government has decided to proceed with its loan council legislation but will propose certain modifications, Finance Minister Dunning announced today in his budget speech. The amendment to the British North America Act also will be sought.

The amendment to the loan council legislation would make it possible "for a province which had submitted a borrowing proposed to the loan council and had not had such obtained the council's approval, to make such offerings in its own credit in the Domestic market. Approval of the loan council, however, would be mandatory for all external issues and also for domestic issues in those cases where the outstanding debt of the province is refunded under Dominion guarantee".

The budget speech dealt with correspondence with Alberta when that province defaulted and made it clear it was not proposed "except through its loan council legislation, to ask parliament for authority to grant financial assistance to enable a province to meet a maturing obligation or to provide for other ordinary governmental expenditures."

Mr. Dunning said he believed the modifications to the loan council bill "will make it more acceptable, more acceptable to some of the provinces and still make it possible to secure the objectives which the Dominion had in mind."

Saskatchewan has agreed to participate in the loan council arrangement. That province, Mr. Dunning was advised, under the undertakings that the loan council legislation would proceed, had arranged with the Bank of Canada to meet a bond issue due June 1. British Columbia would meet its maturity May 15 without assistance.

Uncontrollable Expenditure Consumes 62 P.C. of Revenue

Ottawa, May 1 (CP)—Nearly 62 per cent. of the Dominion government's revenue is absorbed by uncontrollable expenditures, Finance Minister Dunning said in his budget speech today. This compares with 58 per cent. in the fiscal year 1931-32, just before the war, and 44 per cent. in 1929-30, with war costs in, but before representation cases became serious.

Interest, war and old age pensions and superannuation, care of civil service men, subsidies to provinces and certain other outlays fall within the class of uncontrollable expenditures.

Tabulation for the three years of the percentage proportion of revenue going for uncontrollable expenditures follows:

	1913-4	1929-30	1935-6
Interest on debt	8.51	27.54	36.19
European war pensions	8.86	11.19
Old Age Pensions	.35	4.51
Other Pensions superannuation	.51	1.04	1.22
Care of returned soldiers		1.93	2.90
Subsidies to provinces	7.53	3.53	3.70
Other items	2.07	1.22	2.25

2 Eight Year Old Girls Are Molested by Stranger

Police Search For Man of Whom They Have Description

WEST SIDE EXCITED

Late yesterday afternoon local police were informed that the west side district of the city in search of a man who was alleged to have molested two little eight-year-old girls. The girls were not harmed in any manner, but had been annoyed by the alleged actions of the man, who was described as a man 35 to 40 years of age and wearing dark rimmed glasses. No signs of a man answering this description were seen upon the arrival of the officers, however.

Only eight transients appeared at the police station last night in search of sleeping quarters.

Two bicycles reported stolen in Belleville yesterday, were recovered shortly after and returned to their respective owners by local police authorities. E. J. Lavelle, Octavia St., received his bicycle back early today. It was stolen from Mr. Lavelle's premises yesterday afternoon, but later abandoned.

Police questioned a lad giving his address as Bellerville, relative to the removal of a bicycle from the Belleville Collegiate premises yesterday afternoon. "The "bike" was the property of Jack Boyd, 31 Bleecker Ave., and was returned to him last night.

A Fair Angler Makes a Catch

One of the fair anglers who braved early risings to pit their skill with rod and reel against wily trout on the season's opening day, May 1, in the river reward. Perhaps some of this group will be more fortunate but a third trout breakfast is the offing after this trip to a lonely stream.

'Quints' Heartbreakers And Perhaps Old Maids

Thus Colgate University Psychologist Refers to Segregation Results

TOO MANY WOMEN

Hamilton, N.Y., May 1 (CP) — Dr. Donald A. Laird, Director of the Colgate University Psychological laboratory, expressed belief today the Dionne quintuplets stand a good chance of growing into heart-breakers—and old maids.

Their segregation from other children while very young may make them man-haters, he said.

"Those quintuplets are going to have their hands full as the 'quints' grow up," the psychologist said. The small fortune which each will have accumulated, of course, will be a good marriage lure to selfish, fortune-hunting young men.

"But the girls are likely to be heart-breakers in their own right. They were born prematurely and it is a general rule for those born very small to be better looking—the typical doll-faced persons. . . .

Will Be Good Looking

"The quints are likely to be particularly good-looking young women."

C. P. R. PAYS OFF 60 MILLION LOAN

Government Guaranteed Loan But Was Not Called For One Dollar

Montreal, May 1.—Eight cheques totalling in value up less a sum than $58,753,630 changed hands today when the Canadian Pacific Railways paid off the balance in principal and interest due of the sixty million dollar loan guaranteed by the Dominion Government at that time. It will be remembered that in June of that year the Canadian Pacific had to raise the sixty millions to meet maturing obligations. The money markets of the world were then feeling the full effect of the financial crisis and were closed with the result that it was not possible for a Canadian Institution to borrow so large a sum of money on advantageous terms. The Canadian Banks therefore agreed to combine in making this loan but as an added measure of security to the banks, the Dominion Government agreed to guarantee repayment of the loan both as to principal and interest.

$40,000 GRABBED IN DETROIT BANK BY FOUR BANDITS

Sub-Machine Guns Carried in By Three Gunmen

ONE WAITS IN CAR

One Shot is fired as Men Climb Over Cage And Scoop up Money

Detroit, May 1 (AP)—Four robbers today held up a branch of the Detroit Bank of Woodland Oakland Avenues, Highland Park, escaping with a sum early reports placed at $40,000 while police investigated a false fire alarm turned in from one of the northern limits of the suburb three minutes before.

Three of the robbers entered the bank, carrying sub-machine guns, while the fourth waited at the wheel of an automobile in front of the bank.

Menacing employees and customers, the men climbed over the iron cage, scooped up the money into the white sack. Only one shot was fired, employees said, but one woman was reported injured in the confusion which followed the sudden raid.

The bank was crowded. It is located on what is known as the Chrysler automobile plant.

Police expressed the opinion the false hold-up turned in from a drug store at the northern limits of the suburb was intentionally designed to pull squad cars away from the bank. Woodward, near the southern boundary.

FAMOUS POET PASSES AGED 77

A. E. Housman Wrote But 100 Poems in Simple Style

Cambridge, England, May 1. (AP)—A. E. Housman, 77, the British poet and Latin professor, died today.

Housman attained fame late in the 19th Century on his volume of lyrics entitled "The Shropshire Lad."

In an age marked by prolific writers—Kipling, Galsworthy, Masefield, who wrote full shelves—the output of A. E. Housman was slender but its high quality and the slendemess of his two published books of poetry.

Although he lived to ripe age, no one knew his personal views on religion. Yet every poem in a "A Shropshire Lad," published in 1896, and which was being quoted wherever English was spoken.

The Masefield was to do for the sea, Housman did for the country, finishing English moods, new life, new measures that sang as sweetly as the birds. Housman's poetry, like simplicity marked his work to the end, and "Last Poems," which appeared in 1922, seven a group left out of the slim first volume lest it be too big for the public to swallow at one time.

Transient Threatens Life Unless He is Given Money

Tries to Force East Side Residence Outer Door

STRANGER ESCAPES

For the second time this week city police have been notified of the alleged practice of panhandlers being forced upon East Hill residents by unsolicited transients.

Late last evening a young lady employed at the home of Dr. R. A. Flynn, 24 Queen Street, telephoned to the police regarding a transient not only trying to force his way into the Flynn home, but who had used threatening language address ed to the young lady. P. C. Taylor hurried to the scene of the trouble and although the man left the community was thoroughly searched, no signs of the alleged troublemaker were in evidence.

"I knocked on the side door and answered it. A man stood there, but fortunately the screen door was locked. He tried to force the outer door and threatened my life if I didn't unlock the door and let him in. He wanted money, he said," explained the frightened girl.

"Sooner or later we'll catch one of these smart Alecks and when we do it's going to be just too bad, as an example will have to some of these undesirable transients," added Chief Kidd as he stated in the event that the police car would be pressed into service and used to patrol the streets more frequently at night in the future.

SNAKES LOOSE IN EXPRESS CAR

Reptiles, Some of Them Poisonous, Present Tichilin Problem

Cincinnati, May 1.—(AP)—Railway express and Cincinnati terminal officials looked around today for a "snake-charmer," or anyone who might care for the job of rounding up a shipment of reptiles, some of them poisonous, which broke loose in the express car of a Florida-to-Cincinnati train last night.

Hours before the train was due officials had telegraphic word from the south that a 6foiish job probably was in store for whoever might supervise transfer of the snakes consigned from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., to the Detroit Zoo at Royal Oaks, Mich.

Express Messenger Charles Woodall discovered the reptile's break for freedom from their box as the train —the Louisville and Nashville's Flamingo—sped through Georgia.

He promptly left the car.

Fellow messengers started to give the car a wide berth—and they did, even after it was empty.

Knoxville, Tenn., May 1.—(CP)—A large Indonesian boa coiled comfortably over the door of an express car on the Louisville and Nashville train Flamingo when the car was opened here today.

Express employees promptly removed a few packages but elected not to disturb the snake. One of several which had escaped from a broken crate.

Several more snakes could be seen coiled inside the crate.

WRONG PLATES, POLICE CHARGE

Two Men Are Held on Remand and While Investigation is on

Being found driving automobiles and bearing the proper license plates and of being unable to produce ownership for the vehicles, a police charge, resulted in the arrest of two Toronto men giving their names as Albert Michaelis and Stanley Stockhart, alias William O'Brien, yesterday. The pair were apprehended by Mr. Malcolm Irvine of Belleville and Jillings of Napanee, following a high speed chase on Highway No. 2 west of Desoronto. Stockhart and Michaelis appeared in the local police court this morning each charged with operating motor cars without the proper license plates. Stockhart faced a second charge of inability to produce his individual driving license. Neither man was asked to plead. A remand to permit Crown Attorney R. C. Dorland, K.C., and Chief Nicholls "about bail" quarried Stockhart.

"Oh, a thousand dollars I would think, but we want you to remember," hinted Hogg-printing you that," came back Mr. Donnan.

Referring to the case today Officers Irvine and Jillings added they had observed the two men and noticed that they found that the licence plates being carried on the automobiles driven by the two men had been issued in Toronto and for a different make of car than the one they were displayed upon yesterday.

"We intend to check these cases as the stories of the three men do not sound feasible, First Stockhart did not give us his right name and then when we questioned him as to where he got the car he was driving, he told us he bought it from an unknown person in Montreal," stated Motorcycle Patrolman Irvine today.

"There have been a tremendous number of automobiles thefts in Toronto and Montreal this spring, we're going to look these men up and thoroughly check their stories" added Crown Attorney Donnan at the conclusion of court today.

ANGLERS BUSY LONG BEFORE DAY

High Waters None Too Favorable For Bitting

Along the muddy banks of the swollen creek in Hastings and other counties of Ontario this morning veteran anglers paraded in full accoutrement and kit after the elusive brook trout upon which open season was declared starting this morning.

Although many of the local fishermen were in the fields and on the streams at the crack of dawn, results, according to one resident who returned were not too favorable. High water and a muddy condition in several of the streams resulted in fewer bites and slower angling than was the case in other years.

"There should be lots of trout and they should be plentiful, from all accounts the fish have wintered well and are reported fairly plentiful by some who made a check up of conditions some time ago," reported Mr. Herbert McCabe, deputy game inspector for this district.

POLICE COURT

When the name of Albert A. Turcott, Tuncin motorist, was called in the local police court this morning, the accused man did not answer to his name. "Call his name another time," Magistrate Bullet instructed Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Irvine, who presented a charge of speeding against Turcott.

After calling Turcott and receiving no response, the officer testified he had overtaken the accused driving 53 miles per hour along highway No. 2. There being no defence and the defendant having been properly summoned a verdict of guilty was given out by His Worship. Five dollars and three dollars costs is the usual fine assessed, stated Crown Attorney Donnan K.C.

John Lazelle, R.C.A.F., mechanic and driver of an automobile implicated in a hit and run accident the night before last at the Finnside and Bridge St. intersection, appeared under military escort charged with driving a motorcar while intoxicated. Mr. Everett Graham, Trenton barrister, appearing for the accused asked for an enlargement, in the matter until May 11th. Lazelles appeared, in court with his head swathed in bandages. The accused man was given over into the custody of an officer from the R.C.A.F.

A number of minor charges, laid under the H.T.A., were also disposed of with the minimum fines and costs. Charges of assault and of assault against Kenneth Palliser, Thurlow, late account of disorder over to keep the peace, "A rather mine affair to bring before court," I would think," added Mr. Donnan. Charges of machines, one of the pin type, were acted in Deserons by Chief Frank Smith last night. Charges of driving cars while they will be laid against the owners of the machines, it was learned today.

CANNY SCOT WAILS TWO FINES PAID

'If We Had Both Been in One Car, Only One Fine Then'

"Aye lad, and didn't I tell ye, if we'd been both travelled in one car, then we'd only have to have paid one fine," a canny Scot argued with a friend after two motorists had been apprehended on charges of speeding near Napanee and arrested by Motorcycle Patrolman H. Jillings recently.

"I've been on the road for a few years, but outing out of the blue sky and just after I had hailed the two drivers for speeding, one of them, Thomas Jillings, the canny Scotchman, popped out with the above statement," related Constable Jillings today prior to the opening of local police court.

"You see, Tough and his friend were both travelling east and in separate cars and when I hailed them both up at the same time, Tough out with the statement 'If we'd both been travelling in one car, we'd only had to pay one fine,' I laughed the matter "Oh, yes, I made the two fines stick o.k.," added Jillings.

MAYOR HOPEFUL OF FLOOD RELIEF

Back from Toronto where he again interviewed the Hon. Mitchell Hepburn and other members of the Cabinet on Thursday, Mayor Hill today was still highly optimistic over his reception and the promise that Belleville would be given every consideration in the matter of flood relief by the Provincial and Dominion Governments.

Today a joint session of Provincial and Dominion representatives are meeting in Ottawa, which one of the matters under discussion being the possibility of this city substantial aid for recent flood sufferers and property damage.

During his visit in Toronto Mayor Hill was accompanied on the rounds by Belleville's member, the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Health and local representative.

"We expect to hear definitely whether Belleville is to get the promised assistance and in what manner it will be given," stated Mayor Hill today.

MONEY POURS IN AT INCOME OFFICE

Forms And Advertising in Press Remove Worries

Local residents, more income-tax conscious this year than ever before, are filing returns early and orderly, it was reported by officials of the office engaged in their first rush of business. Today, the last day of the period in which returns must be filed, saw no especial crowding at the wickets, even though more taxes have been paid this year than were ever before in this district as well as Federal taxes being paid.

"People didn't seem to have as much trouble with the blanks this year," commented Major Sidney H. Ponton, who is in charge of the office here, "due to the able assistance so many of them with the blanks have received. Newspapers seem to have caught on more readily. Newspaper advertising and the fact that the new tax forms were widely advertised also helped make those filing returns less troublesome."

No statement regarding the probable number of returns received at the office was given out today pending the first check-up.

LAND SETTLEMENT PLAN FORECAST

Hon. Norman Rogers Suggests Plan Will Take in All Canada

Ottawa, May 1.—An investigation of the settlement problem where city relief families are placed on farms will be conducted before the next session of Parliament, Labor Minister Rogers announced Thursday.

He intended to visit settlements for first-hand knowledge and to assist him in concluding whether the scheme should be retained, expanded or abandoned.

The House passed a vote of $400,000 to assist the work.

Mr. Rogers in the House of Commons foreshadowed extension of the farm placement scheme to all Provinces. It has applied for three years to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, and "involves single unemployed men placed on farms for the winter months."

The House passed a vote of $1,000,000 for the scheme, when the Minister said he hoped to meet the Provinces next month from five weeks and propose extension of the scheme. At the present time the Dominion has a bonus system through and the Provinces pay $6 to the farmer.

Care in selecting the men was practiced, Mr. Rogers said, to eliminate fraud under the scheme, such as farmers' sons who did not need relief. In his judgment, it was a fruitful method of providing relief for single, homeless men," and was proving successful.

During the past winter farm placements in Manitoba, 2,200; Saskatchewan, 6,700, and Alberta, 2,389.

Says It Failed

Joseph Bradette (Lib., Cochrane) hoped the land settlement scheme would not be enlarged, because he believed it had failed. It was impossible, he argued, for city mechanics to be made into successful farmers in the winter months. He hoped, however, the people on the land would be raised, but not in such a subsidy.

The Dominion did not place men on the land, the Minister said, but the Provinces did. Selection of men and land was made by the provinces and municipalities, with the Dominion paying its share of the cost.

The Minister said he would investigate the whole scheme before the next session. "Before there is any expansion of the scheme we will see our way very clearly," he added.

W. Rupert Davies Elected to Office

Toronto, May 1 (CP)—In putting out matters of the election of officers of The Canadian Press, it was stated in error R. C. Rupert Davies, Kingston Whig-Standard, the original nomination.

Mr. Nicholas then felt unable to accept because of his commitments but on his fellow-directors pointing out to him it was a duty he owed The Canadian Press he withdrew his opposition and was duly elected.

The Canadian Press regrets this error.

Other officers elected were W. B. Preston, Hamilton Spectator, President; H. P. Duchemin, Sydney Post-Record, Vice-President and M. E. Nichols, Vancouver Province, Honorary President. C. F. Jefferys, General Manager and Secretary.

Saturday Only Two Features Gene Autry in "Red River Valley" and "Twenty Million Sweethearts"

"Red River Valley," the new Republic Western, starring Gene Autry can confidently be listed as one of the most unique productions of the season, which offers puzzling melodrama as brilliant as the brilliantly launching voice of its virile principal, tomorrow at the Capitol.

The singing cowboy, who forged to the front as Yodo entertainer with songs of his own composition, has never in features, and only trends three new ballad numbers so tunefully alluring that it is no prophecy that their strains will be whistled-and sung from coast to coast, once the film's fame begins to spread. A construction crew song composed by Republic exclusive song-writer, Sam H. Stept, including a fine chorus of male voices, as the men swing picks and shovels on a big irrigation project, contributed to small charms in the picture's melodious appeal.

The plot deals with the building of a huge dam destined to bring much-needed water to a desert of waste land. A crooked banker enters into league with the superintendent of the irrigation company to wreck the project, the latter being jealous of Gene Autry's success as suitor for the affections of Mary, daughter of the company's president. Thrill follows thrill as Autry beats up the "boss" of the irrigation crooks trying to take him for him by his enemies and proves himself a leading contender with a six-shooter. There are flat flights before, bullying and shooting bullets, but Gene comes unscathed through all and winds up with Mary as his marital prize; proving himself as great an athlete and actor as he is a talented vocalist.

"Twenty Million Sweethearts"

Whistling, humming and laughing, an enthusiastic audience will leave the Capitol theatre tomorrow unanimously declaring the new First National picture "Twenty Million Sweethearts" delightful entertainment, and attesting the arrival of a new romantic screen team which will probably be registered among the great lovers of the cinema, Dick Powell and Ginger Rogers.

With Pat O'Brien cast in a part made to order for his unique skills as a comedian, and Powell and Rogers making musical love throughout the action of the fast moving and hilariously funny comedy, with the Four Mills Brothers, the Three Radio Rogues, and Ted Fio Rito's orchestra, and a remarkably capable cast in the supporting roles, "20 Million Sweethearts" will undoubtedly take its place as one of the outstanding hits of the year. Last times today and tomorrow.

AT THE BELLE

"The Good Fellow" Robert Donat Sensational Star of "The Count of Monte Cristo" in a Gay Romantic Comedy

Leaves all your old notions about ghosts at home when you go to the Belle theatre, tomorrow or Monday. For the "spook" who walks the screen in "The Ghost Goes West," Alexander Korda's gay new romantic comedy, is unlike any screen ghost you ever saw. He's handsome, he's charming and he has a decided way with the ladies.

The brilliant Robert Donat, who rose to world fame overnight as "The Count of Monte Cristo" and recently scored in "The 39 Steps" plays the dual role. He is seen both as Donald Glourie, an impoverished young Scotch highlander who is forced to sell his haunted ancestral castle to an American millionaire and also as the personable shade who strolls the castle halls.

Ghost Tries Suave

The story, which Robert E. Sherwood adapted from a story by Eric Keown in "Punch," takes an hilarious turn when the millionaire played by Eugene Pallette, commandeers and transports the castle to America and the ghost goes along. When the shade of his ancestor begins walking the transatlantic liner, his marked resemblance to Donald gets the latter into a series of ghostly complications. But when his sweetheart, played by Jean Parker, arrives later, begins mistaking the ghost for her lover, she realizes the time for action has come.

A typical scene is the one in which Elsa Lanchester, the millionaire has decided to use as a ballyhoo for his line of food products, arrives in America and is given an official reception and a police-escorted ride up Fifth Avenue. Complications develop when the spook, frightened by his strange new environment, vanishes and Donald is called upon to double for him at the grand reception the millionaire has planned in the ludicrously restored and modernized castle to introduce his famous shade to the gentlemen of the press.

Surprise Ending

The story has a knockout surprise comedy ending that will send every laughter-limp audience cackling.

"The Ghost Goes West" marks the first production to be directed by the famous English director, Rene Clair. Donat not only does a grand piece of acting in this grand feature comedy, but he will make the ladies hearts flutter, Jean Parker is charming, Eugene Pallette is grand, and Elsa Lanchester is superbly cast as a lady "physic" who swoons at her first sight of a real ghost. The lovely Patricia Hilliard is another important member of a uniformly excellent cast.

"The Ghost Goes West" is grand fun for all tastes. See it by all means. "Wings Over Mt. Everest" a real breath-taking aerial adventure, probably the most thrilling ever recorded by a movie camera, will be exhibited on the same program with latest news introducing also by request scenes of Belleville's last flood and other events. A Betty Boop and Henry cartoon and Rex and Rinty.

"Wife Versus Secretary" Ends

The season's biggest hit, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sophisticated "Wife Versus Secretary," from Faith Baldwin's exciting Cosmopolitan Magazine serial, and featuring Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Jean Harlow will be exhibited at the Belle tonight for the last time. Along with a very funny all-star comedy, and a delightful vaudefilm titled "Telephone Celebrated." The complete bill will be presented tonight, the first starting at 7.15, the second at 9.15. The feature offering "Wife Versus Secretary" starts at 7.35 and 9.40 p.m.

Twin Wives Seek Divorce from Twins

Los Angeles, May 1.— The Sebring twins' twin wives, discussing their twin divorce suits, explained that twins can be alike and different too.

The Sebring twins, Roy and Ray, are fraternal twins, said their wives, formerly Louise and Lois Coats. The sisters claim to be identical twins.

"You see," offered Louise May Sebring "we couldn't get along with our husbands because we had different points of view". She and her sister Lois Coats scarlet fever together and the mumps together, "and once we even drowned together."

"We married twins (in 1934) so we could be together always," said Lois. "But that wasn't what our husbands wanted."

TWO COPS SOCK GUNMAN ON JAW

Bandit Who Held up Dempsey's, Cashier Given Knock Out

New York, May 1—(CP)—A midsleweight gunman ventured to hold-up Jack Dempsey's bar and grill and got several heavyright jabs on the jaw for his pains.

Old "Jawn" the ex-ruler of the heavies, didn't administer them for he is visiting in Kentucky, Red Burman, one of his more promising "white hope" boxers was about better and he left the punches "on account of I gotta save my hands."

Instead it was two burly Irish policemen who swung from the hip a minute after Jack Downing, alias Kellery, alias O'Brien, etc., etc., covered Dempsey's cashier with the gun last night and hustled off with $145.

Burman chased the holdupman down 50th Street and hailed Patrolmen Jim Kenny and Jack Cullen "and then," said Burman related later back in the restaurant, "a cop said, 'Where are you going?' and the guy answers 'Chicago and then the cops hit him quick like, one right after the other, and he went down." And the guy went down too, because those cops could hit."

MAY ARRIVES

With the coming of May, everyone hopes that there will be an end of dull skies. Dull April has helped to carry on the sense of the unendingness of the winter of 1935-36. It seems a long time since the snow was last seen and felt, since the Moira River was in flood, and since the birds first came. Perhaps the weather from now on will give us those flowers we are accustomed to look for in the latter part of April and early May.

May has the reputation of being one of the loveliest months of the year. It has got away from spongy April and begins to reveal the full surge of revived life in nature. It is the month when trees go into bloom and leaf. By this time the spring season is well under way.

TRYING TO STEAL HEROES' MONEY

Whoever the men were who tried to break into the Red Cross safe at Toronto and steal the money which is being collected for the miners who risked their lives in the rescue of Dr. Robertson and Alfred Scadding from the caved-in Moose River Gold Mine they belong to that class which is the enemy of society. Money is attractive but money set apart as a reward for these heroic men, the rescuers, should be protected by the sense of justice and appreciation. Those who did not see the futility of the efforts of the men who risked all in order to save the two entombed men. Miners, whatever their pay, cannot be rewarded too highly when they risk everything for the sake of fellow beings.

The would-be thieves who wanted to make a good haul, were not troubled by scruples of that kind. But hundreds upon hundreds of folk were through this fund endeavoring to show their appreciation of brave men.

It quite often is such a fund would be safe if the money were laid out in a pile in the street at midnight unguarded. That would be an ideal situation which regrettably is not yet attained by society.

There are two things to remember about this—The money was the mark of public esteem for courage and the donors were many of them, people who had none too much of this world's riches themselves.

One would have thought that the epic story which was told over the radio would have made thieves honest as they thought of the miners who risked all. But no such inspiration dominated these men lower than wolves who sought to enrich themselves at the expense of truly noble men while they themselves were the foes of society. Far, far down in the social scale is the man who could think of theft of this treasurer, which thought it is not as large as it ought to be, yet will mean considerable to the hard working miners.

HARRY W. ANDERSON

Universal sense of regret is expressed in the newspapers and by the public in the death of the noted newspaperman, Harry W. Anderson of the Toronto Globe, member of the Dominion Royal Commission probing the Canadian penitentiaries. Anderson was an outstanding newspaperman, who knew the newspaper business from his earliest years and toured every phase of newspaper life. He became one of the most brilliant reporters and observers and one of the outstanding editorial writers. All the while he was in close contact with every public movement of note and had been a champion of prison reform.

One of the departments of newspaper work brought him into contact with the leading political figures of the day and issues. He was more than a mere recorder of political events, for he had his own political opinions. He was rated high as a political analyst.

It is said of him that he was a true friend of French Canada and that he loved things European, no doubt because of the culture and civilization they implied.

Though Harry W. Anderson has been away from the editorial control since he accepted the post of member of the Dominion Commission investigating the prisons, he will always be remembered as a man of a forceful character, possessing the qualities of a statesman and a great newspaper.

LITTLE WHITE SHIP

Oh, a little white ship sailing far from its slip
Bears a gift, love-jewelled, from me.
Pray the wind and the tide steer it gently to glide
To its harbour at rest with thee.

Now the little white ship sailing far from its slip
Is the spray on a storm toss'd sea;
And the gift on its breast o'er the wave's surging crest
Is the gift of my heart to thee!

Amherst, N. S. —Mabel Black Myers.

A WAVE OF BUILDING ACTIVITY IS PREDICTED FOR CANADA. Prophets base their predictions upon the partial paralysis of home building activity for several years owing to prevailing business conditions. The result is a scarcity of small and medium sized houses to suit requirements of home owners and home renters. It is expected that the Dominion Government's new Housing Act will encourage building homes and start a building wave from coast to coast which will contribute materially to returning prosperity by giving employment to thousands of carpenters and other artizans besides keeping factories busy on new orders. The man who wants to own his own home can finance it by per centum on the proposed expenditure through the Government plan on easy terms. Those interested in the Housing Act locally should get in touch with the officials of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce.

MAX SCHMELLING HAS COME BACK FROM EXILE AND FOR ANOTHER WAD OF UNCLE SAM'S MONEY. Win or lose Max gets a big cut of the take and like a wise boy he hustles back to Germany to spend what he has left after Uncle Sam takes his income tax cut out of it. United States has been a fine meal ticket for Schmelling, touted as a world champion pugilist although he hasn't shown to date any super championship ability. He is going to tangle this time with Joe Louis, the Detroit thunderbolt, who wiped Max Baer off the map with the greatest of ease. The colored lad from Detroit has gone up country from Manhattan to do a bit of woodchopping to make flexible his muscles. Max is going to start training on mountain climbing, while the promoters of the bout have started training their press agents to get all the free publicity possible in order to create another million dollar gate for themselves. The newspapers will get a few ring side seats free in payment for all the ballyhoo which generated the heat resulting in the million-dollar gate.

YOUR LAWN IS ASKING FOR SOME ATTENTION RIGHT NOW. How about feeding the lawn some new grass seed?—liable to have a long spell bye and bye, so just thicken it up a bit and have a nice green sward right through the heat. Remember those beautiful cabbages you grew in the back yard one year—they only cost you one dollar per each, but gosh, all hemlock, what of that, they were my own.

NEW FOOTBRIDGE WILL HAVE A LIGHT IN THE CENTRE, according to residents of the West Side, who say this has been promised them. Centre of the old bridge was always dark and illumination was meagre for the entire structure. Folks who have had to use the footbridge regularly say that the shadows of the bridge were always favorite lurking places for young fellows, probably waiting to see some girl acquaintance home, or try for a "pick-up" or something. This was not conducive to the tranquility of nervous pedestrians, and so with the new bridge, the City Council, and Alderman Frank Domenico, Chairman of the Light Committee, it is understood, will chase the shadows away with plenty Hydro illumination.

REMEMBERING

Aunt Clemmie

GREAT-AUNT CLEMMIE was brought up to the Spartan life. She enjoyed (she always said) getting up at five on a Saturday morning, hanging her market basket over her arm, and going downtown to do the marketing for the week-end. She said, "If you get there first—you'll get the best!"

AUNT CLEMMIE is a fine reminder of her time. Nowadays one needn't rise with the birds to be sure of a full market basket. It's so much simpler and more efficient to spend a few minutes with the advertisements. Marshalled before you, in your newspaper, is all the news that is necessary for your good living. There, in the advertisements, are facts — sound, solid facts — about prices and quality. Advertised, trade-marked merchandise must be honest merchandise. Or it wouldn't be advertised.

TOSCANINI BIDS FAREWELL TO U.S.

Program of Beethoven And Wagner Given at New York

New York, April 30.—(AP)— The eleven crowded years Arturo Toscanini directed the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society as its principal conductor were at an end today, climaxed by last night's tumultuous tribute to Beethoven and Wagner music in Carnegie Hall.

It was his farewell to the United States as a conductor, but not a finale on the podium for the still vigorous 69-year-old Master.

He sails Saturday for Paris, with concerts there, in Lugano, in Palestine and possibly in Egypt during the remainder of this year.

A distinguished audience filled Carnegie Hall and stood in their seats at the end, clamoring for more after the Maestro had led a devoted, intent orchestra through the swirling Valkyries' Ride of the Wagner music.

Police were needed later to clear the tumultuous path through the throngs that waited to cheer Toscanini when he emerged on his way to a hotel to play host to the orchestra which he had conducted in 69 concerts in the United States and 23 in Europe during the 11-year period.

LUMBERMAN HELD TO BLAME

Coroner's Jury Names Girard in Double Fatality

Namur, Que., April 30 (CP)—A coroner's jury under Dr. Albert Cleroux today found Oscar Girard, 34, transient lumberman, of Namur, formerly of Montreal, criminally responsible for the death of Leon Leclair, 24, and Joseph Alfred Dubeault, 25, whose charred bodies were found in Leclair's razed home April 7.

Girard was taken back to Montreal by provincial detectives and will be arraigned on the double murder charge in Hull tomorrow, according to Chief of Provincial Detectives Louis Langelier, of Montreal.

Asked if he wished to testify at the coroner's inquest, Girard said he knew nothing of the affair and said he maintained the declaration he made previously to Montreal detectives.

Witness at the inquest testified Girard on the day before the fire occurred in Leclair's home had only about $10, but after the fire he displayed several $100 bills.

HON. E. LAPOINTE ARRIVES IN N. Y.

Minister Much Benefited By Holiday in France

New York, April 30 (CP)—Eager "to resume immediately" his Parliamentary duties, Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Canada's Minister of Justice reached New York today en route to Ottawa after a vacation in France. He was welcomed here by Philippe Roy, Canadian Minister in Paris, who will holiday in the United States.

Mr. Lapointe appeared to have benefited from the holiday. "France is such a restful country in which to holiday," he said. "I am much pleased and eager to return immediately my Parliamentary duties."

Both travellers, as they disembarked from the S. S. Champlain, expressed interest in the French elections, with general feeling that France is that the election will bring little change in the government," said Mr. Lapointe. "However, I would not be a surprise to see a slight swing to the left."

The rescue of Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding from the mountains of Mexico at Monte Rico Gold Mine last week was given wide attention in the French press, which reached Ottawa in a day, stating those men out," he declared.

BODY FOUND IN LONELY HOUSE

Believe Minister Suffered Seizure And Became Delirious

Hamilton, April 30 (CP)—An enquiry has been ordered to ascertain the cause of death of Rev. Charles Wesley Webb, whose body was found in his lonely house on the third concession, Ancaster, yesterday.

F. J. Johnson, Mr. Webb's neighbor, found the body of the clergyman lying on the floor, entirely nude, in the kitchen of the farm house.

Dr. A. L. Speers, coroner, was summoned, and it was found the victim had been dead for several days. It was thought that Webb suffered a seizure and in a delirium stripped off his clothes.

Mr. Webb was a retired Presbyterian minister and at one time had enjoyed a high reputation as a brilliant scholar. Of recent years he had lived the life of a recluse in the little cottage he built himself.

TWO MILLION DROP SHOWN IN REVENUE

C. N. R. Income Cut Blamed on Floods, Snow, Tonnage

Ottawa, April 30 (CP)—Floods, snow, ice, and lower tonnage traffic during the first three months of 1936 caused a drop of $2,000,000, from the Canadian National Railways budgeted revenues, the Commons Railway Committee was told today.

The committee approved the supplementary vote of $29,300,000 to cover estimated deficit of the Canadian National for the present year, as well as a further amount of $6,412,000 required for loans and investments. Additional supplementary estimates for last year were passed.

Favorable conditions might correct the revenue decrease, Mr. Fullerton said, but if conditions continued bad and there was a small movement of wheat, the deficit might be greater than estimated. Last year, revenue from moving wheat was the lowest since 1914.

Railways Minister Howe told the committee the government was considering eliminating some of the "ridiculous items" now helping build up the capital structure of the railway.

CAVE-IN DEBATE STARTS DUEL TALK

Charges of Lack of Inspection Stirs up N. S. Legislators

Halifax, April 30 (CP)—An unheralded debate on the Moose River gold mine cave-in became so bitter that "politics or even worse" were mentioned in the staid old Nova Scotia legislature.

Col. Gordon S. Harrington, opposition leader, charged the government knew a mill was being operated at Moose River and the mine should have been inspected. If the government did not know about the mill, then it was being operated "against the law". In his opinion the government had made political capital out of the heroic rescue effected by the miners.

Premier MacDonald declared the Mines Department had no knowledge of anything irregular in regard to the operation of the mine and had no knowledge of the suggestion that pillars supporting the roof had been removed. He flatly denied accusations the government had used the dramatic rescue to further political objectives.

The word-battle was started in the House yesterday by Hon. Michael Dwyer, Minister of Mines, who asked the opposition leader if he had made statements attributed to him in comment on the mine cave-in published in Toronto newspaper.

"Shot From Ambush".

The story quoted Col. Harrington as "reaffirming his threats" for a thorough investigation into the cave-in disaster, attacking government for its handling of the rescue work, and hinting dismissals of government officials would arise from an investigation.

Col. Harrington refused to give a "categorical answer" to the question. He replied he had not realized he was speaking for publication when two Toronto reporters approached him. Declaring the reading of the report was "a form of ambush" the opposition leader said rules of the House required he be given a copy of the clipping in advance before being asked to speak on it.

He went on to say from the time the mine was dewatered in January until the date of the collapse no inspection of the property had been carried out by the Department of Mines.

Lack of Inspection Charged.

Furthermore, a mill was operating on the property prior to the cave-in. The law required the mill be registered. It was the duty of the department to have seen that the mine was inspected.

Col. Harrington said if the department did not know of the operation of the mill then the mill was operating illegally. "Perhaps the Minister of Mines will tell me if he knew there was a mill operating?"

Mr. Dwyer: "The honorable gentleman has not answered my question. I have asked him if the statements credited to him in this newspaper clipping are his."

Col. Harrington: "And I'm telling him that his department knew there was a mill operating at Moose River."

Muddled Through Trade Crisis to World Leadership

San Francisco, April 30 (CP)—Sound financial policies adopted three years ago are responsible for Great Britain's "muddling through" recent trade crisis to world leadership, in the opinion of O. Howard Ferguson, recent Canadian High Commissioner to London and former Premier of Ontario.

Mr. Ferguson, who arrived here yesterday on the last lap of a world cruise which took him to all parts of the British Empire, declared the activity of the Mother Country was reflected in all parts of the Empire.

"There are no other countries in the world where business is as good. Great Britain leads and Canada and South Africa run her a close second," he said.

The former Ontario Premier said he planned to go back to his birthplace, a Scots farm outside Ottawa, at the end of the cruise. He denied that he planned to re-enter politics, said he wanted to go to a place where he could "think things out."

One of the reasons for farm failures in Canada, Mr. Ferguson believes, was due to the cultivation of too much ground. His 35-acre farm had paid him a net profit of $1,000 per year for the past 20 years.

Col. Harrington said if the department did not know of the operation of the mill then the mill was operating illegally. "Perhaps the Minister of Mines will tell me if he knew there was a mill operating?"

Mr. Dwyer: "The honorable gentleman has not answered my question. I have asked him if the statements credited to him in this newspaper clipping are his."

Col. Harrington: "And I'm telling him that his department knew there was a mill operating at Moose River."

Edward the Protector was produced at the Collegiate Institute and at Queen's University. After its success at Kingston the author was asked to write another, and "The Amateur" was also presented by the Dramatic Club. The Review in criticism spoke of the good dialogue and humour of this comedy. A survey of literature in Canada is being undertaken by the journal as a future enterprise.

Weddings

HART—SPRUNG

On Wednesday, April 29th, a very pretty wedding took place in Trinity United Church Parsonage, Cobourg, when Ila Gertrude, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Sprung of Belleville became the bride of Wilbert Nelson Hart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Hart, of Napanee. Rev. Wendell Woodgett, B.A., performed the ceremony. The young couple were attended by Mr. Merritt Hart and Miss Jean Sprung, sister of the bride, both of Belleville. The bride was beautifully gowned in blue with accessories to match, and wore a corsage of sweet peas and rose buds. The bridesmaid was becoming in a blue ensemble.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the party adjourned to meet downstairs for luncheon, at which toasts were proposed to the bride and also to the groom's parents who were celebrating that day their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. Suitable gifts were presented at the table to the bride, the bridesmaid and groomsman.

The happy couple left by auto to spend their honeymoon in the United States. On their return they will reside in Belleville.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

ADVICE TO THE ... ...

By Beatrice Fairfax.

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Is your license snug; Slackward, turn backward, oh, time in your flight?" If it is, and you're a young person, cryin' for the "good old times" you've heard of, but really know nothing about, you're apt to be left stranded when the bus stops for the happy voyagers leave the shore.

Young men and women, and more particularly men, spend some of the most valuable years of their lives looking for something which is as extinct as the dinosaur, and being disappointed because they can't find it. The following letter is an example:

"Miss Fairfax:

"I've worked hard, and my income is about $6,000 a year. I am very anxious to marry, if I could only find the right girl, but it looks as if she has ceased to exist. I don't, you see, want anyone but one who knows anything about politics, or has had college education, but I should like a sweet girl a wife who has never gone through high school.

"My mother looked up to my father as her lord and master, and his lightest word was law. The neighbors said he was a hard man, and maybe he was, but she obeyed him.

"I don't want to establish a home for one of these modern He-Women who hold radical views, walk by cigarettes, know about drinks, and use bad language. Those I want my wife to wear an apron always when she's at home, a pretty one of course, and to look her prettiest during the day. An apron I consider a badge of womanliness.

"I've been in love with several girls, only to have, and suffered cruelly when I broke with them. But I did not want a woman of the type represented to be my wife or the mother of my children.

"Do you think I'm asking too much, in hoping for a wife who knows my dear mother?

"Bachelor."

I really believe, my dear man, if you got a wife according to those specifications you would not like her. She wouldn't fit into the modern picture. And much as we may wail about it, time goes on, and we have to keep up with the clock.

Married for better or worse to a woman such as you describe as your ideal, I believe you'd feel as queer and conspicuous as if you walked downtown in the cave hat and breeches of George Washington's day.

Good rods, telephones, bathtubs, the movies have about eliminated the woman who regarded her husband's lightest word as law. Such ladies were like the carbon copies of a not-very-interesting original. In the place of these modern man—if he chooses wisely—has a true companion, a woman whose comradeship is an inspiration.

And even admirably knocks at the door, as it did pretty frequently in the earlier years of the depression, it is not unlikely that the modern wife with brains experience may be able to turn her hand to something which will help the family.

Humor is one of the great—if not the greatest—assets of modern life, and a girl such as you describe as your ideal would be woefully lacking in humor.

There are millions of modern girls, alert and capable, who want husbands, homes and babies as much as you do, but for one of these Doubtless she'll agree to wear an apron as a bit of domestic property.

Good Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Wedding Details

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married at home at a small informal wedding at 6 o'clock in the afternoon, with a wedding supper and reception later in the evening. I intend wearing a simple afternoon dress, ankle length, and prays.

1.—With a dress of this description, are gloves and a hat necessary?

2.—Should the bride's mother and sisters wear hats?

3.—Which would be more preferable—an arm bouquet or a corsage?

4.—If the wedding is at five o'clock and a wedding supper is served immediately after, what hour would it be proper to send out the reception?

5.—How should the invitations to the reception be worded, and would this type of writing paper be suitable?

6.—When are the announcements sent out and how are they worded?

Bride-to-be.

1.—With your simple afternoon dress you would not wear gloves. Whether or not you wear a hat depends on your own choice, on whether you think that the harmony of your costume would be complete without it. Materials of afternoon hats this year are especially lovely that you might like to wear a graceful hat of soft horsehair or lace or something of that kind, or a combination of materials, such as horsehair and straw and lace. But if you would not especially enjoy wearing a hat, it isn't necessary to wear one.

2.—The bride's mother, since she is the hostess, doesn't wear a hat. The bride's sisters may or may not as they wish.

3.—Again it's according to your own choice whether you carry a bridal bouquet or wear a corsage. At a house wedding, it's easier to wear a corsage . . . and more decorative to carry a lovely bouquet.

4.—The hour of your reception depends on your plans for leaving on your wedding journey. Right o'clock, eight-thirty, nine o'clock, any of these hours would probably be about the most convenient hour.

5.—The type of letter-paper on which your note to me would be appropriate for us for the invitations. These invitations would be written by your mother, to read something like this:

Dear Jane:

Dear Jack are to be married here at our home on Tuesday, the first of May, with the relatives present. In the evening, at nine o'clock, we are inviting some close friends to come to the house for an informal gathering, to say "Good Wishes", and it would make us all very happy if you, Jane, would be with us. Do say "yes", please!

Dearest love, and the hope of welcoming you on the first of May.

Affectionately.

6.—You should tell all ready with the announcements at the day of the wedding, so that, directly after the ceremony has been performed, they may be mailed. This is the usual way.

Recreation Is Aid to Study

But Any Type of Play Must Be Satisfying, Says Miss Grenaelle

(By Lisa. Grenaelle)

The head of the school made it a rule that no boy whose marks were below a certain figure could play on the football team.

Maurice's parents objected, and were not very sympathetic when they were informed that he couldn't play football.

It sounds fair enough, doesn't it? But in this case it was a serious menace to Maurice. You see, Maurice didn't care about anything much except football—just then. The ambition of his life was to play on the football team. He knew he must, if he, too, if it weren't for that rule.

Of course, it ought to have made Maurice work, so hard that the marks would have risen to meet the necessary requirements. But it does not always work that way.

Lost His Spirit

It wasn't that Maurice sulked, or that he didn't try. It was just that his disappointment was so great that it had taken the heart out of him. It didn't seem to have any fight left; just moped about as if he were only half alive, sort of half paralyzed, mentally and physically.

Yes, football can do that to you, just the same as love, or your first broken slipper. It can make you fail sure of, or being a boor at your first dance. It simply removes all courage, with one short jab.

You see, Maurice was born to be a quarterback, just the way some of the rest of us are born to be sailors or lighthouse keepers. It was there that he wasn't anything—in his own eyes, and those of his fellow students. You just had to look at him—head erect, body lithe, longed on the football field and nowhere else.

But he wasn't allowed on the football field, so he just thumped around with a great, aching, melancholy fellow, hailed by the illustrious name of "Softball".

Changed Tactics

And then someone, maybe a female relative or perhaps an old uncle—it might have been a person—bought a football for Maurice before the horse for a change—some hopes prefer to put the cart before the horse—and Maurice play football on the throw, that his mates then would improve.

The head of the school took a bit of persuading. And it took Maurice several months to become a real football player. Right now he wouldn't have believed it possible, but Maurice owes every bone to leading his class. You see, boys are really human beings in disguise. And frustration, which in some cases means unhappiness, retards their digestion and paralyzes their brains. Just the way it would ours.

To get the best work out of a laborer, a housewife or a schoolboy, the conditions, if not ideal, must be at least good as well as there be and efficiency, the laborer, the housewife or the schoolboy must be healthy and reasonably happy. Each must be granted his own molecule of importance.

JOHN STREET Y. W. GUILD

On Monday evening the Young Women's Guild of John Street Church held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Wm. Hunter, Albert Street, Mrs. Alan Graham the president, took charge of the business. Among the interesting reports was a very satisfactory one which showed the financial success of the Old English Fair. The devotional period was beautifully and briefly taken by Miss Marjorie Lashbrook. Her theme was "A New Vision" as shown in the tenth chapter of Isaiah. A stock-taking sheet for summing up the work of the Guild was the basis of a clever discussion led by Mrs. Bews and Miss Templeton. Mrs. Mills gave a short introduction to the subject for discussion at the May meeting A short paper on Dr. Kagawa, whose coming to Belleville is awakening much interest, was read by Mrs. Graham. The meeting closed with the usual social half hour.

W.M.S. EXECUTIVE MEETS AT TRENTON

Officers Chosen For Coming Term, Reports of Work Submitted

The Spring meeting of the 8th of Quinte Conference Branch Executive of the Woman's Missionary Society was held in Trenton in King Street United Church this week.

Girl's Hands, Arms Require Good Care, Too

Beautiful shoulders are an important part of the composition of feminine pulchritude. The skin surface should be satin smooth, free of blemish. Such a condition will come through the friction of frocks. The way they are carried means a lot to chic appearance.

If shoulders are rounded or undeveloped, try the bird flying exercise. Skip along on the toes, waving the arms wing-fashion. Place now and then, place the hands on the hips and take ten long, deep inhalations.

Picton Masons Urged to Cherish Lodge's History

Picton, May 1—Right Worshipful Brother W. M. Logan of Hamilton, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodges of Canada in the Province of Ontario, warned 350 Masons present in Picton Armories last evening to celebrate the 125th anniversary of Prince Edward Lodge, No. 14, A.F. & A.M., that a 125 years' history carried with it a tremendous responsibility and danger.

To lean on past glories was to forget the world conditions changing and if individuals and institutions didn't meet these conditions they would stagnate and decline, he said. He urged the members of the local lodge treasure its history, but direct its attention to the changing conditions which have so great a bearing upon the future.

The Armouries was appropriately decorated with flowers and Masonic emblems, in colored electric lights. Approximately fifty-nine men

Falconbridge Sees Brisk Outlook For Nickel and Copper Demand

In an official report to shareholders presented with the statement of the first quarter of the year, Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd. declares that the company's British outlook continues to be presented for the marketing of our products.

Recent sessions, particularly in New York, have again demonstrated that there are two sides to the market. After the prolonged rise in Wall Street of the past fifteen months, some traders had begun to think that a "new era" was in the making. The current weakness should serve as a corrective to any movement based on the fundamentals and lay the foundation for another sustained rise, assuming, of course, that business conditions warrant it.

Nothing has happened in the past week to warrant a sudden reversal of trend. American financial writers have conceived to advance numerous reasons to explain the decline, such as the passing of the Tax Bill, the apparent Leftist victory in France, the failure of the League of Nations to adjust the Italo-Ethiopia affair. But the fact remains no doubt that many traders and investors have very substantial profits in Wall Street and when the market started slipping, a large majority of them endeavoured to cash in on what profit they had left. With the short interest small, buyers were comparatively few and sharp reactions took place.

Foreign ownership of Canadian industries has increased considerably in recent years. In manufacturing it is estimated to own less than 30 percent of the total natural wealth, while it is stated that Canadian capital controls at least 90 percent of the securities of all enterprises located on Canadian soil. Capital investments in Canada have increased from $3,-794,000,000 in 1916 to $9,918,516,000 in 1926, the latter being due almost entirely to the increase in American investments which have risen from $604,466,000 to $3,988,-281,000, while British investments have risen only from $2,711,841,000 to $2,825,680,000 in the same period.

Taking the post-war period alone, from 1919 to 1926, the rate of production in Canada has increased 70 percent compared with 19 percent in the United States. The general upward trend in such may be read in the fact that more than south of the border. This fact has obviously constituted the chief attraction for American investments in Canadian securities, as the anticipated trend of increase should bring higher average returns from properly selected securities.

Indicative of the changing spirit of the moment is the manner in which gold mining stocks have returned to favor, some of the senior Canadian gold producers having scored sharp gains of late. The situation in Germany and France strongly suggests devaluation there. Whether there are strong grounds for not for believing the dollar has not seen the last of depreciation in the United States, there are some individuals who are looking for a hedge and are not satisfied that they can find it in other than gold shares. The trouble with many investors is that they have been bought by two classes of buyers, those looking for inflation and those expecting sound recovery. Between the two, the general position of the market has suffered. Gold shares, at least, harbor only one class of bulls—those who believe the unorthodox financial policies of Washington will be followed further.

New York brokers report the averages would have to go considerably lower before bringing out any general margin calls, for the most part traders still have a good cushion in spite of the decline already recorded. Some market observers contend that this situation merely means that the process of shaking out the margin trader will be more prolonged than in the past. In other words, the full technical correction of the old days may be expected to develop in any event and regardless of the different margin status, the only difference, according to this view, is the time element.

Investors are now being presented with an opportunity of acquiring sound equities which in the past, afford satisfactory returns.

Imperial Oil Meeting Lasted But Twelve Minutes

The annual meeting of the shareholders of Imperial Oil Limited which was held in Barola on Wednesday lasted but twelve minutes. The directors took no action in respect to dividends—this matter was deferred until a later date, as the Budget will be brought down on Friday, at the moment's duty on gasoline is expected to be lowered.

A Reminder

This is the day that old man taxpayer will total his and the matter is brought home forcibly to him that the Dominion of Canada has several important problems that require attention. Of course, one of the annual duty of making out an Income Tax Return. By the time he completes this document he will fully realize why we have the deficits. April 30th is the date when the last call is sounded for these returns.

Dominion Stores

The impression that has taken place so far this year in the affairs of Dominion Stores Ltd. is gratifying to the present day management. Sales for the first sixteen weeks of this year amounted to $5,839,824 as compared with $5,362,243 in 1935. The increase amounted to $507,429 or a gain of 9.42 per cent. Considering the chain store industry, especially on the island of Montreal are far from satisfactory, as competition remains keen. For some unaccountable reason business with these stores during the last fortnight has fallen off.

Cochrane Injured by Foul Ball; Tigers are Without the Services of Greenberg Also 'World's Champions Hit Hard by Injury Lesson, Wash. ington Won

PAUL DEAN WINS

Scores Close in National as Pitchers Bear Down; Pearson Winner

(By Andy Clarke)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Mickey Cochrane, batting manager of Detroit, Tigers, awoke today with reason for sour reflection on the latest twists of fate.

The plucky manager, who led his team to baseball's highest glory last year, finds now the lamelled way of yesterday can turn quickly into the thorny low road of today. The season has been one bad break after another as far as the Tigers are concerned and that team takes the field today with neither Cochrane nor his ace thumper, Hank Greenberg, active on the premises.

Cochrane was hit by a foul in the losing game against the Senators yesterday and his instep was so bruised he was expected to be out of action for six weeks. This is the third time in the young season that Cochrane has been forced out of action by physical disability.

A ninth inning single, that Jake Powell slugged down the third baseline, scored Buddy Myer with the run that gave the Senators an 8-7 victory. The Senators committed a half dozen errors but still were effective enough to carry off the honors.

Scores were fairly close in the National League where several fine mound performances were turned in but most of the fingers fared badly in the younger circuit.

Monte Pearson somewhat justified the judgment of the Yankees' brains department when he pitched the Yanks to an 8-1 victory over the Indians with Allen opposing him.

Poor Washington and two Detroit flingers saw action in their game but real mound parades were staged in the Browns-Athletics and White Sox-Red Sox encounters where a total of 14 roundsmen performed. The Athletics belted over the Browns 15-8 with 26 hits ringing off the hickory while the Red Sox continued their heavy clouting with a 16-4 conquest of the White Sox in which 31 safeties were made. The Browns used five pitchers in an attempt to stem the Mackmen's attack.

Paul, the younger of the Dean brothers, accounted for his first victory of the season 3-2 although the Giants outhit the Cardinals 11-3. Joe Moore of the Giants had a big day at bat with four safeties, one a two-bagger.

Van Carleton of the Cubs shaded Dutch Brandt of the Dodgers in the closest mound duel of the day, an engagement that went 11 innings before the Cubs won by the score of 2 to 1. Carleton allowed seven hits and Brandt four more as both hurlers went the distance.

Manager MacPayden pitched five hit ball as the Reds were downed by Reds 3-1. Bill Brubaker, subbing at third base, walloped a homer to give the Pirates a 6-5 victory over the Phillies. The hit came in the sixth inning with two on.

Dick Bleeker's double, Les Scarsella batted a homer in the seventh for the other Leaf tally.

Chagnon was nicked for 15 blows consisting a pair of four-baggers by George Savino but his mates bunched their 14 blows in large gobs. They drove Burke to cover with four runs in the fifth and pounded Al Benton for three more tallies in the seventh before Tomas de la Cruz checked them. Fresco Thompson, Montreal captain, had a homer among three blows while Savino, Ernie Jolly of the Senators and Hal King of the Royals also figured prominently in the clouting with three hits each.

POORLY ATTENDED

Weatherman Fails To Co-operate, One Game Postponed

By The Associated Press

While the International League's second opening day brought disappointment so far as attendance was concerned, the pitchers still are able to do a little odd pleading.

Lacking the co-operation of the weather man, three games postponed their only 17,000 customers, about as many as were expected at Montreal alone. The Rochester-Syracuse clash was rained out, putting Red Wings on even terms with their rivals so far as openings were concerned.

Frank "Pete" Nekola of Toronto Maple Leafs, turned in the day's best performance when he held the almost invincible Newark Bears to three hits for a 3-0 triumph. Leon Chagnon, of Montreal Royals, although hit freely, tacked up his third straight victory beating Albany 9-6. Three Buffalo sluggers had a share in a weird batting performance as the Bisons bowed 9-3 to the second-place Baltimore Orioles.

Nekola not only scored his second shutout victory for Toronto but began the downfall of his southpaw rival, Kemp Wicker. In the sixth he singled, got to third on a pass and a force-out and breezed home on a single by Ossie Bluege.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

On Saturday the semi-annual meeting of the O.B.A. is slated to be held in the local Y.M.C.A. and it is expected that all five clubs comprising the loop will be duly represented. The Oshawa sports writer-critic in his comments on both Belleville and Kingston will be "back" in the league. We wonder if he will add that, "All in the league" business? To our knowledge neither Belleville nor Kingston have been out of the Quinte loop for a good many years, which is more than can be said of the Motor City club.

Tonight the final effort to organize an executive to function as the head of local senior baseball circles will be made at the "Y". All four local service clubs have agreed to send a representative from the club from a business point and will have their delegates present at this meeting. Unless some live business men are urged to come out and assist in the formation and organizing of the club also. It is believed a few fully interested or "home brews" can be mustered and all that is needed now is the moral support of the rest.

At the semi-annual meeting of the O.B.A. two Paramount trophies will be unveiled, the matter of that old bone of contention, the schedule, will be the matter of a schedule. Local delegates will have to be appointed to the O.B.A. so that the latter can be in a position to voice the sentiments of the players in the league, their needs. One other matter, that has been mooted of late is the question for transfer of "Speedy" St. Louis, who is residing in town. The O.B.A. in the past few years have had to contend with the question of transfers and it is to be hoped that this will again until the latter part of May, as no league rules in connection is in the hands of the O.B.A. tonight his services may not be available for the opening of the season.

When it comes to the system of umpires in use employed, we have always been in favour of neutral officials. The clubs contend that the outside umpires cost too much, but so often this we contend that the men are most satisfied when neutral officials are used and that in the long run neutral umpires are actually no dearer than the present system in vogue.

It has been pointed out that some fans refuse to attend ball games simply because they are against the home umpire system. If neutrals umpire system was employed, of course, that would lessen the expenditures of the home clubs, but it is argued by some, that larger crowds would swell the grandstands. Last year we suggested that one neutral umpire, the umpire-in-chief, be neutral, while the base umpire could be supplied by either the visiting or home club are a lower rank, but the clubs finally employed the old bone and home umpire system. It is to be hoped that we can see their way clear to remedy this old sore on Saturday, however.

Some weeks ago President Sweazion informed us he had received an application from Ty Tyson, Oshawa, to umpire in the O.B.A. in this coming season. The fans will well remember the scrappy Tyson, when he used to catch for Oshawa and later when the battery of Dainty and Tyson was a by-word in the O.B.L. Tyson should undertand the game sufficiently well to make a fairly good official. Then again there are a number of ex-players from the O.B.L., who, if they were approached, might be induced to commence in the field or umpiring. Bringing back these old players, who were well known in years past, might also act as a stimulant to interest the fans. Of course we are not suggesting that just because a veteran ball player was a star that he would automatically make a good umpire, but there are some ex-players to do the understand the playing rules sufficiently well enough to make good officials.

Such men as Geo. Ada, "Peeny" Mills, Al Heckman, Ty Tyson, Del Cherry, Dick Turpin and maybe a few others should not only make fairly good officials, but add to the color of the game. The bringing back the glamour of such diamond celebrities would materially assist in the promotion of the game in all towns composing the circuit.

Doug Fraser, who buried the Napanee Cubbards to two intermediate final play-downs, has us up residence in Belleville. If an intermediate team is organized locally, Fraser would be a decided asset.

Those interested in the formation of a pre-season softball league are invited to gather at the "Y" tonight when efforts will be made to endeavour to re-organize the old Wall Street softball loop. This league will only operate until about the 24th of May, long enough to give the teams a little preseason training and a little amusement.

Matchmaker Jack Corcoran signed Al Dunlop and Chief Lynx to contracts yesterday and will toss these two local favourites into the ring as the preliminary bout for next Tuesday nights' show. For the past year local wrestling fans have wanted to get a glimpse of these two mat-villians in a ring at the same time and it remained to have Mr. Corcoran finally make this ten-strike. The bout should be a natural. For the semi-final bout another good choice was made when Andy Mora was signed to meet Ed Meake, the Ohio State champion. The final bout will be announced later but the first two named should attract the largest wrestling crowd ever seen in the Belleville Arena.

Mickey Cochrane seems to have drawn the wrath of Old Lady Luck down upon his shoulders. Recently Hank Greenberg was forced out of the Tigers' lineup with a fractured wrist, while yesterday Manager Cochrane sustained injuries that will keep him on the bench for a few days. Of course the Tigers might fare better have their aforementioned pair of injuries early in the season than perhaps next October.

The sub-committee of the O.B.A.A. will gather in Toronto today when Secretary-Treasurer George "Bing" Miller and Ken Biddle, the two Brantford players now residing in Oshawa, will be re-opened.

TERRIERS WHIP INDIANS

ORILLIA, Ont., May 1.—(CP)—Orillia lacrosse fans last night got their first opportunity to see the team that will defend the Mann Cup and Canadian championship in 1936 here tonight. In the first game of the season the Terriers whipped Hamilton Indians 9-5.

With only six of their 1935 playing men, Terriers made a good impression in their first start. Two Orillia goals were scored in the first frame, Kelly, a veteran, getting the ball in close to count, and Ernie Batting, a newcomer, 16-year-old junior lacrosse boy, a fast drive from Davis, who recently came here from Niagara Falls, to tally.

Kentucky Derby Expected to Attract Record Attendance, Brevity is Still the Favorite Highways Choked With Swelling Traffic, New Record Assured

60,000 EXPECTED

Canadian Entry, Indian Broom, Horse of Mystery

(By Orlo Robertson)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Louisville, Ky. May 1.—(AP)—Their last work is now a matter of history, 16 three-year-olds, one of them a filly, jested in their stalls today as the Derby fever tightened its grip on this thoroughbred capital in preparation for the 62nd running of the turf classic at Churchill Downs tomorrow.

From the highways and byways came the racing clans in the greatest throngs since the post-war depression.

Close to 60,000 are expected to pack the quarter-mile long grandstand and overflow into the flower-ed-covered infield tomorrow. The spectacle will be so great, however, many will get only a fleeting glimpse of the horses as they match strides over one and one-quarter miles for the purse of $40,000.

The horses went through short workouts this morning and then retired to their closely guarded stalls to wait the call to "post and saddle" tomorrow at about 6.30 p.m. (E.S.T.).

Joseph Early Widener's Brevity remained the home to beat. Winner or five of his six races, the Bay flash has come up to the classic in perfect condition, its equalled what was then the world record of 1.48 1-5 for one and one-eighth miles in winning the Florida Derby.

Widener has never won the Derby but this appears to be his year. If the track is fast, Brevity is expected to be held at 7 to 5 or 4-5 odds. If the going is heavy, he'll probably still retain his position as the favorite but at longer odds.

The track was sloppy for yesterday's races. The weather man predicts local showers tomorrow but holds out a 50-50 chance the sun will shine at Derby time.

If Brevity is beaten, the consensus is that it will be by one of three horses—William Woodward's Oliveville, Morton L. Schwartz' Bold Venture or the Rosmar Stable's Granville Slam. The latter probably will rival Brevity for favoritism if the track is muddy for he ran his best, two-year-old races over heavy tracks.

Of the others, A. C. Taylor's Indian Broom is the big question mark. Possessed of a world of speed the former Plater lowered the world record for one and one-eighth miles to 1:47 3-5 in beating Top Row at Tanforan. Then, he had only 94 pounds on his back at the time but since arriving at the Downs he's fairly burned up the track in morning workouts. The big question is whether he'll be carrying 126 pounds over the distance. Canadian Horse Hall of Famer's high weight with ease before but the races were shorter.

LENGTHY RECORD BROKEN

Lindsay, May 1.—For the first time in many years the doesn't know how many) James Bonall, 67-year-old baseball fan of Lindsay, missed the opening ball game of Toronto Maple Leafs. He stated yesterday he was going to see Connerman promised snow, so he was disappointed when the weather turned out so beautiful. For the past few years his presence in the stand at the opening game has been noted by the Toronto papers.

O'DONNELL LOSES, WILL HANG MAY 5

Only Hope Now is in Plea For Executive Clemency

Ottawa, May 1.— The last hope of Harry O'Donnell to escape the gallows rested today with executive clemency.

The convicted slayer of Ruth Taylor, Toronto newspaper, whose violated corpse was found in the ravine on Nov. 1 last, was granted leave to appeal his case. Justice L. A. Cannon, of the Supreme Court of Canada, who heard argument by O'Donnell's counsel yesterday, delivered judgment rejecting the application.

In the normal course of things O'Donnell's case will come before the Cabinet. Should clemency not be extended, he will hang on May 5.

Before Justice Cannon in Chambers, W. W. McKeown, the convicted man's counsel, argued for nearly two hours. He asked that the judgment of the Provincial Appeal Court be set aside on the ground that it conflicted with justice, delivered in the case some years ago by Chief Justice Greenshield of the Quebec Court of Kings' Bench (Appeal Division).

This was the Silleki case, previous judgment on which was set aside because the court was not agrieved that the accused had been properly warned before he made an incriminating statement. Mr. McKeown cited this as a "like" case, since, according to his argument, statements made to Detective-Sergeant McIlraith of Toronto, prior to his being formally placed under arrest, had been used as evidence against him at the trial.

The trial Judge had admitted such statements, and his act in so doing had been sustained by the Appeal Court.

Justice Cannon, however, noted a discrepancy in the two sets of facts Silleki had been warned when first taken into custody and after that had made the incriminating statement. O'Donnell had made the statement before being taken into custody.

If there was conflict in two "like" cases, or if there had been dissenting opinion in the Appeal Court's judgment, defending counsel might establish this point; but the cases cited did not appear to be similar, and the Appeal Court had been unanimous, his Lordship said.

Having taken the argument under consideration, Justice Cannon late this afternoon delivered his judgment, which negatived O'Donnell's application.

I. A. Humphries of the Ontario Attorney-General's Department represented the Crown.

Bajoria recently offered to "enrich beyond wildest dreams" anyone able to make him sleep. Since then he has been deluged with advice from all parts of the world. Neither he nor those in his confidence would say whether the nap came as a result of the advice received. Bajoria is shown shortly before the strange illness came upon him.

Wide Scope of Activities Of Red Cross is Revealed

In view of the local Red Cross annual campaign being conducted at present in the community, a recent newspaper interview with Dr. F. W. Routley, director of the Ontario Division, Canadian Red Cross Society, is of interest, as giving the wider scope of this Society's work and its hopes for the future.

Dr. Routley stated: "After a man had put 15 years of life's blood into this enterprise, it is a source of great satisfaction to know that the things we have been able to do among the sick, disabled and needy would never have been done but for Red Cross—on the other hand, the inability to extend the work as we would like to is a matter of constant regret and sorrow to all of us."

"Such as what?" the reporter asked him. Instantly Dr. Routley said: "We'd like to establish soldiers' clubs all over Canada for disabled soldiers, like the orvs we have in Toronto and London at the present time, where men who have come out of shabby, inadequate homes and who, through war or other disabilities are unable to live in decency, can find peace and comfort."

"What next?"

"We'd like to establish at every backwoods centre outpost hospitals, so that we might render immediate service to the sick and injured, just as we did in the case of the Moose quinquplets."

Dr. Routley explained that it was to the Red Cross nurse at Bonfield, 13 miles from Callander, that he first turned when the quintuplets were born. "There you have an ideal example of the type of work Red Cross can do, and is doing every day of the year, less spectacularly possibly but just as necessary, in every one of the 27 Red Cross outposts throughout Ontario."

"What is the policy of the Red Cross in cases of emergency —say a man losing his house and family by fire?"

"We don't handle isolated cases of disaster. Our policy on that is quite definite. We feel that isolated disasters should be dealt with by the social agencies in the community where the disaster occurred. But where a community is partially wiped out by a disaster, and the operations of the local welfare agencies hampered by lack of staff or funds or equipment, there is where Red Cross steps in."

Right this very day, Dr. Routley said, a 25-bed hospital, fully equipped, stands at Red Cross headquarters, ready to be shipped at a moment's notice to the scene of any major disaster.

"How does the work of the Canadian Red Cross compare with similar bodies in other countries?"

"We were the first country in the world to establish outpost hospitals. We were the first to establish Visiting Housekeepers in families where the mother was ill, or unable to care for her family. The Junior Red Cross, with 128,000 members in Ontario alone, was started in Canada, and is now one of the great forces in the promotion of personal and community health."

Dr. Routley continued to describe the work of the Red Cross Dental Coach in northern Ontario, the Red Cross Home Nursing Course, through which some 38,000 Ontario women had passed, and he told of the thousands of crippled children assisted by Junior Red Cross, and of the nutrition work throughout Ontario.

"But we haven't begun to cover the field," he said. "That is the reason, now that depression clouds are lifting somewhat, that we are asking Ontario citizens for their extra generosity this year, so that our services for the sick, disabled and distressed may be extended to many additional citizens whose needs demand our help."

Little Benny's Note Book

Sam Cross was sitting on his front steps looking unsatisfied and saying, Gell darn the luck, this is the last time, believe me, I'll show them.

Who, what, what's a matter? I said, and he said, Everything's a matter and this is the last time you'll see me on these front steps or even in this nayborhood, because for the simple reason I'm going to run away from home tonite and you can have the satisfaction of helping me do it.

G, how? I said, and he said, Come around after supper and whissle for me and I'll have my things all packed ready to go, and then keep on whissling and my father will tell me to go to the front door and make you shut up because if there's one thing I dont care for it's whissling, and I'll pretend to go and do it, only instead of that I'll be on my way out forever.

Well why cant you just wawk out by yourself? I said, and he said, How can I, I have to have a good excuse, don't I?

And he made me promise, and after supper I snuck out and went up to his house and started to whissle kind of low and misterious and nothing happened so I started to whissle a little louder, and nothing still didn't happen so I started to whissle all my mite, and after a while I didn't have any whissle left to whissle any way at all, so I yelled like Sam, hay Sam, a while and then I thawt, O well heck I'll ring the bell and be done with it.

Wich I did and somebody opened the front door and it was Sam, saying, Good nite what did you want to go and ring the bell for, now you've went and spoilt the whoe thing.

Why, cos? I said, and Sam said, Shh, do you want them to hear us?

And he quick shut the door again and I went, home, thinking. Darn that guy, he wunt think I'll believe anything.

Wich I prilly near will.

Trade Relations With Great Britain Discussed Shortly, Says Dunning

Loans to provinces under various relief acts had now reached $116,500,000, having been increased during the last fiscal year by $42,304,000. The Government's policy for meeting maturing obligations would quickly make the Dominion, the Provinces' largest single creditor, a condition which he thought would not the minister said. There was no longer any satisfactory authority to loan to the provinces for other than relief costs, nor would any be considered apart from the loan council scheme.

Other loans and investments which had to be provided for during the year in addition to the $42,304,000 for relief, were in connection with the Railways, Farm Loan Board, Canada Grain Act, Soldier Settlement and Housing. Bringing these total loans and investments to $60,400,000.

Loan Flotations during the year reached $500,000,000 with a consistent lowering of interest rates which averaged 4.15 per cent. for the fiscal year as compared to 4.15 a year ago. In this connection it was shown that taking an index figure of 100 in 1926, interest charges in Canada had dropped in 1936 to 70.9.

Cross liabilities of the Dominion at the close of the fiscal year, amounted to $3,168,000,000 which after deducting cash and investments, left a net public debt figure of $3,008,000,000, which Mr. Dunning said was an increase of $867,-000,000 in the six years since he presented the last budget of the Dominion.

Ottawa, May 1 (CP)—Following is a summary of Finance Minister Dunning's budget speech, delivered today in the House of Commons.

While there are evidences of recovery, he saw in the distance yet to go and the progress yet to be made the most impressive and at the same time the most distressing features of Canada's economic record, proof, movement, however, was real and steady.

The business cycle was currently establishing a higher level than during this year the economic index of the Bureau of Statistics stood at 91.3, as compared with 94.3 in March, 1933. In Feb. 1933, the lowest point of the depression, the index was 58.2.

For the first three months of the present calendar year manufacturers of all kinds showed an average expansion of 8.5 per cent. Lumber production, the Pacific coast's chief, was over 30 per cent. greater than in 1934, and reached the highest point since 1929.

Agriculture Dark Spot

The dark spot was agriculture which last year suffered climatic hazards, restricted markets and low prices. Total farm revenue in 1935 was $903,000,000, an increase of less than one per cent. over the previous year; but most disappointing was an eight per cent. drop in the value of the principal field crops, chiefly as a result of the severe harvest. Wheat prices were generally higher, but the yield had been low due to rust and frost. The livestock industry had shown considerable improvement.

Cost of money had fallen in March to the lowest point since 1919, probably the lowest on long-term funds in Canadian history.

Low Rates.

Unfortunately these low rates were not available to all borrowers, particularly the most needy who were not usually considered a credit risk worth.

In 1935 the total volume of new issues by all borrowers was about $571,000,000, an increase of $83,000,000 over 1934. Of the total $325,000,000 was for refunding, the balance for new capital purposes.

The financial position of several of the provinces somewhat retarded revival of confidence in the normal functioning of the capital markets. The credit of the three western provinces had been maintained in the last few years by Dominion aid. Unable to borrow economically elsewhere, they had been financed by the Dominion to the extent of $116,-580,000.

This could not continue indefinitely. Efforts had been made to work out a solution of these problems with the result that a method of procedure had been reached. This involved an extension to the field of the Dominion North America Act which would validate existing provincial legislative structures and set up a national loan council system.

Free Movement of Trade.

Turning to Canadian trade, the Minister saw in the conditions of the past few years sufficient to justify the statement that by going slowly in its efforts "to free the channels of international trade and expand markets Canada had not lost any industries."

He reviewed trade bargains already made and said in the near future active negotiations would be entered into with the United States, now in conclusion of trade agreements.

Discussions would soon be started also with the United Kingdom, most important of Canada's customers, with regard to trade relations.

Canada's general trade increase last year was 11 per cent. in value compared with an average of 4.1 per cent. for 34 leading countries.

Trade Expansion Shown.

Imports last year were $603,791,-386,157 greater than in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1935, while exports of Canadian products at $765,813,563 were $108,715,569 greater. Re-exports of foreign goods last fiscal year were $14,441,839, or $5,-782,695 more than in the preceding year.

Total trade last fiscal year was $1,341,605,223 against $1,189,975,201 the previous year. The export balance was $161,600,000. Exports of reports were added the balance would be $233,200,000.

Excerpts from Budget

Ottawa, May 1 (CP)—Excerpts from today's budget speech delivered by Hon. Charles A. Dunning:

"One cannot view the situation fairly without realizing that the government—however gradual—is real and steady, and that the general movement is on a scale of definite strength."

"The upward swing of the business cycle is currently establishing a higher level than during 1935 and generally throughout the industrial and commercial field."

"Every step which helps to provide markets for agriculture brings nearer that day when the foundation timber, receiving more than its present share it costs to produce will in some degree provide, through the allocation of his purchasing power, a sound basis for national prosperity."

"The most distressing feature of our long term clear to everyone, I believe, is the present load making unsecured loans to governments and to go indefinitely."

"We are rapidly reaching—if we have not already reached—the impossible position where the Dominion government of these provincial governments."

"Loan Council" legislation would merely provide machinery which any province might take advantage of if it considered that it is to its benefit once with its own interests."

"Since March 31 the government has not had any statutory authority to make loans or give guarantees to any province."

"It was a matter of great regret to me that the government of Alberta did not see its way clear to accept the conditions under which provincial loans could have been made."

"Canada has moved up from eighth place to sixth place among the nations in total trade."

"I am pleased to be able to report, for the fiscal year just ended, that the government is in full touch with other countries, amounting in value to $1,341,605,000. This figure is an increase of 12.8 per cent. over the previous year."

"Canada has moved up from eighth place to sixth place among the nations in total trade."

RESTORE CREDIT BY LOAN COUNCIL DUNNING PLAN

Minister of Finance Says It Will Help For Stability

INTEREST LOAD CUT

Domestic Economic Situation Benefitted, He Says

Ottawa, May 1 (CP)—Optimism regarding the influence which establishment of the loan council will exercise on the domestic economic situation was voiced today by Finance Minister Dunning in his budget speech. He should provide a method for reducing interest burdens in a way acceptable to creditors, he said.

The minister believed the council would help to restore confidence in the operating provinces might restore their credit and place themselves in a position to meet the heavy requirements for the future in the hope that "this step will be one of the most important factor of confidence play an important part."

"Foreign trade is the very lifeblood of Canada."

"The conclusion of this (Canada-United States) trade agreement is probably the most significant step taken by the United States for years to reverse the trend of economic nationalism."

"It may be expected that steps will be taken in the near future to enter into active negotiations for the consolidation of trade agreements with several important countries."

"I am pleased to be able to report, for the fiscal year just ended, that the government is in full touch with other countries, amounting in value to $1,341,605,000. This figure is an increase of 12.8 per cent. over the previous year."

"Canada has moved up from eighth place to sixth place among the nations in total trade."

"In the past we have too frequently misled ourselves by the form in which our expenditures and counts were presented. We have pointed with pride to a small surplus on ordinary account and we have tended to overlook the importance of large deficits resulting from capital and special expenditures."

Balanced Budget Necessary.

"I have heard from the tactics squarely in the face. If the people of Canada are fully aware of all the facts, I have confidence that they support us in taking the steps necessary to achieve a balanced budget. Government revenues and expenditures must be brought into balance as soon as safely be postponed much longer.

"Our total revenue from taxation and other sources during the past year aggregated $372,100,000. This is $10,229,000 in excess of the total revenue for the preceding fiscal year.

"The revenues from taxes alone amounted to $317,288,000, an increase of $13,845,000 over the preceding year.

"The increase in tax revenue is more than fully accounted for by income tax which yielded $70,700,000 compared with $56,808,000 in 1934-35. This is the highest yield ever received from the income tax, the largest figure for any previous year being that of $69,000,000 in 1921-22. The increase during the past year arises in part from the improvement in individual and corporate incomes, but in part also from the extension of personal income which was imposed for the first time in 1935."

Sales tax revenue increased $4,-533,000 and excise duties $2,228,000 but revenue from other taxes during the year was lower than the previous year.

Customs Duties Down.

The former Minister of Finance had budgeted for an increase from customs duties but instead there was a decrease of from $76,561,000 to $74,600,000. An increase in imports was expected and took place but it was largely confined to non-dutiable items.

The ordinary expenditures for the year have aggregated $373,997,000. This is $14,387,000 in excess of the expenditures for 1934-35. Nevertheless it is $16,000,000 lower than the total of the amounts authorized by vote and statute.

"The substantial reduction below the appropriations is accounted for: in part at least, by the measures taken by the present government when it came into office last October."

Special Expenditures.

Special expenditures rose by $102,-777,000, the highest figure on record. Of this amount nearly half was on unemployment relief, tabulated as follows

	Estimated 1935-36	Actual 1935-36
Direct relief	3,000,000	2,963,000
Grants in aid (from Aug. 1, 1935)	36,274,975
Public Works and other projects	9,851,375
Land settlement relief	176,000
Relief Camps, Department of National Defence	8,212,000
Aid of single homeless unemployed persons	219,000
Transients relief	180,000
Saskatchewan drought relief	4,000,000
Miscellaneous, including administration	313,325
Total	49,409,000

Payments arising out of wheat stabilization and wheat board operations are included in the above for special expenditures heading.

Estimated earnings of the Canadian National Railways improved in 1935 but not enough to enable them to show a net operating profit of $6,800,000 but a cash deficit after interest charges.

Canadian National Steamships and the Canadian National Express, Telegraph and Marine also showed improved earnings.

Assistance to harbor commissions amounted to $5,600,000.

Summarizing Mr. Dunning said: "Adding together ordinary, capital and special expenditures we have a total of all non-active advances to government-owned enterprises, the total net cash requirements of expenditures for which the government was responsible was $534,-291,000.

"The total revenues for the year at $372,100,000 and the total expenditures at $534,291,000 there is an over-all deficit for the last fiscal year of no less than $162,191,000.

Railway Deficit Reduced.

"This, of course, includes into account the railway deficit as well as the capital and special expenditures and makes allowance for special receipts. The railway deficit is the net deficit in the previous year of $116,-134,000. It represents the gap between the total cost of the railways which must be bridged."

Ordinary revenue balance by loans to the four western provinces under Dominion aid totalled $116,580,000 for which the Dominion holds treasury bills bearing interest at 4½ per cent. in 1935, and four per cent thereafter. Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan paid the bulk of interest in cash as it became due but Saskatchewan has paid the bulk of its interest in recent years.

New issues of Dominion obligations in 1935 totalled $571,000,000, 000 exclusive of temporary financing. Of the $325,000,000 were for refunding and the balance, $203,000,-000 representing the net increase in the funded debt. The total borrowings for the year, was for deficit and current purposes.

Lower Interest Rates.

This financing was carried out at lower interest rates than ever before in the history of the country, the average rate of interest on outstanding funded debt and treasury bills was 3.9 per cent. compared with 4.15 per cent. a year ago.

Of the nation's gross liabilities at March 31, 1936, were $3,432,000,000 while active assets were $424,000,000. Net debt was $3,008,000,000 compared with $2,141,000,000 when the government changed in 1930.

25 MILLIONS TO PROFIT AND LOSS

Amount Represents Value of Obsolete Equipment of C. N. R.

Ottawa, May 1 (CP)—An amount of $25,000,000 representing the value of obsolete equipment was charged up against profit and loss by officials of the Canadian National Railways last year, Hon. Common Committee on Railways and Shipping was told today.

The information was supplied by F. K. Morrow, a member of the Board of Directors of the Railway. S. J. Hungerford, its President, was questioned about retirement of obsolete units of obsolete equipment. This was in excess of normal yearly depreciation.

He said elimination of wooden cars on international business and passenger cars on the line largely caused the retirements. A. M. Young (Lib. Saskatoon) asked if the railway had been kept up to proper standard.

Mr. Hungerford replied it had. The main line of the railways was in excellent condition. In respect to some branch lines, where business had declined, it usually had been unnecessary to keep the road up to as high a standard.

'QUINTS' ARE HEARTBREAKERS

men who will leave a lot of broken hearts in their trail.

"The heartbreaking chances of the quints, however, may already be diminishing since they are surrounded too closely by women. Unless men come into girls' lives they usually are still very shy, and they are predisposed to become old maids or bachelors.

"It would be a good plan to distribute a few of the little boys around Callander and let the quints learn to play with them. If they don't start playing with boys soon, and if they do not go to school with boys, the chances of them be honest-to-goodness heartbreakers are increased enormously."

Dr. J. J. B. Morgan Contradicts

Chicago, May 1 (AP)—Dr. John J. B. Morgan, Northwestern University psychologist, commenting on a prediction the Dionne quintuplets stood "a good chance of growing into prematurely and old maids," declared today there was no scientific basis for such a statement.

"The quints are too young to be affected one way or another," he said. "Any future attitudes will merit the opposite sex will be modified by a great many factors during childhood and adolescence."

The heart breaker prediction was made by Dr. Alan Brown Kaplan of Colgate University, who said the quints' surroundings "almost ensure" that the young might make them "manhaters."

Dr. Morgan challenged the Colgate psychologist's statement that "almost ensure" that the quints' surroundings "almost ensure" that the quints' surroundings "almost ensure" that the quints' surroundings

ONE WAY STREET

By JOSEPH McCORD

"I was interested."

"I can imagine. You do play bridge, of course?"

"Not guilty. I used to be able to fumble a game of rummy on rainy days. But contract is a sealed book. I've never had the time for it."

"Then you'll simply be obliged to take it up. I'll arrange a lesson for you very soon."

"Thank you."

At that moment, that seemed the simplest way out. It appeared that Miss Cannon had a fashion of setting things. A restive glance through the doors into the drawing-room furnished Mark with an inspiration. The keyboard of a grand piano was visible.

"I'm fond of music," he suggested. "Why don't you play for me?"

"Is Chicago as provincial as that? There is sure to be something on the radio you would enjoy more than my efforts. Shall I find one for you?"

"I'm sorry."

"Ah, Sturges....."

"Yes, Miss Cannon."

"Will you tell me something?" Edythe leaned forward suddenly.

"If I can."

"You don't like me very well. Why?"

"What makes you ask that?" Mark demanded. He reached for the silver box and offered it to his questioner. She took one, and regarded him inquisitively, watching him steadily as he lighted a cigarette for himself.

"Possibly I shouldn't have asked," Edythe resumed after an uncomfortable silence. "But I'm curious. You've made it so apparent."

"I was not conscious of having been rude," Mark declared. His brow cut a thin thread of smoke.

"But you don't in the least approve of me."

"You're mistaken, I assure you." He snapped the mechanism of the lighter in an irritated fashion, extinguished the resulting flame. What the deuce was the girl getting at now? He waited for her to continue.

"I think I know your opinion of me," she told him evenly. "Plenty of others think the same thing. But you showed it the first time we met. You made up your mind that I was hopelessly rude and arrogant....used to having my own way and fed up with it. Am I right? You needn't be afraid of hurting my feelings."

"You're quite wrong. I've made no estimate of you whatever."

"You would say something like that. You're so proper....so correct. Why can't you be frank? It would be refreshing." Edythe settled herself comfortably among the cushions, somewhat closer to her guest. "You may as well get used to the idea now, my dear. You and I are going to be very good friends."

"I hope so."

"That's better. You see, it really isn't my fault if you've gathered a wrong impression. I dare say I am spoiled. I'll admit I've had almost everything I wanted. In spite of that, I've always moved in a small circle. I'm bored....bored." Her voice trailed away wistfully.

"Kind of course I do not," Mark volunteered helpfully.

"It's hard to explain, when you don't," she sighed. "Do you know I did my best to persuade Dad not to let you leave here....to Gorham, I mean?"

"Was that nice?" Sturges crushed his partly-consumed cigarette in the ash-tray.

"I couldn't bear the idea of a total stranger taking over the store. It was so rude you would be the fussy type.....a go-getter. One of those persons who fairly bristles with statistics, telling us how wrong we were about everything."

"I see. And you've been disappointed."

"Pleasantly," She smiled. "Perhaps I shouldn't tell you this.....but Dad has been almost enthusiastic about you. He admires you that way. He thinks you have remarkably keen judgment and....."

"Was this recently?" Mark interjected, dryly.

"Yes." Edythe seemed to attach no significance to the question. "You can't imagine how relieved I was when I saw you.....to find that you were different."

"That's encouraging."

"I had a feeling at once that you were someone I could talk to. That you would understand. I'm afraid I am putting it badly, but.... It was a disappointment to find that you disliked me so. You didn't give me a chance."

"Please....."

"I know somehow, that you could help me do the things I always have wanted to."

"And what are they?"

"Really worthwhile things. There is so much that you and I might do....together."

The sudden touch of a hand startled Sturges. Fingers crept gently over his. Slim cool fingers. He sat without moving, staring into the fire. For the moment he was held by Edythe's nearness, by the touch of her. He could feel her beauty like some heady wine. The faint perfume.....

"What?" she breathed softly. It was barely a whisper.

The spell was broken. Sturges laughed. A trifle constrainedly.

"Oh, you're making fun of me."

"Indeed I'm not." He turned and met the gray eyes raised reproachfully to his. His gave Edythe's hand a slight pressure as she withdrew it. "I was afraid, that was it."

"Afraid of me....Mark!"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Because you're....rather overwhelming." The answered candidly.

"Then I was right," she said in a low voice. "Tell me. Was it because I didn't want that girl in the store?"

"No."

"I wish I were sure. Because you did go to Dad about it. I'm afraid your kindness to Miss Sawyer will not be appreciated. But it's quite all right."

"A matter of simple justice," he observed quietly.

"You would say that. I am going to make you like me a little."

"I like you now. Very much."

"Do you know you're....funny?" "Am I?" He marveled at her swift change of mood. Her lips were smiling, but he could have sworn tears lurked behind those dusky lashes.

"Very. You need so badly to be taken in hand. Social contacts, among other things. Something tells me you're my mission in life."

Edythe rose abruptly from the couch and strolled to a radio cabinet in one corner of the room.

"Your Chicago is on the air, I dare say."

She smiled at Sturges over her white shoulder.

INSTALMENT IX

When Jean went to the store Monday morning she watched for an opportunity to have a few words with Emory Stewart.

"May I speak to you just a moment?" she asked him, when a glance into the office showed him to be alone at his desk.

"Of course, Jean. Come in. I was going to send for you."

She came directly to her errand.

"Mr. Sturges asked me to stay here with you, Mr. Stewart."

"I know. He took the matter up with our friend and everything's all right, I'm sure. I hope you've decided to remain. You see," he added ruefully, "I would feel very badly if you didn't. I would be to blame."

"Oh, no. I had made up my mind to go, but....something has happened. My father's coming home."

"That's fine! He's been paroled, you mean?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then it seems to me your problem is settled, Jean. You should keep your position by all means."

"I suppose so. But it's going to be pretty difficult.....at first."

"Or what?" Doc demanded. Dick suggested weakly, for he believed the savages were thoroughly capable of penning them in with the beasts. He drew a knife from his pocket, but his fingers trembled so that he had difficulty in opening the blade.

"Lion's or something" Dick suggested weakly, for he believed the savages were thoroughly capable of penning them in with beasts. He drew a knife from his pocket, but his fingers trembled so that he had difficulty in opening the blade.

"All the more reason, then."

"Perhaps I promised Mr. Sturges I wouldn't do anything without letting him know. But, now that this has happened, I thought it would be easier to talk with you."

"Of course, I'm right on with your work and don't worry. I will explain matters to Mr. Sturges. Shall we call it settled?"

"If you think best."

"I do." Stewart tapped thoughtfully on the edge of a desk tray with his pencil. "Jean....!"

"Yes, sir?"

"Do you know when your father will reach home?"

"Mother had a letter Saturday afternoon. It said he would be here Wednesday . . . about noon."

"I see." Stewart frowned thoughtfully, then resumed abruptly. "I've known your father a long time, Jean. You were very close to him."

"Yes, sir . . . I was."

"I wonder if you have tried to imagine just what his homecoming will mean. To him," he added. "He was a very sensitive man, my dear. You must prepare yourself for a change in him . . . perhaps a great change. It's going to be very difficult for him to pick up the threads again."

"I know."

"Wednesday, you say?" Stewart opened a desk drawer and hunted through it. "I was sure I had one somewhere. Here they are. Let's see . . ." The pencil point was searching slowly. "That means he's leaving Edgelaw at eight-forty-three . . . Gascoyne Junction at twelve-two. Jean, there's a train leaving Gorham a little before eleven that meets the southbound somewhere above the junction. Why don't you plan to take that?"

"I don't quite understand."

"I mean for you to be at Gascoyne when your father's train comes in. Meet him and ride down together. I believe it will make all the difference in the world if your father can see some one he loves before he has to face his old surroundings. You're the one he should see because . . . Well, because you have the necessary self-control, for one thing. What do you say?"

"It's getting up!" he whispered. The boys sat now with eyes riveted upon the dark hulk that moved against the back wall. It seemed large and ominous, though it had not yet assumed any definite form they could recognize. "It—it's coming toward us!" Doc chattered.

For a time, the boys were silent in the darkness of their prison hut. Then suddenly Doc put his lips close to Dick's ear. "Do you hear anything?" "Yes," Dick answered; "it sounds like something breathing over there." "It is," Doc confirmed, his voice trembling slightly.

GOLF

BY ALEX MORRISON

Ralph G. Blodgett of Buffalo, N. Y., originally came to me as a pupil, but recently he has been serving me as assistant. In addition to numerous private lessons, I give lessons to several large groups. While I am putting part of the class through exercises to take the kinks out of their swings, I allow the more advanced pupils to hit balls in the driving net.

Blodgett being a keen student and a very close observer often supervises the advanced pupils' practice. His observations are most helpful to the pupils. For example, he pointed out that one player tilted his head toward the right instead of keeping it in vertical position.

This tilting caused the player to hit the ground behind the ball. It's a fault common to many players. Have someone watch your head, make sure that it remains in a vertical position throughout your swing.

Frank Crowninshield of Vanity Fair, besides being an internationally famous editor and an exceptionally good bridge player, has been a pretty good golfer for a number of years.

He came into my studio the other day to practice before a match to be played with Clarence Buddington Kelland, the author; Grantland Rice and Hal Sims, the bridge expert. Mr. Crowninshield's pet minute attempt to cure habits of long standing brings to mind a story I was told recently.

A golf instructor asked two prospective feminine pupils if they wanted to learn the game. One of the young ladies replied, "Just my friend wants lessons—I learned yesterday."

When if you don't think this story funny, the point I want to bring out is clear enough — you can't bring about any real improvement in your game without considerable practice of the right sort.

WANTED MAN WOUNDED IN STREET GUN FIGHT

Emperor Haile Seeks Permanent Refuge with Family in Palestine

Suspected Bank Robber Wounded in Gun Duel By Toronto Detective

George Little, Winnipeg, Critically Wounded Now in Hospital

RECOGNIZES MAN

Storm Chase Over Fences And Through Laneways Before Capture

Toronto, May 2 (CP) — George Little, said by police to be suspected of several Winnipeg bank robberies, is in critical condition at hospital here today. Bullets from the revolver of Inspector of Detectives John Chisholm having pierced his body. Little was brought down in a gun duel with the latter Toronto officer this morning.

The gun battle took place on College Street as Toronto citizens were hurrying to their work. Inspector Chisholm was driving to work when he recognized Little in the company of another man. Inspector Chisholm was driving to police station but pulled out on a charge has been laid against him.

Inspector Chisholm leaped from his car to intercept the pair but when Little recognized him, he drew a revolver and opened up his shots flying wide. Little started his way to the front of a street car as traffic came to a stop and the detective tried to manoeuvre him into a position for a capture.

Little sped into a laneway, jumped a fence and headed down another lane but the officer was right at his heels, fired over the fence, one bullet struck the fleeing man in the arm, another in the back, the one point right under the left breast. The bullet was found in Little's shirt when he was taken to hospital.

Bandit Tosses Gun Away

Reports from Little's gun rattled past Chisholm during the laneway pursuit duel. As Little toppled into a pile of cinders, he tossed his gun away.

"Are you George?" Inspector Chisholm asked the wounded man as he lay in the lane way. To which he was said by the inspector to have replied.

Inspector Chisholm said he then asked the wounded Little if he was from Winnipeg and the officer quoted him as replying: "Yes, you've got me right. I am George Little from Winnipeg."

Shot Is Heard

"I hated to shoot the man," said the inspector. "I knew Little and I knew his record."

Storekeepers ran to the front of their buildings and pedestrians were numerous as the officer and the fleeing man fought it out. During the period, the inspector claimed, Little made an auto driver with his car in a effort to commandeer the car.

One bullet went through Little's lung and at Toronto Western Hospital it was said they were daily fighting chance for life. An emergency operation was performed and a blood transfusion may be necessary.

If transfusions are required, officials said, several officers of the law stand ready to give blood donors for the man they had hunted for some time.

Little's companion was picked up by Inspector Moses Muirhead later.

CAR INDUSTRY FACES BUDGET

One Firm's Head Comments on Effects of Lower Duty

Windsor, Ont., May 2 (CP)—Gratification at the general effect of the 1936 budget in its application to the motor car industry in Canada was expressed by Hon. Dr. W. R. Campbell, president of Ford Motor Company of Canada Limited, after a preliminary survey had pending slips of the full text and the tariff changes affecting the motor trade.

Mr. Campbell expressed the opinion that the long-term effect would be to increase the volume of manufacturing in Canada by requiring after a two-year period a 55 per cent Empire content in motor vehicles sold in Canada in order to gain the full benefits of the reduced duties and taxes applying on the cost of production. Under the tariffs now superseded by the 50 per cent Canadian content was required.

FISTIC FRACAS ENDS IN COURT

Clifford Ketcheson and K. Palliser Bound Over to Keep The Peace

The charge of assault causing actual bodily harm laid against Kenneth Palliser, Thurlow, in yesterday's local police court by Clifford Ketcheson, also of Thurlow, was reduced to that of common assault by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., following the submission of the evidence , both parties being later bound over to keep the peace. Apparently there was a certain amount of provocation in this matter," added Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K.C., while Charles A. Payne, K.C., counsel for the defendant, promptly agreed.

The charge laid against Palliser by Mr. Ketcheson arose out of altercations which occurred on April 18th last after Palliser asked Ketcheson behind the right ear with his fist, and rendered him temporarily deaf. Dr. Welsh of Picton testified as to the medical examination of Ketcheson.

Started Over a Letter.

In relating the events Ketcheson admitted he had removed a letter from Palliser's coat pocket in the Ketcheson Dairy factory. It was only having some fun, when Palliser asked for the letter back. Then I gave him back his letter," added Ketcheson. In the cross examination it was brought out that Ketcheson had previously been in charge of quarrels and finic encounters in his immediate vicinity in the past. Palliser was also called in defence, other witnesses stating, that Ketcheson had removed a letter, without from Palliser's pocket, all in fun, however, according to the alleged assault. His Worship held in his findings, that Ketcheson had undoubtedly provoked Palliser, but he also added, turning to the accused—"Doubtless you did annoy you in taking your letter, but you caused go around striking people as with."

Bringing both parties before him, Magistrate Butler bound them both over to keep the peace and be of good behaviour. No fines were assessed in the matter.

ARREST FOLLOWS SCENE AT HOUSE

Citizen Complains Abusive Language Used by Food Applicant

A transient giving his name as Joseph Gerrard, Montreal, was arrested on Church Street, this morning following a disturbance which took place at the rear of the rear of an Alexander St. home when it is said he asked for food at an early hour this morning. A charge of vagrancy was laid and Gerrard was remanded until Monday.

Sheriff Ross A. Ham, today Sergeant Booth and P. C. Arnott answered a hurried call to Alexander Street where a citizen complained a transient had insulted him and used abusive language after asking for a "hand-out". "He came to the back door and asked for something to eat. Our family was just getting up and we had not as yet commenced getting breakfast and were not in a position to grant his request. He immediately commenced to swear and generally abused me," resident informed the police following which he gave a general description of the visitor.

Later Gerrard was apprehended nearby.

"If citizens would notify our department by telephone when indignant transients molest them as any manner, we'll soon be on the scene and deal promptly with each case. The practice of men panhandling and when refused their requests becoming insulting must be curbed in Belleville, but we can only stamp it out with the assistance of the householders in general," added Chief Kidd today.

POTATOES HIGHER ON SAT. MARKET

$2 Per Bag is Ruling Price Today—Fish Plentiful

The farmer is on the land, and the regular Saturday market was smaller today even though produce prices are offered in fairly heavy quantity with but little change in prices, except that of potatoes.

This morning the common table spud sold as high as $3 the bag, averaging from $1.80 to the higher price, finaller varieties, however, were sold as low as $1.60. On the other hand, local dealers were offering the registered seed potatoes, imported from the east, at a price of $5 for the 90-pound bag. "Potatoes are scarce and they'll be scarcer," defended one rural resident who held out for the high price of $2. "We have a fairly good supply, and while prices will go a little higher, the increase will be small. Next week one local dealer who found business falling off, cut the price to 90c.

Cabbage Plants Sell Well.

Cabbage and cauliflower plants at 10 and 15 cents the dozen in barrel boxes were sold for about the first time this season. Cabbage plants for the first time were plentiful, as five cents the bunch as well as lettuce and other greens. Radishes were in smaller quantities and not more plentiful next week, it was reported by vendors.

Eggs Remain Cheap.

In the city market little change in last week's prices was noted, eggs selling again sold at from 25 to 28 cents the pound, with average two-pound rolls retailing at 45 cents. Eggs remained low due to a fairly plentiful supply. Today the extra grades were sold at from 15 to 16 cents the dozen, with the smaller selected varieties at as low as 12 and 14 cents. A few chickens ranged from 50 to 60 and 70 cents the single bird with an average of $1.25 to $1.50 for the plump pair. A few ducks were sold at 80 and 90 cents.

Fish was plentiful.

For the first time this season fish were plentiful, particularly mackerels which sold as low as 16 cents the pound later in the morning although earlier in the day the usual price of two pounds for 25 cents was asked in catching to the straight price of 13 cents the dozen last week. Large eels, freshly netted and in some instances still alive found less ready sale at from 25 to 30 cents depending on size. A few pike retailed at ten cents the pound or two for 25 to 30 cents for the single fish. Perch and other small pan fish were carried still too scarce for profitable netting.

Little change in grain prices in spite of the forecast of rain noted, while only slight fluctuations were noted in the retail and wholesale meat markets.

ATTENDING DANCE CAR IS STOLEN

Local Youths Reprimanded For Causing Disturbance at Early Hour

Taken from the vicinity of St. Michael's School, on Bleecker Street, the property of Harry Ryan, R.R. No. 2, Belleville, was stolen last night and had not been recovered at noon today, police revealed. The vehicle, a 1936 model blue two-door Chevrolet sedan, was not locked, however, the licence plates number X-7544. Another Chevrolet sedan, bearing licence plates number X-7574, Another stolen at Kingston last night also.

S. G. Ashton, attending a dance last night in Upper Hall on the rear bumper of the motor car had been broken off, apparently when the car was being driven off. P. C. Thomson investigated and later apprehended the culprit in the center of the vehicle believed to have been responsible.

A number of local youths were in the police station at 2.15 a.m. today following reports of disturbances being caused on Front Street. Persons residing in Front St. apartments complained of unnecessary noises being made in their vicinity. Constables Thomson and Arnott investigated and on sighting young men, who were gathered shouting nearby. They were taken to the police station and severely reprimanded. One of their numbers, said a return, was one of the officers and will be summoned to police court in Belleville today.

P. C. Taylor stopped two local car drivers who were driving motor vehicles without the proper lights last night. Only three transients, the least number this spring, appeared at the police station in search of a night's lodging last night.

Found abandoned in Havelock, a motor car the property of Lloyd Ketcheson, Frankford, was recovered late last night. Mr. Ketcheson, who Provincial Police say was in charge of the theft of his car until informed today by the officer left for Havelock early this morning to reclaim his automobile.

Provincial Police today are searching Eastern Ontario for a Chevrolet coupe, licence plates KX-288, that was stolen at Belleville last night. The vehicle, which belongs to Allan Hubbell, Blairden, was painted grey.

REFOREST PROJECT FOR ZWICK'S ISLE

As a relief proposition, carried out with local relief labor the suggestion advanced by one local resident that a scheme of tree planting and reforestation be carried out on an ambitious scale on Zwick's Island this summer, is one of the newer civic matters that will receive attention, and the city hall this morning.

"The island isn't and hasn't been any good for anything except tree growing," pointed out the local resident who refuses to be quoted at present. "It is ideal for it.

"I'm no expert at this, but the scheme looks good," he explained.

"Anyhow, saw that 30,000 or 50,000 trees were planted there this summer. In about sixty or seventy years the returns received from the island would be part of the civic debt. The trees, perfectly plain, would be furnished free by the government, and all the city would have to spend is the cost of planting them.

"In the meantime," pointed out the local resident, "while the trees were growing, the city would be furnished with a beautiful park, a breathing spot for citizens and a bird sanctuary also. Then, too, you have the beach there which would also add to the attractiveness of the island."

All the west side dump, now covered by the city parade, the same scheme of tree planting could be carried out, it was maintained.

Toronto, Not Haingе, Liable For Hospitalizabn Account Of Airport Worer, Mereska

Justice Jackson Finds Workor Indigent And Not Resident of Hastings, Ont.

SENT FROM TORONTO

Suit over a hospital account for the illnes of Lokus Mereska of Toronto who was transmitted from Toronto as physically fit to the relief project at Trenton Airport resulted in a judgment against the City of Toronto, Hastings County being declared not liable, as His Lordship Judge Jackson found Mereska was not a resident of Hastings County, and that he was an indigent and that the City of Toronto was liable. The plaintiff was the Toronto Hospital for Consumptives.

The Judgment is as follows:

In the County Court of the County of York

Between:

The Toronto Hospital For Consumptives, Plaintiff

and

The Corporation of the County of Hastings and the Corporation of the City of Toronto, Defendants.

Before His Honour Judge Jackson

J. Corcoran, Esq, K.C.—For the Plaintiff; G. A. Reid, Esq., K.C.—For the Defendant the County of Hastings; Arthur Ng.—For the Defendant the City of Toronto.

Judgment.

The plaintiff owns and operates a hospital for the treatment of tuberculosis, at the Village of Weston, in the County of York. The Defendants are the Corporation of the County of Hastings and the Corporation of the City of Toronto.

On the 12th day of May, 1934, Lukian Mereska (hereinafter referred to as the patient) was admitted to the Indigent patient to the Hospital of the Plaintiff, and was maintained as such patient from the said date until the 17th of October, 1935, and the plaintiff claims $418.50 for the maintenance of the said patient for said period at the rate of $1.50 per day.

The plaintiff has brought action against both defendants, as owing to the circumstances it is impossible to decide which of them is liable under the Ontario Hospitals for Consumptive Act, 1931, and amendments thereto.

From 1914 up to June 13th, 1933, the patient Lukian Mereska was a resident of Toronto. In March, 1933, he applied to the relief authorities in said city for relief, and relief was supplied to him by the city from that date until June 13th, 1933. Between said dates he had been maintained upon relief in Wellington House, in said city—Wellington House being a lodging house for purposes of relief.

In October and November, 1933 the Dominion Government in arranging out legislation for the purpose of dealing with the problem of unemployment, passed Orders in council (Exhibits 1 and 2) providing for carrying out certain relief works to afford employment (whose wheres were on relief, and for doing such work legislation analogous to other Orders in Council (Exhibit 3) was passed by the Dominion Government on the 30th of January, 1935. This Order in Council provides that:

"In addition to the relief work authorized by the Orders in council of October and November, above referred to, to be carried out under the Department of Mines Relief Act for the employment of single homeless persons during the Winter of 1933 and 1932, it has been reported that a situation exists in the City of Toronto and vicinity, and in the City of Ottawa and vicinity, which would justify the Dominion Government in further contributing under the provisions of the Relief Act of 1932 to the employment, under the terms and subject to the conditions prescribed in the aforesaid Orders in Council, of additional persons to the approximate number, including supervisory staffs, as follows:

In the City of Toronto and vicinity, 2,000 men. The personnel to be given employment from the Toronto will be employed works for the improvement of Harrachs Site and Rifle Range Long Branch, near the City of Toronto, and on works for the improvement of the Air Station Trenton."

The City of Toronto made a request of a number of persons to be given employment with the aforesaid Order in Council, and the aforementioned patient was one of those who attended. Apparently upon his condition which the Government agreed to the men so asked was that they should pass examination by the Medical Officer appointed by the Government acting physically fit. The patient did this examination, and was admitted to the Air Port of Trenton, at which is within the bounds of the Corporation of the County of Hastings.

The patient remained at Trenton, he worked upon the Air Port, was was supplied with board and lodging by the Government and also paid per day. He continued there up to the 13th day of May, 1934, according to exhibit 4, he was discharged by the Medical Officer of Government Hospital at Trenton while returned to Toronto a few days after and relief for about two weeks, was an inmate of Seaton House, in the City of Toronto, and from there went into the Hospital, on the 4th or 5th of May he was admitted to St. Michael's Hospital, in the City of Toronto and from there he was transferred to the Plaintiff's Hospital, on the 12th May, 1934, he was admitted as an indigent patient.

The question to be decided is, in such municipality was the patient a resident, within the meaning of the Act, so as to be admitted without costs.

THE DRAMA

"The Torch Bearers" an Outstanding Success at Albert College

Rich comedy of the delicious, hilarious sort was the delight of the large audience at Memorial Hall, Albert College, last evening when the Literary Society of the School presented a cast of students assembled for "The Torch Bearers" by George Kelly. This play is gentle satire on the ways of ambitious untalented people who are prone to stage unskilled directors. The havoc a "part in a play" can cause in a orphanage, children's shelter or child welfare institution, goal, reformatory, prison or other public institution, and indeed in the life of a resident therein: but in such cases the play is bound to be a purpose of this Act be deemed to be a resident in that municipality by which the patient at the time he became such an inmate was last assessed.

The question to be decided therefore is, was the patient in this case, who was sent to the Air Port at Trenton, an inmate of a public institution within the meaning of the above Sub-section of the Act? There is nothing in the Act to indicate that the term "public institution" shall be interpreted in a special way.

In the Oxford dictionary a public institution is defined as "an establishment, organization or association, instituted for the promotion of some object, especially one of public or general utility, religious, charitable, educational...."

Corpus Juris Vol. 32, Page 943, states: "The word 'institution' used in its ordinary meaning carries with it, at least prima facie, the idea of some public service or use which is designed for the benefit thereof is given to Manchester v. McAdam 196, 44, 50.

Corpus Juris Vol. 32, Page 942, states: "Institution may include not only the property utilities but are consistent with and in the furtherance of the purposes for which it is organized."

See also Royal Masonic v. Parks, 1913, 3 K.B. 1.

I find that while the patient was at Wellington House, in Toronto, he was in an "institution" and maintained for giving relief to unemployed men. I find also that what was done by the Dominion Government was a plan duly approved and carried out for the same purpose. A perusal of Exhibit 4 makes it perfectly clear that the patient was taken there and maintained as one of the Toronto unemployed men. It was the duty on the fact that the patient was one of the men who had been duly so maintained taken to Trenton and maintained there. I find, therefore, that because of the provisions of Section 44, Sub-section (d) and conformably therewith, the patient was a County resident of the Corporation of the County of Hastings within the meaning of the Act.

I find that the patient at the time he was admitted to the Plaintiff Hospital was an indigent person, and that the City of Toronto is liable to the Plaintiff for his maintenance.

Apart from the provisions of the Statute, when the patient returned to Toronto in June, 1934, he was a resident of Toronto, by the ordinary acceptance of that term.

There will be judgment for the Plaintiff against the City of Toronto for $418.50 with costs.

The action against the Corporation of the County of Hastings will be dismissed without costs, under the circumstances the Plaintiff was justified in making the Corporation of the County a party to the action as against it will be dismissed without costs.

W.M.S. Conference Branch Converies at Trenton

By
MRS. PERCY MacMULLEN,
PRESS SECRETARY, Pro Tem.

On Tuesday afternoon, April 28th, 1936, the Executive Committee of the Bay of Quinte Conference Branch of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada convened for its Spring meeting in the parlours of King Street church, Trenton, with the president, Mrs. W. L. Smyth, B.A., Pembroke, in charge.

The Service opened at 3.20 P. M., when Mrs. R. L. Thornbury, Perth, sang a solo and Mrs. J. L. Campbell, Smith Falls, president of Renfrew Presbyterial presided over the worship Service.

At this juncture Mrs. Smyth paid gracious tribute to the passing of the dearly beloved branch press secretary in the person of Mrs. E. Revells, Kingston. A large bouquet of spring blooms in a silver vase was placed on the press table in loving memory of her cheerful and courageous personality.

Pay Tribute

Mrs. R. O. Jolliffe read an appreciation of the faithful little woman who so diligently and faithfully filled the position of press secretary to the Branch. Her devotion to her task was phenomenal as many a time during Branch meetings she was obliged to work till almost daylight, yet she came to the morning session with a smile. Although she had varied interests her most outstanding characteristics was her missionary zeal and no one can estimate the joy and thrill resulting from the crowning joy of her life was the dedication of her son to the medical missionary work in China.

Letters from Dr. Ian Revells were read and two verses of "For All the Saints who from their Labours Rest" was sung in her memory.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen, Press Secretary of Belleville Presbyterial was appointed Branch Press Secretary pro-tem and the election for vacant offices will be held Thursday.

Dunning Praises Bilateral Pacts

Ottawa, May 2 (CP)—Canada expects in the next year future to negotiate trade agreements with several important countries, Finance Minister Dunning announced in his budget speech. Serious attention was now being given Canada's trade relations with the United Kingdom, he said.

Canada has removed the 1935 specific duties on Belgian rabbit skins, dressed and dyed. In return, Belgium has agreed to remove the surcharge tax imposed on Canadian goods entering that country. In addition, Belgium will in future classify as "cheddar" the cheese imported from Canada.

"These concessions, the removal of the heavy turnover tax in particular, should stimulate our exports to Belgium in many lines of goods," said the Minister.

Basis for Agreement On Relief Reached

Ottawa, May 2 (CP)—Practical agreement was reached between the provincial and Dominion governments on the basis for an agreement on relief administration and costs during the current fiscal year. Both Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Premier Hepburn refused to reveal the outcome of discussions, which occupied the two governments yesterday but both expressed satisfaction.

Mr. Hepburn was understood to have urged an increase in the grants-in-aid to the provinces or at least a dollar for dollar sharing by Dominion and Province of relief costs so municipalities might be relieved from all costs.

Other aspects of the unemployment situation have to do with agreements on works projects including the trans-Canada highway and Northern development such as the construction of highways to ore fields in northern districts. Provision for this latter work is in the supplementary estimates.

EMPIRE AND U.K. TRADE GROWS

Upward Trend in Imports And Exports is Indicated

Ottawa, May 2 (CP)—During the 11 months ending last February 28, the British Empire purchased from Canada goods worth $362,178,682, Finance Minister Dunning informed the House of Commons in his budget address. For the same period the preceding year the value was $313,960,822.

Imports from the British Empire totalled $163,429,300, against $143,-989,314 in the same 11 months of the 1934-35 fiscal year.

Canadian exports to the United Kingdom jumped approximately $18,500,000, imports $5,500,000.

"Within the empire," said Mr. Dunning, "the increased purchases from us were distributed as follows: The United Kingdom 15.6 per cent; Australia 35.1 per cent; New Zealand, 28.7 per cent; South Africa, 7.1 per cent. Exports to British India dropped 17.2 per cent."

An upward trend in Canada imports from empire countries was also indicated. This increase, the Minister said, was shared as follows:

From the United Kingdom 5.4 per cent, Australia 16 per cent, British India 13.4 per cent, New Zealand 21.7 per cent, South Africa 41.3 per cent.

THE HOME DECORATOR

Hall

When Friends Drop In . . .

There is nothing more disheartening than to enter a doorway into a reception room that is simply a dingy combining tunnel. There is no need to go into detail about the keynote of first impressions. But remember that the hall is the room that makes this first impression at your home, when friends drop in. Let it be more than just a passage way to other rooms. Let it achieve distinction by being unique and direct.

Light shades have been overwhelmingly popular for a number of years and there is no better place to utilize a pure White enamel than in the hall for woodwork and stairway, the stair treads and newel can be in brown mahogany. Too much emphasis in design or color is a doubtful virtue in an extremely small room, and dreamed of all unnecessary frills you have a room of quiet charm and dignity. Provide the clearest possible contrast for the white enamel by doing the wall surface in Clear Willow Green or Forest Green. It is stunning against the White. A colonial pattern is soft and nice but not quite so striking!

Purchase an unpainted frame mirror and coat it a mahogany to match the stairway, place it above a small mahogany chest, and no matter how small the room you've added a illusion of spaciousness that is very pleasing.

Cover an old dress chair with bright chintz or yellow burgeon, fill it with a few fresh flowers or plain leaf plants, and you have a delightful "bright spot" to plum on the chest. If space permits lay rugs of cheery furnishers, a straight chair or bench painted white with a heavy textured seat upholstery is a grand touch, plus plain white dimity curtains at the window and a small multi-colored rug on the floor. An entry into that sort of hallway . . . no matter what the weather or the season . . . brings any client with its fresh beauty and radiant cador.

Don't be afraid to try your own hand chintz with color and brush. Color isn't the dreaded Waterloo of decoration that it is supposed to be. You don't have to have a special talent for combining colors properly. The backbone of inborn talent is rubbish. It is necessary that you have good taste, and that is a matter that can be originality and industry. There are surely a variety of "old friends" which have been relegated to the chancelry of the attic due to their worn and battered state. Get them down and "change the leopard's spots." It is a genuine thrill to see the change a coat of paint or varnish can make and the charm that can be added to your home by a few colorful objects artfully arranged.

Students and Labor Sympathizers Tangle

May-day passed quietly in Canada, except for an apparently harmless riot between students and labor sympathizers in Toronto, where penalties waving youths tangled with an audience listening to Communist leader Tim Buck.

Hilarity between Buck's sympathizers and students before six carloads of policemen rushed to the scene and rescued the youths who had been warned not to mingle with the Communist demonstration. No one was seriously hurt, although battered coats were bloodied. Many students are carried unconscious from the field. Police, in plain clothes, appeared to shout as many blows as the main combatants.

It was said the students were holding a mock-meeting and were ganged by members of Buck's audience.

Western Canada observed the traditional Labour holiday calmly, confining its activities from Winnipeg to the Pacific to parades and peaceful meetings held at Edmonton, Regina and Vancouver.

Most prairie parades fizzled but 2,000 marched through the streets of Edmonton, Social Credit capital of Premier Aberhart. No parade was held at Rairmore, Sask., a town with a Communistic council.

Northern Ontario saw parades at Perth Bay and Sudbury. The Union Jack was carried at the head of Sudbury's parade. Clergy and Salvo Bullbrook praised North Bay's Communists for their patience under trying circumstances.

President Le Devoir Stricken Suddenly

Montreal, May 2 (CP)—Another of Canada's prominent French-Canadian business men had passed away today with the sudden death of Oscar Dufresne, president of Le Devoir, Montreal daily newspaper, at his home last night in his sixty-first year.

The well-known contractor and industrialist, suffering for more than a year with what was thought to be a minor illness, collapsed at his home and died shortly after. He was noted throughout the province for his philanthropies, particularly in donations to hospitals. He was known in business circles as president of the construction company bearing his name.

A PERSONAL LETTER to the stenographers of Canada, from J. J. SEITZ
on the fortieth anniversary of the founding of the firm by him.

UNDERWOOD ELLIOTT FISHER LIMITED

J. J. SEITZ, PRESIDENT — J. L. SEITZ, VICE-PRESIDENT

UNDERWOOD TYPEWRITERS
UNDERWOOD-ELLIOTT-FISHER BUSINESS MACHINES
HEAD OFFICE FOR CANADA
TORONTO—CANADA

To the Typists, Stenographers, and Secretaries of Canada.

Through forty years of endeavour I can look back to that distant time when it was given to me to found the organization now known, from coast to coast, as Underwood-Elliott-Fisher Limited. The intervening years have brought days of difficulty and doubt, days of fulfilment and reassurance.

I have seen many dreams of mine come true, for in 1896, with the enthusiasm of youth, I dreamed of three things that I might be able to accomplish. I visioned the day when I could produce, in Canada, the most perfect writing-machine that science and experiment and patience could devise. I dreamed of helping the young women of Canada to prepare themselves for their introduction into the field of business. I hoped to create some channel or agency which would place them, duly trained, in the secretarial and other positions that the growth of Canadian business would increasingly provide.

Now, these early dreams of mine have been transformed into reality. I have seen the machine I hoped to build in Canada, accepted and established throughout the Dominion, so that today the vast majority of typewriters used in this country bear the name UNDERWOODS. I have seen half a million young men and young women entering into business life with the confidence I have been able to construct for that purpose. Many of these young men and women have attained to places of importance in industry and commerce.

I appreciate the opportunity which has been mine to serve Successive generations of Canadian youth and I would be ungrateful indeed if I did not record my own appreciation of the organization which I founded these young men and women have given to the firm a loyalty and support which forty years ago. To all of you, I want to express my personal gratitude for the support you have given me and my associates in the building of this business.

Sincerely yours,

J. J. Seitz

THE ETHIOPIAN WAR

Though his capital is likely to go into the hands of the Italian invaders that does not mean that Emperor Haile Selassie's empire is finished, he declares, calling on all the men in the neighborhood of the capital city to take five days' rations and go to meet the foe.

That is what happens in a country like Ethiopia. The loss of the capital by the Ethiopians will probably not be so serious a matter as the loss of their capital would be to a highly cultured people like the Europeans. Even in the worst days of the great war while a long range German gun was smashing lovely things in stone, Paris was still the eye of the French people though there was talk of removing the capital. To have removed would have been a serious blow to the prestige of the French people. It was not done.

But the Ethiopians are not necessarily city folk, indeed their cities are of a kind not unlike that of people in the earlier stages of civilization. They are still a nature people who live with the elements and in close communion with the wilds.

Still though Emperor Haile appears with his armies and fights a very fine battle of diplomacy being as adroit as the best of the diplomatic figures of Europe and Asia, those who wish him well feel that he cannot win in the long run, fighting a rugged warfare though his men may. They will look upon the fall of Addis Ababa into Italian hands if and when it occurs somewhat in the spirit of the Italians as a sign of the end. But Italians will put more into it than that, they will inject joy and national thanksgiving for this evidence of the value of Fascism and dictatorship.

HOW MANY LEGISLATORS

Premier Hepburn announces that there is in the offing a plan to reduce the membership of the Ontario Legislature ten or fifteen members from the present low which was established not so long ago by former Premier Henry. Then it was felt that Ontario with 112 members was far too much government as far as representation is concerned. Those who know Mr. Hepburn have no doubt he will implement his promise with the legislation which will reduce the membership.

Toronto and York have been singled out for reduced membership in the Provincial House and no doubt there will be strong opposition from this quarter of the province, and probably in other parts which will have to provide some of the slices which have to be taken from the total of ninety seats in Queen's Park.

If the cut goes through the other provinces will watch the march of events in Ontario. For instance Quebec has at present the same membership, 90, as the sister provinces that one wonders why the Legislation is smaller, 5,062,000 people as against 3,440,000 of Ontario, though the preponderance of the latter is not great. It is when one comes to some of the other provinces that one wonders why the eLegislatures are so large and the legislators so numerous. Alberta with about 800,000 persons has sixty-three representatives in the local house, British Columbia with a larger population than Alberta has but 48 M.L.A.'s. Manitoba has 55 legislators, New Brunswick has 48 for 410,000 people while Nova Scotia with more than half a million people has only 30.

There seems in this situation no balance. The province of Ontario has at present really the smallest number of legislators proportionate to the population. And the discrepancy between the other provinces and Ontario will increase when Mr. Hepburn puts into action his redistribution.

Many of the provinces are heard from a great deal but from the size of their legislatures they do not appear to have considered reduction of membership as a means of saving money. There is little or no sign of agitation for cuts in memberships in other provinces.

The question of representation by population was touched upon by the Ontario Premier who said he was not entirely in accord with such a basis of representation. This is an old fighting ground and about it parliamentarians will continue to fight.

From now on the eyes will be on all the ridings to see which will disappear under the new plan.

HEALTH MAINTAINED

Contrary to general belief there has been no widespread under-nutrition in the U. S. despite the depression, it was claimed before the American Medical Association. This was based on answers to a questionnaire in twenty five cities. The report said that unemployed persons and school children have if anything improved in health Figures for examinations made of 20,000 scholars in Birmingham as of 1927 and 1934 showed the average height increased 0.7 inch while weight increased an average of 0.2 pound. Dr. McLester of Birmingham, Alabama, who took these tests said that these pointed to the value of comulative enlightment in nutrition.

DREAMER

A dreamer now, I hold my twisted tubes,
An ancient memory stirs me and I feel
The strange, strong power which they at times possess
That draws my heart to them like magnet steel.
Perhaps in the dim past with eager hands
I gave loved hours to one fair craft of old
And on white vellum radiant borders limned
In arabesques of carmine and brush-gold
Or else begrudging time to food and sleep
I blended colours with an eye so true
That other artists thrilled with rare delight
And sought me out for work I loved to do.
I may have reached the height where I beheld
My masterpiece take captive beauty's soul
In a madonna's clear, uncurtained look
And a child's head beneath an aureole.
Should I regain in some far, future age
The skill with which my former work was done
Then I shall grind prime colours once again
And clear my oil without haste in the sun,
For I shall glean from all the golden years
Beauty of earth and sea and sky above
And to my canvas through my subtle hand
Will come the soul of every thing I love.

JUNGLE KING TO RETIRE, so runs a newspaper heading over an article under date line of Memphis, Tennessee, conveying the startling intelligence that His Majesty Joseph Leon Ben-Morris Lazur Cohen Seligel Lazarowitz, so-called King of the Hoboes, has decided to abdicate the throne, inasmuch as there are several other claimants to the title of King of the Hoboes Lazarowitz threat need not be taken too seriously. This gentleman of the road who boasts that he has done no work in years and has no present intention of doing any, has threatened before to retire. Several times he has been on the verge of leaving for some distant city and seeking out the girl of his choice, object matrimony and settling down. His courage evidently has failed him or any of these journeys ended for he has remained out of the matrimonial ring so far as known. Several times he has visited Belleville and has been heard to say that this is a cold burg, that the pickings are poor here, that his compatriots came through with less than three dollars on his last visit, despite his learned lectures to persons and groups on his travels. His toughest experience was riding from Pembroke to North Bay in a box car in below zero weather. He nearly froze to death but was rewarded by the warmth of his reception in North Bay, Timmins and other northern Ontario towns. In both the places named he was banqueted by the Jewish colony and his talks on expensive travels received with enthusiasm, while he was sent on his way with a full stomach and a bulging pocketbook. Belleville in his opinion was "lousy with money" but the police force has been too close to his former visit. Lazarowitz claims to have travelled 202,986 miles on freight trains and 141,658 miles as a hitchiker on highways. The Bona Fide Hoboes Union of North America is losing many members because they are becoming disgusted with the "riff raff" to be found on the road these days, according to King Leon, who is feeling the same way himself.

MOTHER'S DAY IS A WEEK FROM SUNDAY, May 10. This beautiful remembrance is gaining favor as the years go by, and despite some scoffers who can always find fault with anything, Mother's Day accomplishes a good purpose, concentrating thoughts as it does upon the worth of the Mothers here and the Mothers who have gone before, honoring their service and sacrifice and especially showing to living Mothers that their service and sacrifice is appreciated, instead of waiting to say it on tombstones. The commercial side of Mother's Day is also beneficial as it provides work for many and puts considerable money into circulation which otherwise would be idle. So, let's all strive to make this Mother's Day the best ever held and the Happiest for Mother.

And Whereas

A southern Negro minister who was given to the use of big words and complicated discourse was waited upon by a church committee and told that his style of preaching was not all that could be desired.

"Don't I argify and sputify?" inquired the minister.

"Yes, yo' done argify and sputify," said a member of the committee, "but yo' don't show wherein."

Parliament Hill Hears
By Wilfrid Eggleston

Budget secrets are the most jealously guarded of government confidences and even then they get out sometimes. Over in London they are investigating how it got out that a higher tax was to be applied on tea. Several years ago we had the famous sugar leak which was estimated to have cost the treasury five million dollars in lost taxes. The gold tax was so tightly concealed that even the Minister of Mines didn't know about it until it was read in the House. And now, with another budget approaching, Hon. Charles Dunning is circumspect lest even a gesture on his part should give away any information.

Thursday hang two anecdotes. One member, who had heard that a tax was to be applied on U. S. magazines, wrote to the Minister protesting. Mr. Dunning politely replied that of course the member did not expect him to disclose what the government's plans were, in that regard.

Another member was besieged by one of his constituents, a manufacturer, who was about to get out his next catalogue. The manufacturer wanted to know what the sales tax was going to be, so that he could make the right price quotations.

The member, without consulting the Minister of Finance, replied to the manufacturer. Afterwards he sent a copy over to Mr. Dunning. In substance, the reply was this:

"Only the Almighty and Hon. Charles Dunning know what the sales tax is going to be, and they are equally unapproachable."

I have added to my collection of election yarns the classic appeal to the Indian vote made by Dr. W. H. Montague, running for Haldimand County in 1891. (Dr. Montague was later Provincial Minister of Agriculture). Dr. O. D. Skelton prints it in one of his books. At that time Indians in the eastern provinces enjoyed the franchise.

Dr. Montague had the following circular distributed on the Indian Reserve, with the royal coat of arms at the top:

FOR INDIANS ONLY

"To the Indians: The Queen has always loved her dear loyal subjects, the Indians. She wants them to be good men and women, and she wants them to live on the land that they have, and she spends in a little while, if her great chief John A. gets into government again, to be very kind to the Indians and to make them rich and happy. She wants to go and vote for Dr. Montague, who is the Queen's agent. He is their friend, and by voting for him every one of the Indians will please QUEEN VICTORIA."

Dr. Montague won that election with a majority of 76 votes, according to the Parliamentary Guide.

Stirling and District

Stirling—The members of the Masonic Lodge No. 68 of Stirling were entertained at a splendid social evening in the Cosens rooms of the L. O. L. No. 110 of Stirling on Wednesday evening April 29th. A large number of members of both fraternities attended the event and enjoyed the fine program which was arranged by a Committee appointed for that purpose by the officers who were responsible for all the talent of the evening. This Committee under the leadership of Mr. C. N. Baker made a splendid job of securing excellent talent for the musical numbers and their choice of Rev. James M. Reckel as the speaker of the evening was also a very good one.

At about 8.30 P. M. the gathering was called to order by Mr. Thos. Montgomery, Sr., who gave a brief address of welcome on behalf of the Orangemen to those of the visiting lodges. He then called on Dr. E. A. Carlton, Deputy Grand Master of the Prince Edward District, who presided as Chairman for the evening. After expressing the pleasure of the Stirling Masonic Lodge in accepting the invitation to visit with the L. O. L. the artists to provide the first portion of the entertainment were introduced. The next worthy musician was devoted to a group of musical selections given by the newly formed "Old time orchestra". Who since the first appearance some weeks ago have been greatly in demand. Those taking part were: Maurice Hall (banjo), Don Rose (banjo), R. West (banjo), C. N. Baker, Ken Shagley and Reg Matheson (violins), R. A. Patterson (auto harp and harmonica), Wm. Johns (Ukulele and harmonica). Their offering included well known western songs, mountain music, duets and solos which were interspersed with plenty of stories of wit and humour which created a good deal of merriment.

Rev. James M. Reckel, the guest speaker of the evening was introduced by W. M. Thomas W. Bolton of the Masonic lodge. Mr. Reckel gave a fine address on the power of the Church, Fraternity and Service Club.

Speaking first on the value of the church to humanity, the man who has been faithful in the ministry of the Gospel for thirty years was able to speak with authority from and his own experience. "The very finest of all men and women are to be found within the Christian church", he declared. "Creeds are of no great significance" he stated, "and difference in denomination was not of great importance." It is the Christian church in general which has gone forward for the last five hundred years in per-

O'Donnell Told Late Today Supreme Court Refused to Hear Appeal

Toronto, May 2 (CP)—Harry O'Donnell, with less than a week of life allotted him in his sentence for Bush Valley murder, learned Friday the Supreme Court of Canada had refused to hear his appeal.

The news was carried to the 35-year-old filling station attendant in Don Jail, where he has been confined since a jury convicted him in February of killing Miss Taylor after attempting to ravish her last November. He is under sentence to hang Tuesday.

Word from the jail today was that O'Donnell has been eating and sleeping normally though the strain of waiting for May 5 is telling on him. Unless there is a commutation or reprieve from the Minister of Justice, he will be allowed just one more visit from members of his family.

LIGHTER MODELS IS RAIL TREND

Certain Unnecessary Equipment Retired Says Hungerford

Ottawa, May 1—(CP)—The trend of development in railway equipment is in the direction of lighter models, the Commons Committee on railways and shipping was informed today.

A. M. Hoage (CCF-Winnipeg North) raised the question of lighter railway cars and other equipment when the committee met today. Lines in the United States were going in largely for lighter equipment, he said.

S. J. Hungerford, President of the Canadian National, stated the C. N. had no intention at present of ordering new equipment. The new light types of cars and locomotives were in the experimental stage. The trend was, however toward lighter equipment.

Mr. Hungerford was questioned on an item in the 1935 accounts showing a decrease on Canadian lines of 16,913 units of obsolete equipment in addition to normal yearly retirements.

He said there were two causes of this. United States regulations now precluded wooden cars being accepted in exchange for movement over lines south of the border. Consequently cars of this kind could not be placed on international hauls and many had to be retired.

Nutrition Classes Of Red Cross Attended by 1900

More than 1,900 Ontario mothers and unemployed girls received practical instruction in adequate diets, prepared at a minimum of cost, through the medium of the Canadian Red Cross Society during the past year, officials of that organization announced today.

Fifty-eight courses of eight lessons each, comprising 464 two-hour demonstrations in economical cookery, were conducted in 34 Ontario cities, it was revealed. One hundred and fifty-six classes in dietario had volunteered their services free of charge. Under the Red Cross nutrition courses, officials stated:

"It is easier to face the worries of a home with an unemployed father, when you are armed with something like we get here," was the remark heard at one of the Red Cross Nutrition Classes lately, which gives expression to one of the main reasons why, for the past four years, the Red Cross has been giving strong nutrition and dietetic instruction to groups of women in many parts of Ontario.

Red Cross officials pointed out that, with so many families living on relief allowances or reduced food budgets, and with the ever-increasing variety of foods available on the markets, mothers of these families are confronted with the problem of how best to use their allowances to insure the maximum health benefit at the least possible cost. The Red Cross Nutrition Course is designed to help them meet these problems.

The nutrition class activities of the Red Cross have been extended to groups of women other than those on relief and also into the Northern Outpost Hospital districts with beneficial results, officials announced.

It was explained that the nutrition course is conducted as simply as possible, and each point practically demonstrated. At every lesson a meal is prepared for a family of five or six, members of the class sample it, and the costs are worked out. The price and food value of ever ingredient used, and its relation to bodily health are explained.

These courses, stated the officials, are being received with enthusiasm in all parts of Ontario, and before still, the reports coming in show that the cooking and buying instruction given is being acted upon.

CHEESE GRADER ADVISES MAKERS

Urged Eight Day Interval From Day of Pressing Until Boxed

For the highest scoring cheese in the Peterborough district last season, the Oliver Milne Co. of Daley D. factory in Asphodel Township was presented with the Peterborough Bank of Commerce Cup at a meeting of cheesemakers of the district, held in Peterborough on Wednesday.

The meeting was attended by Mr. J. L. Irvin, Dominion dairy grader of the local office who presented some sound advice for the guidance of makers.

In his address, Mr. Irvin urged the makers to keep their cheese at least eight days from the day after they are pressed until they are boxed. Warning against boxes that were too tight, Mr. Irvin who pointed out danger in transit in that condition. The prizes for the outstanding cheese exhibit which is to be held in Belleville by the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association next December were outlined by Mr. Irvin. Almost $1,200 in prize money to assist the exhibit has already been donated by banks and others concerned with the enterprise.

"The cheese industry needs a Major Bowes to do for cheese what that well known radio director has done for a certain brand of coffee", declared Mr. Irvin. "If we could get the publicity for our cheese that it deserves. Even the factories we have now wouldn't be able to keep up with demand for it. One of the main objects of this contest next December is to keep Ontario cheese before the consuming public of the United Kingdom. It is proposed that the cream of this cheese to be shown in Belleville at the exhibit will be sent as a composite exhibit to the Old Country just as a sample of what can be made in this central district", added Mr. Irvin.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

IS LOVE REALLY A MERE MATTER OF ENVIRONMENT?

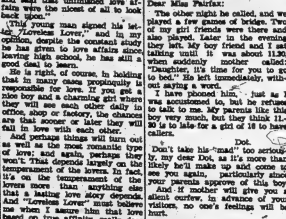
(Copyright, 1936, Consolidated Features Syndicate, Inc.)

A young man who has done very well in the business world has sent me a challenging question in regard to love. And he is confident that he knows all that is to be known about love — and, after all, doesn't amount to much. "Love alone is left high school," he writes me, "I have been an observer of life and the effect of love on the lives of men and women. And I have come to the conclusion that love is a by-product of environment.

"If my observations are correct, then it's possible for any young man to fall in love with any of the hundreds of girls with whom he is thrown in contact. And following out this thought, why isn't it just as easy to love a rich girl as a poor one? And you know, Miss Fairfax, as well as I do, that there are many rich, eligible young women than well-to-do young men.

"But on the other hand, if love is a by-product of environment — if love is a matter of affinity — then there is some hope for the race. If there is such a thing as a condition in this distressed world, and there's a chance of meeting her, then I have something to look forward to. However, till that happiness calches up with me — I miss them all."

"Melinda at the sckhoolgo desk looks as good to me as Belinda, whom I met at last year's dancing class, and a little red-haired I picked up on a train during a four hour road journey surpassed them all. But the little wretch wouldn't give me her name or where she lived, and said that unfinished love affairs were the most of all to look back upon.



"This young man signed his letter, 'Loveless Lover,' and in my opinion, despite the cynical study he has given to love affairs since leaving high school, he has still a good deal to learn.

He is right, of course, in holding that in many cases propinquity is responsible for love. If you get a boy and a charming girl into a room where they will see each other daily in a study, shop or factory, the chances are that sooner or later they will fall in love with each other.

And perhaps things will turn out as well as the most romantic type of love; and perhaps they won't. That depends largely on the temperament of the lovers. In fact, it's on the foundation of love that lovers more than anything else build a lasting love story depends. And "Loveless Lover" must believe me when I assure him that love based on true affinity, really does last.

When my young friend tells me he loves them all, no doubt he is speaking of his capacity for endless flirtation. If he had been accidentally in love, no matter how cautiously and tacedy, even once, I do not think he would use these careless terms. But I should say that the thrilling experience of being actually in love with one woman is still ahead of him.

And when this first experience comes as it's likely to come next week, next month, or next year — "Loveless Lover" will make up his mind that life is really worth living.

Interesting Speakers Heard at Order's Annual Meeting, Ottawa

Attended by the Governor-General, the Prime Minister, the Honorary President, Rt. Hon. G. P. Graham, the thirty-eighth annual meeting of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada held this past week in Ottawa was marked by growing enthusiasm.

Outstanding reports brought items of encouragement and the reports submitted showed the splendid work done by the Branches in the past year. Sessions were held in the ballroom of Government House, with an attendance of about three hundred, presided over by Senator Charbonneau, who was elected to his office for the tenth term.

The delegates were welcomed to Government House by Lord Tweedsmuir, who in a short address emphasized the fact that the three basic qualities of knowledge, hospitality and optimism were required in all social service work.

Miss Elinah Saxelle, Chief Superintendent for Canada, presented the report of the Order. During the year 79,250 visits were made, an increase of 16,073 to 85,374 patients. There was a notable increase in the amount of medical and surgical work. One new branch was opened, at Orilla. In December, 1935, there were approximately 518 nurses carrying out the Victorian Order program in Canada. Between these there have been difficult years and Miss Saxelle referred to their steadfast service and devotion during a very trying period.

A splendid report was given by Dr. C. P. Martin, former dean of the medical faculty, McGill University, who headed his talk on the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada as "a National Asset." Other speakers were Miss Frieda Held, assistant deputy minister, Public Welfare Department, Mother of Alexander Mission, Toronto, and Dr. Gordon Bates, of the Health Section of the League.

Senator Graham, as host on his own premises, Rideau Hall, was host to the delegates at a luncheon and at this interesting function the Prime Minister or Canada, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and Mrs. King were delivered an eloquent address, reviewing the work of the Order.

Besides the business sessions, a number of delightful social events were given in honour of the delegates. These included afternoon tea at Government House, a dinner in the Chateau with Their Excellencies receiving; a theatre party to play. If the post office Corinne Wilson was hostess, and a supper party for the nurses given by Mrs. Charles Black, M.P., in the Parliamentary Restaurant.

BRIDGE STREET W. M. S.

The regular meeting of the group of Bridge Street W.M.S. was held on Friday with the president, Mrs. Semple, in charge. About fifty were in attendance. After the treasurer's and recording secretary's reports were read the department secretaries' reports were called for. Mrs. V. P. Hunt, corresponding secretary, reported seven letters of sympathy sent to members. Mrs. T. Lathier, Missionary Monthly secretary, said about sixty were taken. Mrs. Hooper's department was given by Miss M. Symons. Strangers' department by Mrs. F. Cooper, and made fifteen calls. Mrs. G. E. Deroche, recently returned from the South, spoke on the Peace Department. Flower department given by Mrs. Richardson and Christian Stewardship by Mrs. (Rev.) Harrison. Mrs. Chas. Hyde had a pop party in charge of the program, Mrs. G. F. Stewart giving the Bible lesson and prayer. Mrs. Hyde read a paper prepared by Mrs. Campbell on the "Schoolhouse" in India, which was most encouraging. They sang teaching and old favourites. Two schools are established with natives who have accepted Christ and have been educated in Christian schools as teachers. The government grant to these schools has been raised from ten thousand dollars to one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. They realize the value of education, Mrs. A. E. Gilbert also gave a paper on the mission work in Africa and a letter was read by Mrs. R. Walker from Miss Vera Hart, of Centenary, who is a missionary in Angola. Miss Eva Colling read a poem "Do Something For Others Today." At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

Seek Advice Of Doctor On Skin

Joan Bennett

She selects cosmetics that react favorably to her complexion

By HELEN POLLETT

COMPLEXIONS HAVE strange ways of behaving. Some are bad-tempered for years and then suddenly throw a romantic fit, a skin that has come inflamed or spotty, or gone on a riot of itchiness for seldom explained reasons with consequent —though they get the credit—but through a sympathetic reaction of an outraged digestion. Skin tests to show what the tummy doesn't like are frequently a part of the investigation of the medical man who deals in skin diseases.

Oily complexies are of value in the cause of beauty. They have an appearance of the skin clean and smooth. But there's no sense in expecting much depth of charm. When oily skins are present they hinder more than they help. Dry people won't dry out and evaporate when cream are used. Often the process of application is part of the perfection.

Women think nothing of spending dollars for beautifiers, yet hesitate to get medical attention for complexion defects. An inflamed skin must not be neglected, especially if the inflammation appears in spots.

Queer little waty growths should be removed, and moles, too, if they become signs of irritation.

Perspiring palms and moist feet are the bane of many, and the terrize of the frail sex. Nervousness is a common cause of these troubles. Shake the palms of the hands with alcohol, keep the insides of the shoes powdered with talcum.

Change shoes and stockings frequently. Bathe the feet in tepid water in which baking soda has been dissolved, dry briskly, dust with a look powder.

Always first when it comes to millinery fashions, Paris does not disappoint this season. She used thirty layers of fine milliner's net to make a black fabric hat which she employed for a hat which she called the Mirage. The hat is trimmed with black grosgrain and is strictly tailored. From my very shallow, it is anchored to the head by two tiny corsba sewn into the crown-band.

"It isn't easy to select the right gown out of the tremendous number of beautiful models now being shown. But one really outstanding model is that of midnight blue net with embroideries of silver thread in a dragon-fly design.

OBSERVE 25TH ANNIVERSARY OF WEDDING

On Sunday, April 19th Mr. and Mrs. Harry Greatrix, Front of Thurlow entertained at the dinner hour a number of their relatives and friends in honour of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. Twenty-five roses for Miss Myrtle Fuller, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Fuller, Shannonville, and Mr. Harry Greatrix, eldest son of Mr. Geo. Greatrix and the late Mrs. Greatrix, and Consecon and Thurlow, were quietly married by the Reverend Mr. Wilson of the Shannonville parish at that time. The bridesmaid was Miss Edith Greatrix brother of the groom and the bridesmaid, Miss Beatrice Fuller, sister of the bride, now Mrs. Powell of the North Bay district. Regret was expressed that Mrs. Powell was unable to be present at this event. Mr. and Mrs. Greatrix are blessed with seven children, two sons and five daughters, all unmarried, and with a fine bunch of the home fires.

After the usual congratulations and best wishes, the guests were invited to the dining room where a sumptuous repast awaited them. The dinner table was prettily decorated for the occasion in silver and white. The large wedding cake made by the bride's mother formed the centrepiece with a miniature bride and groom on each side flanked large white candles set in silver candle sticks. The first whit bouquet carried by the little bridesmaids, also formed part of the decorations. There were three courses by the four older daughters. Mr. Greatrix, Thurlow, was the toastmaster and proposed the toast to the King which was responded to by Mrs. Powell, North Bay. A toast to the bride and groom was proposed by Mrs. Ben Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. Greatrix who related incidents of their early years, a toast was also proposed to the grandparents present. Another feature of interest was the cutting of the three tiers of the wedding cake. A quarter century were showered with confetti, as well as the guests who showered the bride and groom. The evening was spent in social intercourse. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Greatrix were Mr. and Mrs. Ben Fuller and family, Mrs. Powell, Miss Edith Greatrix, including twenty-five dollars in coins from the father of the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Greatrix, the groom, parted for home wishing Harry and Myrtle many years of happy married life, and many they be numbered where the golden wedding anniversary.

Again on Monday night Mr. and Mrs. Greatrix were at Mr. Al Stone's to their neighbours and friends who were present to help celebrate the wedding of twenty-five years ago, when Miss Myrtle Fuller became progressive euchre was enjoyed for a time and the prize winners for the ladies' were ladies' Mrs. Clare Leavens and men's first, Mr. Ben Fuller, second, Mr. Al Stone. Lunch included in—Messrs. James Maidment, Ben Fuller, Albert Greatrix and by Miss Betty Winters at the piano, supplied the music for the dancing. Every one had many testifying the high esteem in which Harry and Myrtle are held by the community. At midnight a dainty lunch was served by the hostess assisted still the wee small hours of morn when all departed. Again Harry and Myrtle Greatrix' ideal host and hostess and wishing them years of continued happiness.

Fashion Flashes

DRIVING HOME is the clever name given to an evening gown of black velvet and crepe, designed by a tweed coat of the same color.

THE COLORS OF SPRING include flowers and fruits of the season and so a dainty nightgown uses daffodil yellow as the ground for a floral design of lavender, pink and white. The fabric is chiffon, and the sleeves and yoke are of matching lace a row of shirring at the high waistline finishes it.

QUITE AN ENTRANCE can be achieved by using the train of one of the new evening frock, for the train forms a cape. One such fabric is gray marquisette and the dress is made with a tight fitting under strage. The decolletage, low in front and back, is banded with violets.

NEVER! ENOUGH of those trim little frocks that look good for any daytime occasion. A black silk sheer black crepe has pushed up sleeves that are wide at the top, a shiny patent leather belt and a waistline dotted with a spot of crisp embellishe de sole.

MANY NOVELTIES were displayed in the recent Paris showings. For instance, a dress of black silk crepe in lunic style has the low part of the skirt covered with tiny black feathers. It is worn with a black bonnet with black feathered sleeves.

IT DOESN'T MATTER if we are looking forward to Summer, we want our Summer furs just the same. A new cape is of Summer suede, long, with bands of horizontal stitching around the bottom in shades from brown to beige.

Amidst the palms down south, the soft shimmerier type dress in silk prints is gaining in popularity. A typical model is of white silk printed with a navy music note design. The skirt is pleated, and the sleeves are short.

No! all is color, for black, especially sheer black is strongly represented. A new model for evening is of black lacquered gauze done on a straight gathered silhouette, with a gold and diamante band for the waist and around the armholes.

Heavy Acreage of Potatoes Being Planted

Styles in farming?

"Of course there are," chorus local seed and grain men, busy disposing of fairly heavy quantities of spring stock and ready for district residents.

"Farmers have to change with the times just the same as the rest of us. Each year shows some change, some years, however, the change is greater than ever. And often, too, in a case of bargain with the Dutch."

For example, last year the necessity of farmers in this section refused to plant many potatoes because the price for them was poor the year before. Now everyone seems to be planting them, judging from the number of bags I've sold so far this spring," declared one merchant recently. "This will naturally result in lower prices next fall, but there's a good demand for just the same."

"One of the biggest changes noted in the past few years has been the habit of planting and seeding grains that Quinte Banner oats were the big thing; everyone wanted to get them. Other grains may be all right, but the demand for oats has made the change over now to barley, an early oat, which is planted and matures two weeks or so before the other variety, and in those days of mid-summer drought which, according to statisticians, any customers seem to be more pronounced each year.

"Sometimes we get a run on Bay beans; at other times it's sugar beets. The list of customers seems to be watching the other fellow and following his lead. This year, besides potatoes and alfalfa, clover will be one of the heaviest crops in this district, although a good representation of grains will also be planted."

Shoals Add to Dangers Of Boating on the Bay

Memories of days, that used to be along the waterfront and in the Bay of Quinte is being revived this year by older south end residents, for the unfortunate part of the majority of the shoals and bars now completely submerged by the rise in water level, which in the Bay water has completely transformed from a shallow, grassy, and grim marsh land, that jutted into the bay in long strips during the past few years, to a deep water bay, as we see it now.

Warning is given boat owners by the more experienced boat handlers to beware of the shoals, that have been submerged, and to keep close to the port will find considerable difficulty in navigating the hidden channels and shallows, where many mariners and bonys can be set up by local craft operators.

On Monday the first call of the season is expected to be made at the local port by the Steamer Glen Alpin on the first of her regular runs between Picton, Trenton, Belleville and Mapleroad. The first cargo carried by the steamer will be empty bottles and miscellaneous freight. An oil tanker carrying a fluid cargo for the consumption of local tanks is also expected to make port about the first of the week.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

A New Comedy Team in "Tough-Guy Harrigan and Brady"

The brand new comedy team of Louise Fazenda and Maude Eburne makes its debut before local film audiences when the Mascot picture, "Tough Guy Harrigan" opens at the Capitol Theatre next Monday until Tuesday. Reports from the West Coast indicate that the comedienne and her partner in the previous audience already has established the two comedienne as the most amusing female team since Marie Dressler and Polly Moran combination.

The story is said to show Miss Fazenda and Miss Eburne as two buxom widows operating a coffee shop. Their continual altercations have become a habit over such a long period of time that they are unhappy unless fighting with each other.

Maude Eburne suddenly comes into fifty thousand dollars through the sale of a Klondike gold mine willed her by her late husband and with simple female decision decides to be painted and wear evening gowns. Louise Fazenda, on her part, becomes restless and decides to launch upon a flamboyant social career, a decision which disgusts her crony so thoroughly that for the first time in their lives the inevitable argument brings about a serious rift.

Matters thrown her hai into the social ring and the result is said to prove highly amusing. When Miss Fazenda, not to be outdone by her crony, also decides to crash the "400," comedy begets action that also has its moments of pathos.

Romance is developed through the love affair between Louise Fazenda, for Ann Rutherford, pretty daughter of Maude Eburne, which is temporarily sidetracked by a social position social barrier, but they eventually overcome the condition to win blissful romance.

When the two stars forsake their simple life for the glittering social career, elaborate sets furnished with sumptuous appointments are said to provide an interesting contrast in background.

In the spring with suits impatient, our thoughts turn to blooms. To wear with a tailor-made of the softer type there is a tuck-in blouse of white georgette with tiny frills of Valenciennes lace around the bosom section. The short sleeves have puffs of the lace.

Alderman Clarence Clapp Heads New Baseball Club Backed by Strong Executive

First Practice to be Held on Monday at Fair Grounds

HOME BREW TEAM

Delegates Named to C.O.B.L. Meeting This Afternoon

Sponsored by three local service clubs and other interested citizens, senior baseball was resurrected in Belleville with an entry into the O.B.J.B.A. last evening following a lengthy meeting at the Y.M.C.A. A complete roster of officers composed of service clubmen, and other citizens were voted into office and the future of senior baseball here definitely assumed a much brighter future. Following the election of officers attended to promptly, Belleville at today's meeting were appointed and plans laid for the wards the financing of the 1936 club. The team is to be known as the Belleville Baseball Club.

Alderman C. B. Clapp was elected to the chair of President with M. F. Duff, ex-president of the O.B.J.B.A., being chosen vice-president. Mr. Lorne McDougall was named as secretary-treasurer, while the following were named as executive members: Bill Link and Jim Orwan (Orwan), Hank Muir (Y's Men), Jack Yanover, W. E. Bowerman and Harry Hall. Mr. Duff represents Rotary, while Mr. McDougall is from the Y's Men's Club also.

Alex Weir, veteran of baseball in the Belleville senior team, was chosen as the manager of the 1936 edition of the club. He will assist with Roy Fox, ace of Toronto senior baseball circles, being named assistant, while Johnnie Weir was selected to manage the affairs of the team captain. The captain is to be officially appointed Belleville at today's O.B.J.B.A. meeting by Manager Weir and Mr. Duff.

Practice on Monday

Immediately following the meeting Chairman Clapp and Mr. Duff announced the initial practice of the senior team would be held at the Fair Grounds on Monday evening, 6.00 p.m. As far as possible, a "home brew" line-up will be selected from the O.B.J.B.A. in 1936 and all aspirants of the calibre mentioned are requested to be on hand for the initial practice of the current season.

During the evening the executive decided to immediately function in the matter of raising finances for the club. A public subscription list will be handled by the executive, in hopes of raising sufficient cash to place a team on the field, while season tickets will also be on sale before the opening game on May 24th.

During the evening applications for the transfer of players into into the Belleville area were telegraphed to the B.C.B.L. headquarters in Toronto. The Players seeking transfers to the senior team in Belleville are—Speedy" St. Louis, late of Kingston and Nelson Kipp, Roland Thrasher, Jimmy Day and almost all members of the R.C.A.F. recently stationed at Trenton. Subject to the Trenton Airmen, Kipp played senior baseball in Belleville for two seasons ago, while McCaul and Trepanier played junior ball in there town in Ontario.

One of the paramount questions dealt with by local executive was the employment of umpires during the coming season. It was decided to vote showed the Belleville executive fully in favour of returning to the neutral umpiring system again this year in vogue in the O.B.B. up until the year 1936 and found highly satisfactory. The local club felt, that the fans were against the present home and home system of umpires and that by employing neutral umpires a better feeling would be created in the game in general throughout the entire league.

All local baseball players are urged to attend Monday night's initial practice and assist in giving Belleville a banner team for 1936.

KI-Y SOFTBALL

With representatives of both the Kiwanis Club and the Y.M.C.A. present at a meeting for the organization of Ki-Y League softball, held at the Y.M.C.A. last night, the necessary arrangements were made to operate the league again this summer, commencing just as soon as possible. Some changes were made in the league rules in order to effect a more satisfactory operation and eliminate the overlapping of players participating in several leagues at the same time.

This year the Ki-Y will operate under three age groupings as follows, bantam under 12 years May 1, midget under 15 years May 1, and juvenile under 18 years May 1. The junior division which was previously operated will be discontinued because of the fact there have been very few entries of late years in this division. In addition to this the league officials will insist that all Ki-Y players refrain from playing in any other organized softball league during the period their Ki-Y League division is in operation.

ROYALS SECOND

Bob Weiland Allows Chiefs Two Hits And Wins

1-0

The Syracuse Chiefs, whose rise from "nowhere" to get into and to win the playoffs was one of the sensations of the 1935 International League season, are having plenty of trouble trying to get their comeback as a feats started again.

Hampered by cold weather in their home stand, the Chiefs have played only seven games and have won five of them. The team's top asset is any important hitting in their home park and when they went on the road they ran into Bob Weiland on one of his good days the first time out.

Weiland, finding a steaming afternoon in Rochester just to his liking, kept flinging his portside serveballs at the Chiefs all afternoon and stuck them out with two hits to win 1 to 0. It was the fourth while-washing the Chiefs have suffered this season and even more painful than the others because Big Vandenberg was in form that would have won most ball games.

Vandenberg gave only five blows and fanned seven and the only Rochester run, scored in the fifth inning just after a downpour had delayed the game 40 minutes, came without a Rochester blow. Lou Rush drew a pass and romped around the bases on an error by Dib Williams, a sacrifice and an outfield fly by pinch hitter Emil Cranbrew.

Royals' New Second.

The Montreal Royals, aiming at another pennant, moved up into second place as Lazzeri Myllykangas gave Albany plenty of hits but hung up his fourth straight victory, 4 to 2. Buffalo knocked the Baltimore Orioles down a notch, winning a 10-inning record duel between Ken Ash and Fred Blake, 4 to 3. Newark's league leaders garnered seconds with Toronto, 4 to 2.

The only runs off Myllykangas were the first of Jolley's doubts and George Savino's homer in the first. Both the Royals and Albany got 10 Orlin Rogers and lost no time in scoring one of a victory before Toronto de is Crus did the rescue act for the fourth straight day.

After losing to Jersey City, Buffalo won out before a man had been retired in the ninth. Ken Ash and Joe Mowry's bunt had crammed the corners and John Mulleavy slapped Blake for a single.

Whitey Wistert's wildness brought the end of Toronto's five-game winning streak. He granted only seven hits but gave as many walks, three of them in the seventh. George Earnshaw relieved Wistert in the fifth, Jammed and walked Merrill May to force home the winning run before he settled down to pitch hitless ball.

Dizzy Dean, Lefty Grove Show Fans Real Pitching While Teams Hit Behind Them

Cards' Hurler Allows Only Three Hits in Downing Dodgers

SENATORS COMING

Gone Moore of Bees Hits Two Homers And His Team Wins

That gangling old man from Lonacoming, Md., 36-year-old Robert Moses Grove, is being discovered again. The boys are dusting off all the old superlatives for him, unless since the last time they discovered him. They are talking about how fast he is, just how great he was.

Well, the figures may be a little too cold to speak about Mr. Grove's wisdom, but they're eloquent enough. He has pitched 27 1-3 innings and he has given exactly one earned run. He has given it to four games, all of which he won. And he has struck out eighty-two batters, he beat Cleveland Indians yesterday, giving up seven hits and two runs, not a single man and fanned nine.

While beating the Indians 6-0 yesterday, the Red Sox were getting 10 hits. This was a particularly poor day at bat for the men of Yawkey. Starting last Tuesday, they have hit for .164, .167, .143, an average of .161, so it is little wonder they are on top of the pile here.

Dizzy Pitches Three-Hitter.

The day we one on which nearly every game was featured by a fine pitching performance. Dizzy Dean pitched three-hit ball as the Cardinals plugged out a 13-0 victory over Boston Bees. Dizzy was master of finishing his first game in Nov. 1934 when he held the Browns scoreless to seven hits as the Yankees won 9-3 and Jimmy Dykes of the Red Sox stone pitched five-hit ball as Washington walloped the Browns 17-1.

Wesley Ferrell turned in seven innings of high class hurling as Cleveland defeated the Braves 6-4; Lee Grissom, left hander making his first appearance of the year, pitched Cincinnati to a 4-3 win over the Phillies and Elton Auker of Detroit Tigers, was master of all he surveyed as he singled in the sixth to drive home the run in a 4-3 victory over the Athletics and pitched eight-hit ball to boot.

Dean, likened the Dodgers a lone hit in the first inning and then set them down in order until the ninth when they succeeded in getting another. The Cards, however, piled up 16 hits, five of them in the seventh inning for seven runs. Two of the runs were scored on Dean.

Browns Hurlers Nicked.

The Senators nicked three Browns pitchers for 18 hits, starting off in the first inning with a seven-run rumpus off Jimmy Wakkup who retired in the first inning after Ossie Bluege was out in the second. Elon Hogsett, who relieved him, gave 11 hits in the next five innings, three of which he only relieved by Mike Meola.

George Turbeville held the Tigers to seven hits but he weakened in the ninth when Tigers got a run and run lead. Marvin Owen tripled to send Gerald Walker across with the first one and then Owen scored on Ray Hayworth's single. Turbeville pitched pretty tight ball for the rest of the game.

Lefty Moore walloped two homers to aid the Bees' cause against the pirates, his second bat being something of a record. The ball sailed over the left field wall in the seventh and old timers said it was the first time a left hand batter had cleared that wall.

Both Grissom of the Reds and Joe Bowman of the Phillies pitched seven hit ball but Grissom was aided by more timely hitting.

The Giants-Cubs game was rained out.

DONOVAN MEETS THE "UNKNOWN"

Main Bout Beat Since Wrestling Opened This Season

After a couple of days of negotiations, Jack Corcoran has succeeded in arranging what unquestionably will be the outstanding wrestling bout ever offered the fans in Belleville. He announced by mail yesterday today that he finally has secured contracts from The Unknown, sensational mystery wrestler, and Irish Jack Donovan of Boston for the main bout of next Tuesday's show at the Belleville arena.

The Unknown, heralded as an unbeatable wrestler, has won both his starts in Belleville, the first from Ed Meake and the second from Andy Soger. He has drawn form which entitles him to rating as a leading challenger for world honors but it is just a question of whether or not his judgment erred when he agreed to oppose the Boston red-head.

Donovan has been here just once but that was enough to make him an outstanding favorite. He met Al Dunlop in a sensational match on April 21 and there was been disappointment when it was learned that he was unable to come back for last week's show owing to an engagement in Boston.

As is usual when The Unknown wrestles, the bout will be conducted on a winner-take-all basis, which stipulation proved a big popularity agreeable to Donovan.

In the semi-final Andy Meon of Simmonsville and Ed Meake, Ohio State champion, both of whom have made good to the satisfaction of fans of this district, will be opposed. It is a six-man match and will be featured by fast, clever wrestling.

Chief Lynx, the colorful Indian and Al Dunlop will be in the preliminary which, on any ordinary night, would be worthy of a main bout position.

GOLF
BY ALEX MORRISON

As the troubled sleeper looks for the cause of his nightmares, so the golfer searches for the point where he gets an overdose of right side into his swing.

"Too much right" can start in a million different ways. Once started it sweeps like a raging fire through the whole swing. And it takes only a spark of encouragement to put the strong side in control.

Very often it's hard to locate the spark that started the uncontrolled side right. Such a spark occurs when the hands are being placed on the club. Since it is only natural to lead with and favor the right hand, a player will go astray even though he intends to favor and give more of his attention to his left hand.

This leads to the habit of placing the right hand on the club first, a habit which may seem harmless, but which really marks the beginning of "too much right." Place your left hand on the club first.

DAY BY DAY

Belleville's senior baseball ship sailed out under a splendid breeze last night and today he will under canvas. Thanks to the united and untiring efforts of a few loyal and faithful citizens, a baseball club the town. The Rotary, Kiwanis and Y's Men's clubs are all duly represented on the newly selected executive, that will guide the destinies of senior baseball in Belleville, along with a number of interested citizens. Last night's meeting was one of the best attended, from the general citizen's viewpoint, that has been held in Belleville of recent years. Congratulations were in order for Alderman C. B. Clapp on his appointment as President. Mr. Clapp has been closely connected with senior baseball in Belleville for the past three years and should prove a valued head. One of his first requests, however, was the assistance of all members of the newly appointed baseball committee. "Gentlemen, this is our ball team and its success depends on us. I want you all put into it, thank you," he added.

It took considerable time and many effort to launch the 1936 senior baseball ship in Belleville, but once the ball commenced to roll it gained speed with rapidity. Alex Weir, who was brought up on baseball from the sandlots on the cob of the ladder in Belleville, was named as the manager of the 1936 edition of the Belleville Baseball Club and will be assisted by Roy Fox, ace and veteran Toronto baseball star. Immediately following the meeting, the manager and Fox were announced, that the first practice of the Belleville team would be held at the Fair Grounds on Monday evening, every player present and man desiring to try out is urged to be on hand, as the executive is endeavouring to field a strong team, if not the best possible. No positions have been decided to say never and the player making the best showing during the pre-season workouts will be given first call on the team, it was definitely announced last night.

During the meeting some splendid news was relayed to the executive, when it was learned that three members of the R.C.A.F. stationed at Trenton are baseball players, but as soon as they were moved to their new quarters from Camp Borden, Ont., application for their transfer was wired to the O.B.J.B.A. early last night and will be brought up immediately. Besides Belleville, has applications for the transfer of "Speedy" St. Louis, the Kingston Pony player, was also included in the three players at the R.C.A.F. are Nelson Kipp, Roland Thrasher and Jim Day. Should the latter two hailing originally from Orillia, while Kipp's home was in Brantford.

Yes, senior baseball, once it commenced to move, made a decided step forward in Belleville last night and under a splendid executive that is bound to be one of the teams to be labled by the local delegates to the C.O.B.L. meeting held at the "Y", will be the employment of neutral umpires for the season. The newly elected Belleville executive are firmly against the present umpiring system in all its phases.

Two softball investigations were in progress at the "Y" last night also. Lloyd Barnard and Harold Bawden each entered teams in the proposed Will Street League while the Ki-Y softball executive convened and decided to drop their series this year. With a slight change in the matter of playing ages, the Ki-Y league will operate three series, bantam, midget and juvenile. Applications for affiliation are now being received at the "Y".

Considerable business is on today's C.O.B.L. agenda. Today is the day for all proposed changes of the league constitution and bylaws. Already Kingston has given notice of one proposed change. The Limestone City moguls are proposing that each club be allowed to post a flat guarantee of $70 at the opening game of the 1936 league, thereby eliminating the centenary exchange of $25 that is given each visiting team for a guarantee for the return game by the home club. The reasons for the change given by the Penders is the delay that is experienced by the visiting team in collecting their guarantee after the ball game. From the general baseball viewpoint we would think this evil could be easily remedied by concerns by merely making the home team pay the usual $35 guarantee before the game starts.

Local fans who remember Frank McCallum, who cavorted about at first base for Cobourg some seasons ago, will be surprised to learn that Frank has been named as coach of the Peterboro Cheries in the C.O.B.J. Tuesday over at the arena we got into a fencing match with Steve Conrad, the Polish lad who was awarded his bout with Dunlop when the latter continued to foul too frequently. "Joking aside, Steve, are all these wrestling matches fixed?" we fired at him, but kept just out of arms reach. "No they are not all fixed, but every time they were I challenge you to show me where you can get me out of the way," was the retort from your money as in a well-matched wrestling bout. Conrad here, in the old days a wrestler would get a hold and merely lie down and wait the opponent to struggle free, but that old system has been cached among the relics. We think he is right, but we also realize that action is needed to interest the fans, so now some times get a little rougher than necessary. Of course if you or any of your friends have any fixed wrestling with me, well, I don't bar any holds." Ed Lamb, lawyer, hotel czar or baseball, ordered all clubs to refrain from making additional contracts with radio announcer Landis' ruling resulted from a complaint by W. G. Bramham, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs, a major league group, that the broadcasting of major league games was cutting down attendance at minor league ball parks.

HITS BROADCASTS—In s ruling a Chicago which was seen as a forerunner of a move to take the play-by-play descriptions of baseball off the air, Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball czar of baseball, ordered all clubs to refrain from making additional contracts with radio announcers. Landis' ruling resulted from a complaint by W. G. Bramham, president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs, a major league group, that the broadcasting of major league games was cutting down attendance at minor league ball parks.

MAIDEN VOYAGE

BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments:

Antoinette Tait makes good secretary editor of the Star Magazine Call and is delighted with her job but is perhaps overawed by her boss, Joe Larry Bellamy whom she met while job-hunting. He was publisher of the Journal. Since then the Journal has been merged with the Call and Larry is associate editor. Tony meets his wife Ruth Bellamy, and they suddenly take to each other and they become fast friends. Ruth is four years older than Larry. Tony's sister Brenda marries young Dr. Alfred Atwater of Hartsdale and her brother Cliff marries Mary Rose Wy. Ruth's nephew, Joe Vanderwall, a young doctor, had trouble with bluejob research, falls in love with Tony. The stories set against this background tell us how she was tricked into bequeathing the job to an elderly school teacher, and recognizes its indignation. Larry insists she must have it back and suddenly she is in his arms. Tony and the Bellamys go to Joe's cottage. Brenda and Carmel and Tony break an engagement to drive back with friends to go with Larry. Tony decides she must go away; she goes to Reno. Larry follows her. At midnight a tire goes flat, they go to a tavern for help and Tony discover the celebrated Donny murdered. Tony and Larry are suddenly in the spotlight and Ruth insists that Larry go to China. Meanwhile Mrs. Patterson, her mother, and Caroline Polhemus, Joe's twice widowed sister-in-law, arrive. Mrs. Patterson has a stroke and they take a cottage. Meanwhile Ruth is killed in a street accident.

INSTALMENT 27

"Oh, Tony," said Brenda. "It's terrible and. But it means your happiness. Nothing can stop you now!"

Tony was standing at the window of Brenda's apartment as she Parkview Road. It was quiet, and the slowly, looking down into busy Market street. "But I won't think of it," she said, "I won't think of it, not think, I'm working hard. Something else can tell what's going to happen."

"Tony, you're thought that it was tonky—oh, that's not the word. Have you thought that it was strange that Larry is in Chicago?"

"Yes, I did think of that." Tony laughed restlessly, turning away from her scrutiny of the street.

Have you had any word from Tony?"

"Not yet. At first he wrote. The letters—twice. I destroyed them. One or two, at first, I read. But I've got it done, now."

"I think that was heroic."

"It was anything else but a little laugh.

"And do you feel the same as you did?" the older sister asked a little timidly.

"Ah, my dear, if you knew," Tony said under her breath.

"I—should think it would," said Tony. "This is a cheating shower. Look at this hair! They'll simply hold me in the water. The children will be much better at the asparagus we haven't had it for years. Oh, I'm a fright, I know."

Tony's cheeks were flushed with heat, laughter, excitement; it was true that her hair was wet and in her eyes. But she looked, in spite of herself, extraordinarily lovely, and Brenda looked dotingly at the faces of her nurses.

Mrs. Patterson had had a slight stroke. Tony wrinkled her brows trying to remember how long ago it was. They had gone to China and after leisurely visits to Hongkong, Kobe, Peking, had gone on through the Suez Canal to Marseilles. That had been about three months, or no, more than a year ago. Then in October, Ruth and Mrs. Patterson had been seriously ill, and afterward Mrs. Patterson had been stricken down.

Immediately, Ruth, always the devoted daughter, had rented a villa, had established the whole family comfortably within it. Then Ruth had been shotted two great sons—two nurses had been found somehow, an American girl and a German woman, and Ruth had had all settled down to the new environment in the new way of life.

Larry was writing news letters for some syndicate, was writing a book. He had been badly pulled down by his illness; it had come after the troublesome form of typhoid and it had left him weak and lazy. Caroline and Joe came to the accounts of his willingness to be managed, to be idle.

Now they would give up the villa—or rent it, and Mrs. Patterson be installed there, perhaps not well enough to move? Tony would have a letter today? Any day, they had to hurry, and then she would be on the ocean.

Meanwhile there was the office. There would be a shower for Tony today; Larry was holding but a passive position among the stock-holders; now and then they wired him for an option, that was all.

For the rest, there were Bruce's interests to follow—her younger brother was a sophomore at the state university now; Brenda's second daughter, Ruth, was a sophomore junior, was only a few weeks older than Cliff's baby daughter. Alvin was on the hospital staff now and Brenda was a good practice, and Brenda was assisted by a darkhaired, pretty girl, a Miss Gertrude Bland. Ellis.

Tony's happiest times in this strange interval were spent with Joe in his assisted invalid's chair, with Joe. Together they had designed the great fireplace at the end of the sitting-room and had together planned the first successful fire there. Joe's gentleness wide terrain, flagged in terra cotta red, had been opened at the south side of the house; there were French floor-to-down in the sitting-room and dining-room and the gay striped awning over the terrace sent a mellow light into the rooms.

Tony knew the little domain thoroughly now. She and Joe had had many busy hours together. After Ruth's death it was the only place she wanted to go, whenever she could. They went down to Brenda's to dinner, or Brenda came to them.

She knew what he felt for her, but he never made her uncomfortable by any reference to it. They were merely the best of companions during those days; they fussed together over Mrs. Patterson, they planned out roasts and salads. Her beauty was in its glory; she was conscious of it, even now, a newspaper woman of Caroline's type, a woman who was used to and superb in her role of friend and companion to an infirming mother-in-law, could not help but feel that the last touch of romance was added to her charm. Joe was the only man somewhere in the world was the distant man, the man who was coming for her; she would presently have her marvelous hour. Under the spell of that thought Tony's manner to Joe—and Joe—and sometimes Caroline—was a little too kind, sometimes Cliff and Mary Rose, Joe's mother, Brenda and Alvin, for hours, the thrilling consciousness that Larry was coming back to the world, alive, thinking of her, moved like a shining current, sounded like a golden bell in her ears.

"Have you heard anything from Larry?" Joe would ask casually, and he and she happened to be alone.

In April Alvin was calling in about over Joe's new garden and over the young bushes and poplars and talking to a sibling who had called for the first time.

Shedding their wet outer garments, and leaving their soaked shoes at whether they went into the kitchen, to sudden almost of the sun, and the rise of the winds and the sea.

Caroline was there, too. Probably they're not coming and Brenda would have finished our walk! Bits on the shower!"

Not waiting until he opened she went and began to pace the room.

"Oh, why didn't I think of this! It would be such a sailor! I would have made it easier! Oh, Joe, I have no shame. I'm so sorry. I love him, when he loves her. I'm simply a beast."

She sat down on the fireside setting and put her head into her hands. Joe's shoulders shook and knew that she was crying; patiently in a age she was perfect again. "How dared he—how could he do such a thing? Her eyes glittering dark blue in her white face. "How dare a man treat a woman who loves him that way! Ah, but she wanted him, Joe," said, crumpling, passionately, hopelessly again. "She wanted him, and he knew it so kind so generous—"

A silence, during which the man smoked and watched her. Then suddenly she looked up, spoke quietly, as if in her very kindness to Bendy's. I'm glad I was here, Joe's here with you. I'm all right, I'll make her forgive me for this hardly. We might have known s'thin, that's all the letters, taking care of him all the time."

"I'll get used to it after a minute. You do. I wish I could help you."

For a moment her whole body was in tension, as if tempted to fly from her arms flung up, her head thrown back and her mouth opened as if to find breath.

"I couldn't do a thing like that is a dog!" she whispered, collapsing again. "I could not, Joe. It's not in me. I'm not built for it; no, I couldn't do it to anyone!"

Joe put his cheek on the settle and I'll tell Brenda, if she phones. I'll tell Caroline you're coming. I'll bring you home. Lie there a while and you'll be all right."

Tony, with clenched pillows behind her back as Tony obediently crouched herself on the deep window seat; he settled himself in his own shabby leather chair with his pipe.

"It doesn't somehow seem like Larry," Tony presently offered in a little voice.

"Larry was never what you thought he was."

"It hurts me—somehow it hurts me horribly to have you feel that."

"I suppose it does. I'm not shocking him, dear child," he said. "You don't know how much I love you. I know you. I know what you are, and that I'm the husband for you. We're alike. We like the same things. We talk the same language."

Tony and Larry aren't alike. I'm not saying this to make you feel any better, I—you will feel rotten tonight. And for a long time to get it'll take you a long time to get tonight, I'll tell I say this to you love—well this place, and the ocean and the birds and the dogs, and all that.

He doesn't. He's Lorraine the Magnificent."

The girl laughed weakly; her face crinkled into tears. "Oh, he is," she said in a moment.

"Ruth was rich; Larry's probably inherited a fortune. He's rich now; he likes it that way. You and Larry never would have seen eye to eye."

Tony was not listening. Her long lashes lifted suddenly in the lamplight, she was looking thoughtfully at the fire.

"It have no letter now," she said. "I have had one. But it has come into the office with mail—Oh, Joe, why did it have to happen that I was in love with him to be the woman to live through this?"

"I don't know," Joe said.

"I don't know," said Joe then, presently. "I'm sorry, Tony. That's unhappy little laugh died away into another long pause when Tony spoke. "You women are strange," said Joe. "You have Larry's gratitude, you feel that Larry is gentlement, curiously. You have his love, his name, hope to him carry you off, make love to you—"

"Thank you," Tony said dryly, as he paused, pondering over his words.

"Knowing," Joe continued as if she had not spoken, "knowing that, knowing that whatever men in marriage, that Larry is gentlement, that it can't last, it never does—whatever it is that Ruth thinks he has, you have that make them shy, I'd'd rather have him mean to tie his hat into knots, than to be what he is waiting, despise not, throw me this thing and that thing to do."

Tony swallowed; she lay, silent, staring at the fire. Joe, watching her, saw that and that she must go and, Joe making no protests, she went upstairs, and Joe, as he had noticed that when she came down she walked more slowly, as if those were broken in body as well as spirit. At the door she leaned against it.

"I wish I could stay here, alone with you, and never see anybody any of them—any of them, again!"

"Stay I'm not," Joe said.

"You're so tremendously comforting to me," said Tony; her eyes on the fire. Her head rested on his shoulder for a moment. "I'm so sorry, Joe, dear, that I've had to feel this tonight. I'll wait tonight. I'll wait Caroline and Brenda, I don't have to face everyone—Aunt Meg, Mary Rose, she'll pity me so that I shall scream. I'll—"

"Nonsense!" Joe s'rid briskly, as Tony paused. "You're not to do anything of the sort. You're not serious as you make it. You had a crush on him; that's all."

She laughed a broken laugh. "You're very—comforting."

"I'm not. I'm going to go down there for the Foundation' for three years. It's a pip of a house."

"Stop treating out here, and come in and get warm," Tony said.

He had risen to his feet; Larry sent the driver away with careful instructions.

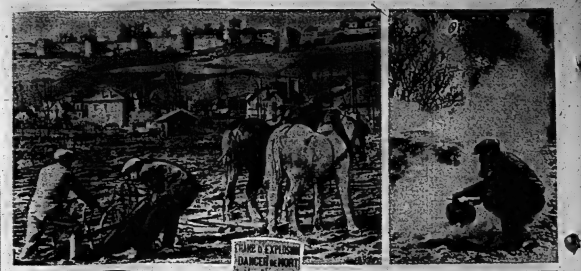
"Get your dinner's at the hotel, and come back here, Joe, you can give us dinner?"

"Can do."

"Joe, we're buried in food. We're ham, we're enchiladas, we're algaroba—"

"Oh, fine!" Larry said. He grip-ped Joe's hand. "Joe, it's been seems good to get back and hear you all. Tony—your aunt, and Cliff and Brenda!"

Notwithstanding. My brother Bruce has a political job in Sacramento, and he and his wife and Cliff's married, you know, and they'd think she added almost coldly, "I think" she added almost coldly, "I think" she added Caroline more than you think you do, Larry. Joe knows, but the others don't, and we kept it quiet. They wanted her to have a little time to herself and break some one else in."



"Well, I'm sorry I was the reason for the secrecy with us," Caroline observed slippingly after a somewhat awkward pause of congratulations and congratulations, and the evening was over. Tony went upstairs with Joe.

"Something tells me that I'll never forget this room as long as I live," Tony observed, in reference to this parting shot, when they were gone. "Somehow I feel that I shall remember only the evening. Tony, did you have a fire in here?"

"While I was getting dinner, yes. You're so wise and you're so good, you're so sane and so strong, and you're so sorry for me, Joe. You're so wise and you're so good, you're so sane and so strong and you're sorry for me, Joe, you're so sorry for me, Joe, you

MOUNT VESUVIUS REPORTED IN ERUPTION AGAIN—Dersigno, Bosco, and Cremea, three towns on the side of Mt. Vesuvius, located within a mile of the central crater of the volcano, near Naples, Italy, are reported as in the path of a towering wall of incandescent lava, that is pushing down Vesuvius' side as a result of a new eruptive outbreak. The "most serious eruption since 1929," is the way the dispatches describe the outbreak. This picture is a grim record of an earlier eruption. BATTLEFIELDS OF FRANCE STILL YIELD ENGINES OF DESTRUCTION—Though war no longer rages across the fields of France, dangerous reminders in the form of unexploded shells and bombs remain to kill and maim the unwary farmer. An emergency in France has since the war, removed 1,500,000 tons of ammunition from former battlefields. The shells are taken to a woods near Coucy-le-Chateau, where they are exploded or emptied. The layout above shows, UPPER RIGHT, a gas bomb being exploded. LOWER LEFT, a few of the shells unearthed, some without fuses, LOWER RIGHT, the entrance to the farm at Coucy, where shells are exploded.

INVITED TO COMPETE AT CHICAGO—Those three girl sprint aces from Toronto have been invited by Chicago promoters to compete against the pick of American lassies in an indoor meet in the Windy City, where they will show their wares in a sprint relay and a special 40-yard event. One or two other Toronto girls will make up the party if the invitation is accepted. The three attractive Buttrippers shown are pretty Olive Binder on the LEFT, with Hilda Cameron, TOP, RIGHT, and Thelma Norton, LOWER RIGHT.

FAMOUS JONKER DIAMOND CUT—Successful cleavage of the celebrated $750,000 Jonker diamond has been finally accomplished by Leo Kaplan (LEFT), and his father, Lazare Kaplan. Slicing of the stone into three pieces was accomplished, without mishap, after Mr. Kaplan, Sr. had studied the gem for a year; had consulted with diamond cutters throughout the world, and finally, had taken off to the quiets of a woodland stream for three days of fishing and quieting of nerves before tackling the difficult task. First Mr. Kaplan cut off a 36-carat piece from the stone. Then came the job that required delicate handling and a bit of engineering skill. To make the main cleavage, a V-shaped groove was cut in the direction that the stone was to be cut. Then a specially prepared steel wedge was inserted in the groove, and a quick blow of a metal rod on the wedge completed the job. No crack or flaw resulted from the sundering, and now, besides the 36-carat piece, there are also one of 185 carats, and one of 303. The stone originally weighed 726 carats. It is owned by Harry Winston, New York. Eventually twelve stones will be cut, ranging from 10 carats to 165, and 300 carats will be lost in the cutting. However, as one piece the Jonker diamond probably never would have been marketable. Made into a necklace, or sold individually, the twelve cut gems will be valued at approximately $2,000,000. So delicate was the task that even Lloyds turned down insurance.

Trenton, N.J., May 1. —(AP)— The unemployed group that lived nine days in New Jersey's Assembly Chamber in an attempt to force the Legislature to vote relief funds, evacuated today without achieving its purpose. The Legislature adjourned for five days without providing the money the jobless demanded. Tired, heavy-eyed but still of lusty voice, the crowd of 300 filed silently from the State House after scoring the Legislature for its failure to replenish empty State relief coffers.

ONE WAY STREET

by JOSEPH McCORD

"Would it help him . . . so much?" "I know it. And you'll be repaid a thousand fold," Stewart spoke earnestly, half afraid that the girl was dreading the prospect. "You'll have nearly fifteen minutes at Cedarcorners . . . no chance of missing his train."

"Are you sure?"

"He lives in black and white. If I were you, I wouldn't bother to come down here Wednesday morning. If there's any explaining to be done, I'll attend to it. It is going to be one difficult—"

"No . . ." Jean returned hesitatingly. "It's just that I hadn't thought of it. Are you sure he will want to see me . . . like that?"

"If I were in his place, I would want to more than anything in the world."

"I'll go, Mr. Stewart. Thank you." Emory Stewart was kinder than he knew when he warned Jean that she would find her father greatly changed by his years behind the gloomy walls of Kingston Penitentiary.

The slight man who shuffled through the streets on his way to and from the railroad station, that following Wednesday morning, bore but scant resemblance to the one-time bank employee of Gorham. His suit of clothing was shapeless and ill-fitted. He wore a cap pulled low over the dark eyes that darted furtively as he walked close to the buildings always, as though trying to make himself as inconspicuous as possible.

John Sawyer was going home today.

Strangely enough, he was John Sawyer. For what had seemed a life-time, he had been a number only—"1887."

The five digits were stamped on the back of the denim jacket into which he had thrust his head, should sea every morning. In other obnoxious ways they dominated his activities at Kingston.

Now, the number had vanished into the prison files. His own name had been handed back to him.

It was a parting gift from Jean as the suit of clothes Sawyer had scanned curiously before donning, preacting to discover that lurking "1887". There also was a five-dollar bill and three words of advice about living up to the condition of his parole. If he "went straight" he might save both himself and his Jean considerable trouble.

"I'm not very much worried about you, Sawyer," the warden summed him with a friendly smile. "You're no crook. I believe you've learned your account pretty well to fall."

"I've tried to, Warden."

"Well, I wish some of the boys would follow your example. If I ever can do anything to help you, I want you to come to me . . . as a friend. You'll find it hard to go back and face things. But you'll do it. Keep a stiff upper lip and stay close to that family. They're good."

"I know that."

"And don't have any more to do with your local authorities than you have to. Sometimes police are tempted to take some advantage or men like you, know what I mean?"

"I think so, sir."

"All right, then. Good-bye, Sawyer. Lots of luck."

Those words came back to the traveller when he found himself alone on the train at last. It was hot in the car. Almost, he fancied, exhaling of that as he huddled close to an open window of the day coach, tongues of cool sea-breeze were furiously on the cinder-sprinkled sill. How good the heat of the sun felt when on his face. A long time since he really had breathed.

For the moment, Sawyer was oblivious to the curious glances of his meagre neighbors. He can could not conceal the fact that the gray hair beneath it was clipped close to the skull. That hair cut, his clothing and, above all, the peculiar pallor of the face catalogues him ruthlessly. As final evidence of his past, behind him, his lips moved almost constantly and without sound. Conversation with others would not break him of that.

Shortly the wheels clicked over the running rail joints. Their cadence seemed to be caught by the telegraph poles marching swiftly to the rear, hands joined. Restful to see fields again. The velvety green of winter wheat, stubble of last year's corn swinging past in rows, scattered patches of woodland with their fresh foliage.

Ye Year sat close to John Sawyer and looked over his shoulder.

There was no escaping the dread of seeing familiar faces, of meeting former friends. The prisoner must found himself speculating if it would be possible to leave the train at one of these small towns . . . to try to find work on a farm, to bury himself and his past for a time. No one. Too great a risk. And there was too much to make up to the family . . . to Jean. She had tried so hard to take his place. Not fair to . . . her.

Strange John Junior never had written. . . . Would have been a great help to his mother these past few years. A fine father he had been to the boy. PEGGY and Madge . . . poor baby. She wouldn't know him. What had they told her about her daddy?

Through the fog youngest child drew Sawyer's attention to a parcel on the seat beside him. Brown paper and newspaper wrappings and bound the unwinking eyes of a doll. Golden curls, still fluffy from the wood, cleverly jointed. Cotton thread smocked dress, of frilly red, had something done service by a handkerchief. All this was the handiwork of a former cell-block neighbor, Old Donnegan was in the hospital ward. He never would come out. Very near the end of that life sentence, Donnegan . . .

Sawyer rewrapped the doll with a sigh and leaned again to the window. He cringed when a locomotive flashed past within a few feet of his face. . . . That would be the northbound local.

Another hour.

Fear found another fellow traveler that same day.

It was Jean Sawyer, arrived at Cascoyne Junction and empowered her quarter-hour wait with a restless promenade back and forth on the long platform. She had taken off her head band, hands thrust deep into the pockets of her light coat.

She, too, was building a nameless dream. The dread of that meeting of Daddy Jack. "He loved him . . . Ol'-course she loved him! And during that moment of meeting it had been so long. What would he look like? What would he do when he saw her? People would be there. They would stare. She must not cry . . . no matter what.

A plan suggested itself. When the train came in, she would board the rear coach. That would mean most of the passengers would have their backs turned towards her while she conducted her search. She might see Daddy Jack before he was aware of her presence, might make sure that she had her nerves under control.

INSTALMENT 10.

A thread of smoke in the distance. Out where the rails met was a black dot, growing larger and larger. The blast of a far-off whistle following a puff of vapor. Jean walked slowly to meet the coming train.

The big locomotive clanking and blasting past her, slowing to a grinding halt.

"That's the smoker, Miss."

Heedless of this information, offered by a smiling station employee, Jean brushed past him and clambered up the steps. To her great relief there was no sign of Daddy Jack among the scattered passengers who stared at her as she made her way hastily down the aisle.

Before she had completed her search of the car ahead, the train was in motion. One more coach . . . or were there two? The next door was hard to open and resisted Jean's efforts for a moment. The conductor on his rounds came to her rescue.

"Ticket, please."

"Oh, yes."

She fumbled the pasteboard from her bag and surrendered it, noting with relief that there were comparatively few passengers here. It would be easier . . .

There he was . . . Daddy Jack!

Jean steadied herself by clutching the back of the nearest seat. Her knees should have done so, a sudden mist before her eyes. It was Daddy Jack . . . But so changed. He looked like any old man. He was . . . There shot out the picture. This would never do.

She must steadily gaze a spot directly behind her father and not let her feet from him. Only...his head was visible and she stared at it as if fascinated. Her confused mind recalled now that all the old memories must be reconstructed. She was looking at a stranger.

John Sawyer suddenly shifted his position. Jean caught her breath sharply. She was sure he was on the point of rising; he would be almost certain to glance in her direction. But he was leaning towards the aisle, watching something there.

It proved to be a very little girl, scarcely more than a baby. She had slipped to the floor and was gazing intently at her neighbor across the way.

"Come over here, sweetheart." John Sawyer smiled and held out his hand.

Jean raised in her seat and watched breathlessly. That was Daddy Jack now! His voice his smile . . . the little wrinkles at the corners of his eye. Children and dogs never had been known to resist that invitation. Doddie pursed her small mouth doubtfully, took one unsteady step forward. Her bravery then flat went out.

The child's mother was stout and overdressed, reading a magazine with a lurid cover. She paused long enough to view the exchange of greetings in the aisle somewhat doubtfully. Her eyes sought the printed page again as Sawyer's fingers closed gently over a small fat arm.

"Would you like to see a pretty doll-baby? Wait . . ." There was a hurried movement.

The child must have surrendered completely to her new friend. Jean saw her father's shoulders change their position. She knew one arm was encircling his small guest. He was looking down at her and Jean wished she might see his face. He would be thinking of Bridget . . . not far away now.

"Janet!" A high-pitched voice from across the way. "Come here to mother."

The baby's name was Jean!

John Sawyer's head came up with a startled jerk. The child was lifted to his feet and piloted his small charge, struggling her steps with both his hands. He lifted her to a place beside her parent, lingered, stood down wistfully. Then, aware for companionship was very evidently lost, he coughed apologetically.

"I have a girl named Jean," he ventured.

"Thank you!" The woman glanced up in an annoyed fashion, then resumed her study of the story she was reading. There was a slight frown upon her placid brow.

"Yes," the man persisted with pathetic eagerness, "but she's grown up. And I've a little granddaughter . . . Peggy. The youngest one is Madge."

"That's nice." This time, the reader did not take the trouble to look up.

Sawyer held her breath as she watched the little drama. What was going to happen next? Her father was speaking again, raising his voice above the noise of the train. It was so unlike the vibrant voice she remembered.

"The last time I saw Madge she wasn't quite as big as your Jean. Peggy had her out in the go-cart and I . . ."

"Where have you been?"

The magazine was lowered. Two pale eyes stared up suspiciously. The words carried a shrill sharp edge.

"I . . . I have been away for a time."

"I thought so!"

The magazine fell to the floor. Two plump indignant hands snatched at the baby. Young Jean was thrust urgently into the small space between her mother and the window. After that, the magazine was retrieved with a disdainful moan.

Jean Sawyer watched her father shuffle back to his seat, eyes averted, mouth quivering like a hurt child's. She sprang to her feet.

All the resentment, all the fear, all the loneliness and anguish that had been in her heart in one swift rush of tenderness. She herself down upon her father and . . .

"Daddy Jack!" A sob welled up. "Daddy . . . Here I am . . ."

"It's Bunny!"

Sawyer swayed a strident voice from the car door. "All change! Gorham!"

Building in close-set patches. Factories and shops fringed with grimy boxes. Lowered gates at street crossings. Trucks and trolley cars halted by striped barriers as the train rolled past.

"Daddy Jack!" Jean nestled closer to her father. The clasp of her hand on his tightened.

"Yes, dear."

"You know. I didn't go to the store this morning. I really should for a while."

"That all right. I would just as soon go home alone, now that I've seen you . . . Bunnie."

Sudden gloom and the sounding echoes of a train shed. A parking hall.

"Gorham! This way out!"

Jean, still holding close to her father's arm, guided him hastily into the crowd about the gate.

"Hey! Just a minute. I mean you . . . Mr. Sawyer!"

The girl felt her charge cringe close against her as she turned and glanced curiously at the speaker. A stranger. A stout man with an unlighted cigar thrust aggressively in one corner of his mouth. He was barring the way now.

"So you're back among us, sir!" The man's manner mustered an anxious smile. . . .

"Yes, sir." Sawyer mustered an answering smile. "I'm glad to be back."

"Well, they'd turned you out."

"Yes, sir."

"Okay. I'll be seein' you."

"Daddy, who was that?" Jean whispered it sharply as her father urged her forward.

"An officer."

At Front Street Jean took reluctant leave of her father. Once she turned and waved her hand. He still was watching after her and returned the signal. Then he turned and went his way, to locate the home he never had seen. He was It couldn't be!

"Cool" exclaimed Dick with a sigh of relief, "I could almost like him!" With great difficulty the boys began to converse with the big black. "What are you going to do with him?" Dick asked. "What for?" "Make us fat to eat," the black explained simply.

"Cannibals!" murmured Dick: "oh, golly, Doc, it's awful." "It hasn't happened yet," his cousin replied with a grim smile; "and they've got to up to us to see that it doesn't happen. We mustn't give up, Dick—not until they begin to eat which is preferred, light meat or dark!"

glad it was in a strange neighborhood. There would be less chance of his being recognized by former friends. Much better to see his wife and children first.

Seemingly familiar, these streets. Dodge, Linden. The next would be Bridge.

Sawyer turned his best corner and commenced scanning the house numbers. Three twenty-eight. That would be on the other side of the street. There . . . some one on the front step.

It was a small girl sitting alone in the sunshine, playing jacks. Sawyer's heart gave an excited leap. Could it be Madge? Baby Madge? That sturdy youngster with tumbled curls, bare-legged.

"Hello, little one."

"Hello," came the ready response. One careless glance at the strange man. The rubber ball bounced sharply. Clumsy fingers grimly scooped up the jacks.

"What is your name?"

"Madge." The ball rolled away. The child was staring curiously at the paper parcel.

"Madge Sawyer?" It came out falteringly.

"Ah-huh."

"You don't know me . . . do you?" An emphatic shake of the head was the answer to that.

"You are . . . I'm your . . . daddy."

"Did you bring me somethin'?"

ardent requirements. Lower duties and drawbacks on manufacturing machinery and equipment materials are also desirable now if Canada is to retain and develop export trade.

Apart from an increase in the corporation tax, other changes are made in the income tax rates. Individual incomes remain at the old rates.

Mining companies receive some encouragement in the carving out of properties in a three year tax exemption on new mines brought into operation from now on. There is no reduction in the rate, but Mr. Dunning gave assurance of no discriminatory taxation against mines, while the government remains in office.

New U. K.-Canada Pact

On trade generally Mr. Dunning reviewed the openings of the Canada-United States agreement and forecast early negotiations looking to an extension of trade with United Kingdom. Just as the provisions of the United Kingdom agreement had been scrupulously safeguarded by making the United States treaty, so would the latter treaty be safeguarded in any negotiations with the British Isles.

Although the terms of the United Kingdom agreement had been preserved to the latter the British trading position in Canada had been adversely affected by the reduction of duties against the United States and in advance of negotiations with that commodities were made on British imports in the house.

Nearly half the items in the Canadian tariff are now free under the British preference, and Mr. Dunning. The Canadian government accepted the principle of support from British government began the consequently favourable attitude of Canada towards British goods would be taken into consideration.

The house heard conservating tariffs back into the schedules. There were 150 changes in all with a wide range of items in Mr. Dunning's 1936 budget. Six months later they were abolished by the government when it achieved. Now they are restored on three items, the 10 per cent. duty on potatoes.

Their operation is to apply the same rate of duty on these products as the country from which they are imported pays on the same products coming from Canada.

Duty to Prevent

Under the United States treaty flowers and potatoes enter Canada duty free by virtue of the interpolitical tariff rate, but the United States maintained a stiff duty on the same products coming from Canada. Now Canada will immediately place the same duty against the United States.

Recommendations of the Tariff Board on textiles, gasoline and automobiles were incorporated in the tariff without alteration. The textile changes are all in favor of the United States, and mean the removal of specific duty on cotton and artificial silk yarns and fabrics in the British preference column. Advalorem rates remain as they were. Duties on clothing made from these fabrics are subject to corresponding reduction.

The United States treaty, coupled with the budget reductions, has involved a widespread tariff effective downward move in the tariff. Mr. Dunning said. Many Canadian items are now lower in rate than when the former Liberal government left office in 1930.

The government felt satisfactory progress had been made in the move towards freer trade as it did not believe in abrupt changes, however. Orderly progress was always better. This policy was particularly wise in view of the revision of many of the Empire trade agreements, Mr. Dunning said.

The budget affected 104 reductions in the tariff and 13 increases.

Toronto, May 2—(CP)—The mining section of the Toronto milkly unsettled in the closing session of the week, predominantly irregular and slow trading. There was no indication that the new budget had affected the market either way.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS—CLOSE

Toronto, May 2 (CP)—The oil and industrial shares were barely steady during the morning but fairly substantial advances announced yesterday, and otherwise the Toronto Industrial Share market staged a sluggish session with prices showing little change. Ford A advanced ¼ point from Friday's close.

British American and Imperial Oil were off ⅛ to ¼. McColl common reduced an early half point decline. Harvey Hale were posted for International Petroleum and Penmans, Ltd.

In the implement group, Cockshutt Plow took a loss of about ⅛, and Massey Harris was off ¼. Massey preferred dropped 1 point. Nickel, Brazilian and C.P.R. Chemical were unchanged at ¼ to ⅜. The new stock of Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company, representing five for one of the old was traded on a "when issued" basis, selling around 31 to 32½.

Steel of Canada lost ¼ and Dominion Steel and Coal ⅛. Power Metals and Page Hersey did better.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 2.—(AP)— The stock market failed to support today and a lower drift was in evidence to suffer an irregular break.

Losses, at one time, ranged from 1 to 3 points or so, with American Telephone leading the downward slide. In the end half those prices were shattered and the close was only moderately heavy.

Transfers approximated 400,000 shares.

It was one of the smallest trading volumes since November, 1934. The ticker tape was frequently noiseless.

Several of the ralying issues, including Chrysler, U.S. Steeling, Du Pont and Alaska Juneau were in demand, and scattered specialties held their own.

J. J. SEITZ

Founder of the Underwood Typewriter Business in Canada.

A banquet was tendered in Toronto to J. J. Seitz, well known Toronto business leader by four hundred employees and a number of business associates on the eve of the fortieth anniversary of the establishing of the company now known as Underwood Elliott Fisher Limited.

Mr. Seitz' business life makes one of the most interesting romances of business in the history of the new world. He is the man who created the first visible typewriter in Canada and waged a hard but legal fight to dethrone the "blind" typewriter then in general use. He took the whole of Canada for his battle ground and has achieved wonderful success. At the banquet Mayor McBride commented on the notable contribution made by Mr. Seitz to the life of the City of Toronto and the Dominion at large, Other leaders in Canadian industry voiced similar sentiments.

A feature of the occasion was the presentation by Mr. Seitz to Mayor McBride of a gold plated typewriter carrying the first letter ever typed for use in the Mayor's office.

Another interesting feature of the evening was the fact that the first composition "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise" was played by Seitz, well known composer, concert and radio pianist, son of the guest of honor.

J. J. Seitz started life as a telegraph operator, and was one of the first operators to use a typewriter for his work. He went to New York and acquired the sales agency rights for the new machine just invented by Note T. Underwood. He opened a small office in Toronto in 1896 and sold, shipped and serviced typewriters himself. Gradually he expanded the business until the entire Dominion was covered. From three employees in 1896 the payroll grew to five hundred and through the employment branch of the company situations have been found for half a million people.

Although in his 70th year Mr. Seitz is still active and enthusiastic and is interested in many other activities in addition to the one founded and expanded by himself.

Board Room Gossip

Stocks in High Grade on Lower Level

The latest news from Sinoe is to the effect that diamond drilling from the tenth level is proceeding with entire satisfaction. Some very encouraging sections have been observed to the west but as yet, no assays are available. This refers to the second hole which is being drilled a short distance back from the No. 1.

It will be recalled that considerable high grade material was cut in the first hole in this series. These assays are officially announced as follows—four feet showing "visible gold, $37; two feet, country rock, $1.40; 5 1-2 feet with visible gold $239; or an 11 1-2 ft. section running $174 to the ton.

Development work on the Sinoe vein is going along very well. Some nice ore lengths have been opened up on the drift on the tenth level. Right now the management is concentrating efforts on an attack towards the vein on the next level down. At the present time, the mill work should be in ore within the next few days. All in all, the Sinoe vein continues in a most consistent fashion and it looks as if this gratifying development will be a source of big tonnage for Sinoe.

Sullivan Announces Increase in Production—Looking to Ore Reserves

At the annual general meeting of shareholders of Sullivan Consolidated Mines, held in Montreal yesterday, Alfred H. Paradis, president, announced a step-up in production from the present tonnage of 115 tons to 200-250 tons daily.

Commenting on recent development at the Sullivan mine, J. M. Marshall, manager, stated that results work has given splendid results. Good ore is being opened up in the No. 4 vein where recent drifting to the north between the No. 3 and No. 3 levels has indicated to date a length of 127 feet of .75 ore, across full drift width.

In announcing the step-up in production, Mr. Paradis, K.C., of Paradis, stated in part:—

"In presenting the recently published annual report for the year 1935 one would be under the impression that the year's work has not proven up much additional ore. The report of the manager, J. M. Marshall, gives an estimate of 92,860 tons but he makes no mention of the inclusion of any ore the average values of which are lower than the average values proven. Such ore is not included in the figures which have been said to be included any ore indicated by diamond drilling."

In addition to a shareholder's query, Mr. Paradis stated that ore reserves are larger now than since the annual report was prepared. In connection with a reported estimate of a larger tonnage made by an independent engineer he stated that this engineer's estimate included "reasonably assured ore" as well as ore classified up in No. 4 vein. However, stated Mr. Paradis, if Mr. Marshall, our manager, were to make a new estimated of ore reserves at this time it would be somewhat higher than the figure contained in the published annual report.

Touching on the question of dividends, Mr. Paradis would not give any definite assurance to the meeting that a dividend would be paid at the end of the present year but stated that it was the hope of the directors hoped that the company would be in a position to make dividends earlier this year.

The following directors were re-elected directors for the ensuing year: Alfred H. Paradis, President; Henry Hamilton, Vice-president; J. A. Beauchemin, J. R. Gauvreau, Hector H. Racine, Racine and Hector H. Racine, Ald. Afhbam-Haskett, auditor and treasurer, and L. M. Marshall, mine manager.

Stadacona Rouyn Gives Estimate of Ore Reserves

In a progress report to shareholders the management of Stadacona Rouyn Mines gives the following estimate of ore reserves. Regarding diamond drilling results on the accepting principle that these must be taken qualitatively (not quantitatively) the management has estimated available tonnage at approximately 170,000 tons of ore of a gross value of $1,350,000. (This would work out to $7.90 per ton). This estimate is based on the results of lateral development, diamond drilling of over 1,300 feet of drifting on the 700-ft. level, over 700 ft. on the 400-ft. level, and over 1,000 ft. on the 600 ft. level, without giving consideration to the fact that the diamond drill holes, which intersected the vein on the 1,000-ft. depth assaying $10.45 per ton and 6 ft. of rich matter at 1,400 ft. assaying $13.40 per ton indicated downward persistence of ore.

Press announcement that Great Plains Development of Canada is embarking on a huge naval programme was received with considerable interest by shareholders of International Nickel. A tremendous amount of nickel is used in the construction of a battleship. Close to 1,000 tons are said to be needed by the two powers. Were it to be known that such an undertaking in the market, International Nickel would have reflected the speculative news in a decided manner.

Commenting on the outlook for the construction industry in Canada, Standard Statistics states that building material and labor costs have declined more sharply from pre-depression levels in the Dominion than in the United States, although material prices have recovered moderately since early 1933. The large amount of contemplated or deferred projects since 1929 indicates an impending level of building operations in Canada over coming years, with a return of more normal business conditions, although the rate of recovery may be slower than in the United States.

Increase in Western Common Dividend Expected

George Weston Limited has been able to make further progress in earning power this year and because of this it is expected on Bay Street, Toronto, that the dividend on the common will be advanced to 80c per share annual rate. Action along this line is expected in the near future. Ben R. Smith the well-indicated an improving level of building operations in Canada over coming years, with a return of more normal business conditions, although the rate of recovery may be slower than in the United States.

U. S. LEGATION IN ADDIS ABABA IS BESIEGED

Britain Sends Aid Against Mob; Selassie Sails for Palestine

Rioters, Looters Leave Ruined Ethiop Capital For Italian Occupation

Streets Strewn With Corpses, And Legation Quarters Stormed

U. S. WOMAN KILLED

Desperate Fight Centred Around Government Treasury

Addis Ababa, May 4 (By The Associated Press and Other American Correspondents, collaborating in view of limited transmission facilities)—Rampaging rioters and looters left a ruined Ethiopian capital open to occupation by the Italian army today after two days of pillaging, firing and killing during which an American woman fell among the innocent victims.

The business center of the town was wrecked, streets were strewn with corpses, government buildings were stormed and some foreign missions and legation quarters were attacked in the native campaign to loot the capital.

A reaction set in last night, however, the looting being forced to cease and their loot against law-abiding warriors and fearing reprisals from the advancing troops.

The looters began taking to the hills, when the Italians reported reaching the Akaki Plain, only ten miles east of the capital, and white flags flying along the highway.

The only foreigner known to have perished in the two days of terror was Mrs. M. E. Stedman, American wife of an Ethiopian official, who was killed in her sleep at dawn yesterday by a bullet which pierced the upstairs roof of the mission.

Mrs. Cornelius Van H. Engert, wife of the American Minister to Ethiopia, remained with her husband and all other American women of the staff at their virtually unfortified legation.

Female Missionary Attacked.

Dr. F. A. Lamble, of Tavmnia, head of the Ethiopian Mission Service, was attacked at his headquarters by Shiftas (bandits) during the early afternoon, but members of his staff, barricaded behind barbed wire, beat off the assailants, killing one and wounding others.

The head of the British Red Cross unit, Dr. Medley, was wounded seriously while struggling wounded from the streets. He suffered a bullet in his lung, but was expected to survive.

In the center of the town, eight persons were known to have been slain, but the full number of mutilated bodies could not be learned.

One desperate fight centred around the government treasury. A mob stormed the machine gun posts of the "gold house", some firing and others having their hands chopped off in the assault. The raiders, trampling over the bodies of their cohorts, finally succeeded yesterday in seizing the government's store of gold.

Munition Stores Exploded.

Remaining government munition stores were exploded, and the custom house and post office were destroyed by fire, together with the entire business district.

Pariah dogs came forth in droves to gnaw at the mutilated bodies of men and beasts.

With the rioters retiring and organized resistance by the Italian Fascist Militia, only warriors from the Gondar province remained near the capital to oppose the Fascists. Small groups of about twenty warriors each entered the town, armed only with spears. Some women, dressed as men, brandished shields.

Rome, May 4 (AP)—Native Ethiopian Askari of Italy's northern army closed in on the capital of the Christian Empire, Kingdom of Judah, awaiting only the arrival of the main national column to carry out occupation of Addis Ababa.

Italians at home, already claiming Addis Ababa as their own and shocked by reports of native sacking of the town, reflected generally the opinion of one well-informed observer that the sooner the Italian army could clean up the capital "the better."

Four hundred members of the Fascist Militia of Degnia assembled in uniform for today's session, expecting Premier Mussolini to announce the climax to the seven months' Italian campaign for East African conquest —the capture of Ethiopia's native capital.

The latest reports from the front said 15,000 Eritrean troops under General Pirzio Biroli were ready to sweep forward from the ridges, with

ETHIOP SITUATION AT A GLANCE

(By The Associated Press)

Addis Ababa: The demoralized capital of Ethiopia, scene of confusion—expected momentarily—by the invading blackshirt legions. The Italians were reported within 10 miles of the sacked city, white flags of truce parting their undisturbed way.

Rome: Jubilant Fascists awaited the "clean up" and with it the signal from Mussolini for a nation-wide celebration. The uniformed Chamber of Deputies gathered to hear the triumphant announcement.

Djibouti: Emperor Haile Selassie, flight from his crumbling Empire, found sanctuary on French soil and blamed revolt of his own tribesmen for the collapse of the Ethiopian defence. He kept his next destination secret.

London: The future of British policy in the Land of Nations absorbed the cabinet's interests as it met to consider the consequences of Italian conquest.

in easiest shot of the capital, as soon as Marshal Pietro Badoglio's main body of Italian soldiers joined the attack.

The entrance into Addis Ababa was anticipated yesterday after the Italian reconnaissance plane flights had reported the Ethiopian army in full retreat. Marshal Badoglio, commander-in-chief of the Italian forces, spent Sunday clearing out the Tembien area, only 150 kilometres (about 94 miles) from the capital.

That distance could be covered swiftly if the roads and caravan trails were in condition for truck movement.

SAUCY TRANSIENTS FIND NO WELCOME IN BELLEVILLE

Police Chase One Man Out of City, Another Goes to Jail

CITIZENS ANNOYED

Residents Complain of Insulting Language Following Refusal of Food

Two transients, who were apprehended in Belleville last week following complaints made by local residents being molested and insulted in their homes following refusals of gifts including food and money while panhandling, appeared in the police court this morning on vagrancy charges today.

The first, giving his name as Joseph Girard, who was arrested after causing disturbances on Aletter avenue, pleaded guilty to insulting resident, pleaded guilty as charged. Chief Constable Ponton offered to work for the man if asked for, alleged Girard.

"I guess that the man became abusive," interrupted Chief Ponton. "Well, I'll work and I'll be out of town," added Girard.

"I'll see that you want persons like you in this city. I'll give you just 30 minutes to get out of town," warned His Worship.

George Stallman, 53-year-old Russian transient, appeared on the police charge and a subsequent charge of intimidation. He was found guilty and sentenced to serve ten days in jail, after Stallman was said to have threatened the life of Mrs. Ponton, wife of Constable Ponton, motorcycle Patrolman Delaney following complaints that a transient had been using insulting language to residents in that section of the city. He appeared at their homes in quest of "a hand-out".

"We are having too many complaints relative to saucy transients in Belleville and it is high time we made an example of some of these insolent tramps," suggested Crown Attorney H. O. Donnell, K.C., as the conclusion of the case.

Peterborough Alderman Hurls Complaint at Some Persons

'CHISELLING', HE SAYS

Peterborough, Ont., May 4 (CP)—"Trafficking in illegitimate children" is the charge hurled by Alderman Dunion at certain relief recipients he alleges resort to devious methods of "chiselling" to get increases in their allowances.

"One man told us a pitiful story about his wife going to have a baby," Alderman Dunion told the relief committee, "and when his case was investigated a short time afterward we found the couple had adopted an illegitimate baby.

He also charged that the same people had adopted a baby from a Toronto home. The more children we would have the family to a higher relief scale, he contended, he explained:

"Several instances of this scheme to defeat the work of relief authorities have been revealed," said Alderman Dunion, who went on to relate how one of the children in this particular case seemed to have trouble with its nose. A doctor inquired into the matter and woman replied she was using a salve of lard and cascara. She was ordered to see the investigated a short time afterward child got proper attention at once.

The cabinet's decision extinguished the last hope for O'Donnell's husband and father had of escaping the gallows through legal interven-tion.

Finds Haven in French Territory And Under Heavy Guard

ON WAY TO EUROPE

Ras Ayalu, Charged With Treason in 1930 Given Pardon

(By Charles F. Nutter)

(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

London, May 4—(AP)—Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, told the House of Commons today that Emperor Haile Selassie and his suite will all immediately from Djibouti to Haifa, Palestine, aboard H.M.S. Enterprise.

The Enterprise is a cruiser of 7,580 tons. It carries an airplane and its guns include seven of 6-inch calibre. It is capable of 33 knots.

Eden said the Negus had made it clear that he wished to proceed with his family to Palestine.

Eden added: "The Emperor naturally will be expected, while in Palestine, not to participate in any way in the furtherance of the hostilities."

The Foreign Secretary said Sir Sidney Barton, British Minister to Addis Ababa, was informed last Friday that the Emperor had decided to leave Addis Ababa, which he had turned over to his council of ministers.

The Emperor had fled to the French Somaliland seaport from Addis Ababa by railroad.

Aboard the British warship, he will be conveyed to safety in the British-mandated country.

Previous to Eden's official announcement, well-informed sources said the Negus would be accorded asylum as British warship H.M.S. Enterprise stood ready.

The Negus, finding a haven in this friendly territory after fleeing his capital, sought solitude under the protection of the European power, see, with his next move kept secret.

French sources, however, declared the Emperor was free to leave Djibouti, said it was likely he would board the British Destroyer Diana with his family, to go to Aden, Haifa, Palestine or Europe.

Haile Selassie himself declined to make any public statement, but his French host said the reason for the Emperor's flight that army and his own people plotted against him.

The reverses suffered by the Ethiopian forces in the Ogaden and the Italian march on Addis Ababa, the capital, and the beginning of the Galla tribes in Yego and Gore Provinces, were also quoted as saying.

He hoped to be able to hail the Fascist advance along the Imperial Highway from Dessye, but found that the Italians had cut off supplies, and suffering from the tropical campaign in the Ogaden-Tigre Province.

The Emperor studied the possibility of a last-ditch stand at the Tembier Mountain Pass, and decided to return to Addis Ababa to seek reinforcements for his Northern army.

Fired on Several Times

En route to the capital, he was fired on several times by hostile bands of his own people, and finally in Addis Ababa, he found the town thronged with wounded soldiers and the streets of his main followers.

After conferring with members of his government and his military advisers, the Emperor came to the conclusion, that he could not longer safely remain in Ethiopia, being at the head of his army, and decided to end the struggle against his enemies, and left the capital.

Summoning his ministers to the Royal Palace, he informed them of his decision, and directed that Ras Imru should be head Regent pending for high treason since 1930, be brought from his prison cell.

The Emperor granted Ras Ayelu his freedom.

Ras Ayalu Pardoned

Signing a pardon at 4.00 a.m. Saturday, the Emperor handed it to the Ras with the words: "Today you see the result of your treason in 1933. Go, return to your province. You are free physically, but your soul will always be in chains."

Shortly afterward, the Negus left the Imperial Palace and joined the press Menenen and their children, who had already aboard the train for Djibouti.

British Minister With 150 Sikhs Seeks to Bring Aid to U. S. Legation Ethiopians Fire on French Embassy

U. S. Minister Puts up Gallant Fight Against Bandits Repelling Attack With Aid of Servants at Legation

GUARDS MUTINY, FRENCH REPORT

Terrible Scenes Enacted in Capital—Italians Are Expected to Enter Destroyed City Today

By CHARLES P. NUTTER
Associated Press Foreign Staff

London, May 4—(AP)—The British Government today asked Sir Sidney Barton, its Minister to Ethiopia, to do everything possible to help the United States Legation in Addis Ababa.

Sir Sidney, who has 150 Sikhs, famous Indian fighters at his command, was expected to attempt a relief of the embattled American Legation which was reported surrounded by a mob of armed Ethiopians.

Cornelius Van H. Engert, United States Minister to Addis Ababa, was fighting off the mob with a few friends.

The British government's instructions were conveyed to Sir Sidney by wireless, at the suggestion of Ambassador Robert W. Bingham.

Bingham went to the office on instructions from Washington and asked whether the British Legation in Addis Ababa could help the American Legation hold out against the mob.

Washington, May 4—(AP)—After beating off one vicious assault by Ethiopian bandits, the United States Minister to Ethiopia today told Washington the "situation is getting worse" and appealed for British assistance to protect the Legation.

They Grew Threatened

Evidencing the danger threatening the tiny group of Americans still holding the legation against marauders was the serious wounding of two native women in the servants' quarters.

Cornelius Van H. Engert, the Minister, reported how a handful of Americans and native servants driven off a bandit attack at nine o'clock in the morning (3 a.m. E. S. T.) after the wife narrowly escaped bullets of the rioters.

But six hours later, Engert appealed for British aid through the State Department. Sophie Lemkuhl could reach Sir Sidney Barton, the Minister at Ethiopia, by wireless because his own transmitter could not get through the shot-riddled capital.

Two Women Wounded

Then two hours later at 8 p.m. Ethiopian time, Engert, almost surrounded by a fierce attack on the legation appeared imminent, wireless to the State Department:

"Situation is getting worse. Several direct shots fired into legation radio station since this morning, and two native women in servants' quarters have been severely wounded."

In response to Engert's appeal, the State Department reached Robert W. Bingham, Ambassador to the Court of St. James and Bingham immediately set out to communicate with the British Foreign Office.

Bingham was assured by British officials that they would promptly communicate Engert's request to Addis Ababa, but that nothing had been heard so far today from the British radio station there.

Geneva Meeting

Paris, May 4 (AP)—Paul Boncour, French Minister to Ethiopia, reported today that the Ethiopian soldiers assigned to guard his legation, had mutinied and turned their guns on the building.

The message was sent by wireless at 10 a.m., Addis Ababa time (3 a.m. E.D.T.).

At that time, the minister said

Congratulations!

Mayor Harry Hill who tackled the day's work with his customary zest and power after a week-end spent in receipt of the congratulations of fellow councillors and city hall employees on the occasion of his birthday.

"Just sixty, and still going strong," he commented.

875 Unemployed are Placed On Farms in Labor Drive

Provincial Campaign is Success Says Orvall, Welfare Head

WILL PLACE 15,000

Toronto, May 4 (CP)—Results in the Canada government's farm labor campaign are far exceeding expectations, Hon. David Croll, minister of Labor and Welfare, said in a statement today.

"Reports from local superintendents of the employment service show 875 unemployed men placed on farms during the first week and a half of the campaign," said Mr. Croll. "This is more than one-fifth of our total estimate hope for the period was that placements would exceed 4,000.

"There is no doubt in my mind that we will send nearly 15,000 men to farms during the 1936 season. We have been handicapped by unfavorable weather so far, but a few good days of good farming weather will see orders for men accelerated. The man on the back concession is responding nobly to the government's appeal, and the unemployed are showing an earnest desire to take farm jobs.

Emperor Haile Goes on Cruiser For Palestine

Djibouti, May 4 (CP-Havas)—Emperor Haile Selassie and his family embarked on the British cruiser Enterprise at 8:30 p.m. local time today for Haifa, Palestine.

there still was no word of the Italian advance and the Fascist troops, who reached the outskirts of the encircled city were not yet in sight.

Rome Radio reported that the French legation had been under siege all night long.

It said several foreigners in the British legation had been wounded by bandits.

SERMON STUDIES JAPANESE LEADER

Social Sacrifices of 'Great Evangelist Theme of Dr. Kagawa

A study of the life of Dr. Kagawa, Japanese Christian leader, who is to visit Belleville this month was given Bridge Street United Church congregation Sunday evening by the Rev. James Semple.

"Even in childhood days in the early life of Kagawa, his lonely early life, his communion with nature which seems parallel to the influence of nature in the life of Jesus, and the life of Saint Francis of Assisi, the fact that Kagawa as a youth longed for a display of love with power, his contact with Christian missionaries, his devotion to the cause of the poor and the tireless labors on behalf of the removal of slums in Shinkawa cities, his cry "O God, make me like Christ," on his own confession, and his whole long writing career though he is only 46 years of age (in which seven have been translated into English) and the fact that the royalties on his books to the amount of $100,000."

The minister pointed out that it was unjust to call Kagawa a communist. Kagawa has been cast out like Communism because it is opposed to religion. Kagawa's cause Russian Communism is Christian love, brotherhood and thought, independence of the minority and against freedom of diversity.

The social gospel of Kagawa, said Dr. Semple, embraces organization of five kinds, economic, psychological, moral, political and spiritual. There is also his interest in co-operative for he says that the life of Christ is the basis for the brotherhood of one another.

The plan for building one thousand rural chapels to help rural evangelism but the Crown asked for a further enlargement. "This man is being held in custody, could bail not be arranged," asked K. D. Bristol, local barrister appearing for Munroe.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Burgoyne Celebrate 50th Anniversary

Well Known Local Couple Married 50 Years Ago at Stoco

MANY CHANGES

Was One of First Citizens to Purchase Motor Car And Instal a Telephone

Kneeling in the pews of the same St. Edmund's Church in Stoco, yesterday afternoon, which they revisited especially for the occasion, the thoughts of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Burgoyne, 313 Pinnacle St., this city went back to a day just fifty years ago when in a simple but solemn service in that same church Mr. A. Burgoyne and Miss Mary Jane Cassidy, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The service was performed, it was discretly recalled yesterday by the Rev. Father Wiggins, pastor of the little church, the bridal couple being assisted by the bride's sister, Bridget Agnes Cassidy, bridesmaid, now Mrs. W. Linnott of Minneapolis and John Cassidy, groomsman who still resides near Stoco.

"Yes, we remember that day just as if it was yesterday, it was no other or finer than it is now. The birds were singing, and the trees were completely leafed out. Also conditions in the country were very good, and the finest horse that carried us in the old church that day was owned by the joy the day just as much as we did, and it was a day when all were very good enough for the folks fifty and more years ago."

Always Lived Here

Following the ceremony, which was attended by a number of the more distant points, almost filling the church with their numbers, the happy couple left at once for the home of the bride's father where a wedding dinner was held. Later they took up residence in a newly furnished home in Deseronto, in this city. They have resided ever since in the city.

Looking back on their fifty years of married life, both Mr. and Mrs. Burgoyne who are possessed of eranquil and pleasing natures and who have a hospitality and generosity to a high degree, have found little to complain of in a life that has been blessed with good health and happiness. Times and things have changed in the past fifty years, but both Mr. and Mrs. Burgoyne have kept pace with orderly affairs of the age and are both keenly interested in every day events and the art of living.

Revisit Scene of Nuptials

Following their trip to St. Edmunds Church, Stoco on Sunday at which they also attended Mass, Mr. and Mrs. Burgoyne in company with their liveryman by replace the cabs and horses with motorized equipment. Memories of the days when the belle of the ball and splendidly motor cars of the open carriage first appeared in city are still fresh in the mind of the former driver.

Recalls First Motor Cars

"People used to be afraid of them. We had to educate the public to their use. It was only the more daring and reckless who indulged in them at first. The older generation preferred to stick by the old and tried horse. Quite a bit different from conditions as they are today", reminisced Mr. Burgoyne. At that time of the few cars in this city, three liverymen, Lincoln Jeffries, Wellington Fellman and Mr. Burgoyne were first and principal owners, it was recalled.

Pioneer Phone User

Pioneer in the use of automobiles in his livery business, Mr. Burgoyne is also listed in local records as the owner of one of the first telephones installed in Belleville when those instruments were few and far between and were considered a novelty by even the more advanced residents of the city.

Now the oldest taxi driver and livery owner in the city, he is marking during the past few years, that Mr. Burgoyne has given up his occupation due to encroaching advancing age. Still remarkably preserved and active, both Mr. and Mrs. Burgoyne expect many more years of happily married life.

Born the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Burgoyne of this city, Mr. Burgoyne is a native of Belleville in which he has resided all his life. Formerly Miss Mary Jane Cassidy Mrs. Burgoyne was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Cassidy of Rungerford Township and was one of the prominent and best known members of the younger set in that particular district.

A flood of messages of congratulation and expression of goodwill were being received today on the occasion of their golden anniversary.

Revival Meetings are Brought to a Close

A most encouraging and uplifting series of Revival meetings were brought to a close in the Alliance Gospel Tabernacle last night, the services all well attended were of much blessing and help to many who attended. Tuesday night was the best special meetings of this nature held in the Tabernacle for some time past. The well attended prayer meetings and the very helpful after meetings of Revival services were a feature of this campaign. The testimonies of many who found real help and instructions and of those who only recently have found the Saviour as their own and their own personal Saviour were much thrilling.

Pastor Congdon consecrated young men Pilgrims J. O'Neill and J. Marshall of the Gospel Pilgrims, who have also ministered so faithfully and well these past two weeks have won the affections of all who have heard them and leave Belleville with the best of love Christian friends to back them in prayer. 5 NOISY YOUTHS ORDERED FINED

Are Warned That Return on Like Charge Will be "No Joke"

Five local youths appeared in today's local police court held before Magistrate Bittle, K.C., charged with disturbing the peace by "making noises" and were all guilty as charged and were fined three dollars, without costs.

The five were apprehended by P. C. Taylor on Front Street at 2.30 a.m. last Saturday morning all singing, shouting, and generally disturbing the peace and quiet of the early opening of court Chief Kidd intimated he deemed a five dollar fine should be collected as a warning note. Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K.C., argued that was of the opinion that a one dollar fine would be sufficient in this case. "These boys are taking this as a joke", added Chief Kidd.

"Well, if they ever come back it will be no joke", predicted Mr. Donnan. After considering the matter from all angles His Worship, commended in the matter and levied a fine of three dollars against each offender.

"If they wanted to sing and thought they were "Gold Diggers" they'd only go on an amateur night and get booed off the boards in an hour," slyly added Mr. Donnan as he attended their way out of the court room minus three dollars each and the lurking gained considerable experience.

WOMAN THROWN THRU WINDSHIELD

Miraculously escaping serious injuries when her head hit and completely shattered the windshield of an automobile in which she was riding, Mrs. Clarissa Roberts, 118 Harriet Street, Hamilton, escaped from the vehicle at the intersection of Bridge and Front Streets Sunday afternoon after her head had been removed from the hole made in the windshield. Mrs. Roberts was riding in the front seat of a motor car driven by Clarence Clay, Hamilton, when the Roberts' vehicle hit another car, that in which Clay was riding. The latter car was riding, crashed into the rear end of the Johnson car in front, the force of the impact hurled Mrs. Roberts forward, her head striking the windshield, completely shattering the glass on the right side. Raising her head and shoulders completely passed through the windshields before she was released from her dangerous position by her son. With flying glass strewn about, neither Mrs. Johnson nor her son sustained even the slightest injuries. "Any head does not a little sore, but otherwise there are no ill effects." Mrs. Roberts informed the police during the investigation that followed at the police station. The damaged cars of both the principals were damaged and a settlement was amicably arranged with no charges being laid by the police.

Car and Buggy in Mix-up

Two other minor accidents happened in Belleville over the week-end, with no serious injuries being reported, however. Saturday afternoon a motor car, being driven westerly by C. C. Thomson, of Ois, became wedged between a truck and a buggy at the Bridge and James Street intersection. Both the truck, driven by Arthur Irish, Belleville, and the horse and buggy driven by M. L. Price, Mountain View, were making a left hand turn off Bridge Street, into James Street, the truck travelling on the inside of the buggy, Mr. Thomson was following behind and apparently could not stop in time to avoid an accident. His car became wedged between the buggy and the truck. No injuries were sustained by any of the occupants, although a wheel was broken off the buggy and the harness on Mr. Price's horse broken. Fender damage resulted to the Thomson car. Constables Constable Fred Zaird investigated and no charges were instituted, Thomson admitted a settlement to be amicably arrived at between the parties concerned.

Early Saturday evening Ernest Lucas, 81 Bridge Street West, complained to the police his automobile had been struck by an alleged hit run driver on Coleman Street. Mr. Lucas further stated that the license plates on his car read 1935 and that the vehicle was being driven on the wrong side of the road. Later Harry Davey, 3 Brassey Street, arrived at the police station to lodge a similar complaint that also a motor car bearing the same license as previously reported. He also stated the vehicle had struck his car on Station Street and continued without stopping.

F. C. Taylor ascertained the license plate number was given and later arrested Ruth Oliver, 19 Coleman Street, at his home. Fender and buhoop damage, which police alleged was two days old, resulted to the Oliver's car. Charges under the H.T.A. were laid, police stated at a late hour today.

OXFORD GROUP TEAM VISITS LOCAL CHURCH

Impressive Service Held With Holloway Street Congregation

Interest in Oxford Group work which is strong in Holloway Street United Church received an impetus on Sunday when a team of workers, of the Rev. R. E. Newman, minister, visited the church and conducted a meeting of Groups-in-ed by Arthur Christ of Toronto. Both services were held at Holloway Street on Sunday and one at Albert College in the morning.

Arthur Pollard, elder of Carleton Heights United Church, opened upon the congregation that as a Christian man he wanted to know what had been accomplished through the agency of the Oxford Group Movement in the breadth of interest in the things he demonstrated with the station and the various Christian teams. With a member of the Jewish faith, a German, and on and on other lines with a Russian who had been brought within the range of the group influence. "We have touched the source of power," he said. "We believe that God has a plan for the world but this plan can only be worked out when individually do our part to carry out the will of God and His Word. There is no use my asking anyone else if I am not allowing God's Kingdom to come in my own life. It is only when I have any control. This is the Oxford Group Movement. It is not the desire to separate as persons apart. God does not desire that.

As Others See Us

"We believe God can bring about a new earth and we see a new world emerging."

Mr. Pollard quoted Robert Burns' words:

"O wad some power the gifte gie us

To see ourselfs as ithers see us".

"About three and a half years ago I began to see myself as others see me. That is what God is doing in the world. One of His methods is the Oxford Group."

"What is needed desperately is a conviction of sin", the leader continued. "I cannot convict others or the world to have a conviction of sin if I am not convicted of sin. Christ has shown the plan of God. There have been Magdalenes repented."

Fred Houghton of Hamilton, told of a change from the godless way of being of earlier years. "I was guided to go back home after I made the decision. I had felt I must wander about and at last found myself all lost. I went to work. I tried to find an answer to my problem in psychology but found no answer anywhere until I caught the vision, gave up the idea of wandering and went back to my post which I had had four years before.

Says Miracles Happen

"I see young men lacking purpose in life.

"In the last six months miracles have been happening in Hamilton. I call them miracles. I am sure those of the old days. Some one was prompted to go to the prayer chambers at Hamilton could be used for meeting of the Oxford Group. And now six hundred attend these meetings there in the very place where Jesus Christ suffered, died, rose and men have been tried.

"We must follow the leading of God. We must not try to lead Him. We will be led if we are talking over the doing of God's will."

From Albert College came the next speaker, Ken Wood, who made a brief reference to the influence upon him by the Oxford Group members.

Miss Helen Allen of the Toronto Conservatory of Music staff, herself a daughter of the parsonage, said that she had come to find the truth about God and the church members and to tell them the truth is desperately in need, the truth about God. She added that she had while long a church member never reached the full truth about God. She added that it is one's duty to know the truth about one's self.

He Veiled Abstraction

When she first realized that she "could help to bring in the Kingdom of God" she was thrilled with the thought. God then became, she said a reality to her not a veiled abstraction. "My attitude towards people, my motives, have changed and people have found it out."

David Massey, a high school boy of Toronto, called it "real living" to live under the influence of the Oxford Group.

Percy Blighe of Toronto, spoke of the semi-pagan manner of life which so many live today. He told of depressing conditions which have discouraged him, and declared that "God must be the heart and soul of one's life." Mr. Blighe made a fine impression with his message.

Mrs. Fletcher of Albert College, explained the new feeling of relationship to God which came into life.

Mrs. R. J. Newman of Belleville, declared that reserve, reticence and self-consciousness have been from the Group Movement. "There are those who one meets casually. Every day surrender of life should be made."

Rev. Mr. Newman declared that he found it nearly his job to live as one should live.

In the morning early the visiting groupers met the group at Albert College. On Sunday afternoon there was a group meeting in Holloway Street Church and in the evening there was a public meeting which was held by the Toronto team led by Arthur Christ. Fidelis Potter, who spoke in the afternoon and throughout included Robert Stewart, Polly Roadway of Toronto, Fred Sarjeant, and Daisy Whitehall, Toronto, who told of the Oxford Group movement across the world was parallel to the founding of the congregation by Mr. Fidelis who pointed out that in Dunedin alone there are ninety thousand groupers.

At the morning service the young girl members of the choir took part in the anthem and Helen Salsbury rendered the solo in "Above Love, O Christ to Thee".

Countervailing Duty Stimulates Industry

Charlottetown, May 4 (CP)—Countervailing duty on potatoes imported into Prince Edward Island during the 1935 budget will stimulate production in home markets for Canada, the premier said during the session, when United States markets "will be lower than Canadian prices." M. G. McNeely, manager, Prince Edward Island associated shippers, told him.

Councillors met last night on the potato duty in Ottawa, but Mr. McNeely said it would be a "distinct advantage to progress of the present season's crop.

With a duty against American new potatoes entering Canada it will allow almost a full month extra to market the balance of the old Canadian crop without any serious competition from the United States," he said. "The situation, therefore is extremely strong in view of the very short stocks existing in Canada at the present time as compared with the corresponding date in any of the past five years.

Last year nearly 700 carloads of potatoes were shipped from Prince Edward Island after May. Mr. McNeely said it was generally estimated there are not more than half this quantity available for shipments this season after May 1.

FORCE BINDS UNIVERSE

A force, forty times that of electricity has been found in the heart of the atom. This, believed to be the force which holds the universe together, and without which it would evaporate into a cloud of hydrogen gas, has been reported to the American Chemical Association by the Carnegie Institute officials.

The new atomic force, for which no name yet exists, seems to serve the sole purpose of providing the cohesive force in the universe. Unlike electricity, which has both attracting and repelling powers, this "universal binder" is an "one-way force," having only attractive powers.

It seems to be for the atom what gravitation is to, the universe at large. But whereas gravitation is inversely proportional to the square of the distance between the two bodies, this new nuclear force is proportional to the seventh power of the distance, so that it has a very small range indeed to exert its influence on.

The force, within its sphere of influence, Dr. Bathe stated, effects all particles that are known to be found within the nucleus of atoms. It attracts two or more positive particles, or natural particles (neutrons), and also binds protons and neutrons together.

The interesting possibility is indicated that the lighter nucleus, or proton, may be identical, except for its electric charge, with the other building block of the universe, the neutron, which was discovered in 1932 and which combines with a portion to form the nucleus of the atom of heavy hydrogen, known as the deuteron. Heavy hydrogen weighs twice as much as ordinary hydrogen and is found in "heavy water."

Measurements extended over a range of voltage above 1,000,000, it was stated, will be necessary to settle this question.

Experimental proof for the existence of a so-called "sixth sense," which seems to give on the ability to sense the presence of a person in a room in the dark, even in the absence of any sound, was presented before the physicists by Drs. J. D. Hardy and T. W. Oppel of the Russel Sage Institute of Pathology, New York City.

The human skin, they reported, is a hundred per cent more sensitive to slight changes in temperature than the most delicate thermometers that science can devise. Whereas the most sensitive thermometers can record temperature differences of one-thousandth of 1 degree Centigrade, the human akin of the face can detect a temperature rise of only five ten-thousandths of 1 degree Centigrade.

This extremely high sensitivity of the facial akin to heat, Drs. Hardy and Oppel stated, "is probably the explanation of the so-called 'sixth' sense whereby the presence of another person in the dark is made known."

KNEW ENOUGH TO WRITE LITTLE

Alfred Housman who goes down to fame as a professor who wrote one hundred short poems which will be gathered in the universal book of world literature is unique. His work is as brief as some of the verse in the Greek Anthology which has lived two thousand years and more.

Housman possessed that peace which did not make him a perpetual publisher of his own work. Probably he knew the flawlessness and greatness of his work and hence did not allow himself to be everlastingly writing. His was the spirit of the true artist.

One of the strange anomalies of his verse and his fame is that the reputation he has won is with the commonplaces of life, yet he wrote in a simple style and along a narrow chart he marked out his poetic course, "the pessimism of the eccleasiast, the courage of the stoic and a leaning towards the macabre" as a New York writer finely says. Yet these things he has written with grace and the elegance of simplicity. Forty years ago appeared "The Shropshire Lad" and for twenty-six years he was silent, then a new leak book came and his poetry muse ceased to pour out music. Poetic emotion of strong kind, music, perfection of form, reticence are marks of his work.

A sample of his verse may be given—

Epitaph on an Army of Mercenaries—

"These in the day when heaven was falling
The hour when earth's foundation fled,
Followed their mercenary calling,
And took their wages and are dead."

Another poem:—

"The year draws in the day
And soon will evening shut;
The laurels all are cut,
We'll to the woods no more.
O' we'll no more, no more
To the leafy woods away,
To the high wild woods of laurel,
And the bows of bay no more."

Once he writes the dialogue of the dead plowman and the friend who marries his sweetheart—

"Your girl is well contented, lie still, my lad, and sleep."

Housman, the great Latinist, is gone and his poems continue on to that eternity of life which the literary world believes is theirs.

WHEN HALF-GODS GO

The anguish of remembered bliss
When God put out the sun,
The dull routine of days that creep,
Monotonous and dun—
Beyond the lagging hours that pass,
The dread of fear and pain;
Tomorrow brings the thought, that loss
Is greater far than gain.
For with the Cross the keys are given,
To open wide the gates of Heaven;
And when the half-gods go their way
Immortal Love will come to stay.

MADAME ALBANI, WORLD FAMOUS OPERA SINGER, gave a concert in Carman Opera House, Tuesday evening, March 24, 1896, according to a program shown to the writer by Hope McGinnis, always a discriminating theatre-goer and admirer of the high lights of the legitimate stage before the flickers chased the human actors off the boards of the "One Night Stands". The program gives a biographical sketch of the then manager of the Carman House, Thos. P. Hall. Power of beloved memory, and is particularly interesting as a breath from the past, bringing back memory of that lovely woman and gifted star, Madame Albani.

REPORTS OF OBNOXIOUS CONDUCT OF TRAMPS when refused food or money at private homes, means that a closer watch will be kept by police on transients and their stay in Belleville will be short but not sweet. In this army of transients constantly moving across the continent there must necessarily be some tough citizens, and for their misdemeanors the whole army gets a bad name and is kept moving. Life on the Road is not conducive to character making and the young man who takes to the Road is the material out of which the Devil makes racketeers, yeggs and bums. An attempt is being made in the United States to take the young men off the road and make something of them, or induce them to make something of themselves. Camps have been opened where good meals are served, clothing furnished, education and entertainment provided, and healthy, useful work provided. This experiment is being watched with interest.

BANKERS HAVE BEEN ACCUSED OF HAVING "GLASS" EYES, or the equivalent, which they turn on at will for the purpose of chilling would-be borrowers. Other varieties of verbal bricks have been used on those who bought very few bouquets. Hence Belleville banker one day last week was very much surprised when a son of the soil, a farmer from Prince Edward County, entered his office and remarked in effect: "I don't want you get more bricks than bouquets so I just gathered these flowers to show that there are more flowers than thorns in the world after all." He then deposited a beautiful bouquet of daffodils on the banker's desk and so shocked that gentleman that for a moment or two he was unable to properly express his appreciation. Bricks are all right in their place but it takes the occasional bouquet to appreciate their usefulness (if any) and remove the sting.

For Men Only

"Alice, I'm going to give a lot of these old clothes to the charity organization," Brown announced to his wife. "Here are socks and shirts that ought to do some poor fellow a lot of good."

Alice came over to look into the matter.

"I guess it will be all right," she agreed. "But, my! I can't send that stuff out like that. Why, there are a lot of buttons off the shirts and the socks need darning."

In a few days Alice had the garments fixed up and announced to hubby he could send the package off to the charity organization now.

"But, Alice," he protested when he looked the stuff over, "you have it in such good shape that I am going to wear them a while longer myself.

As Alice went out of the room hubby smiled contentedly.

"It worked! It worked!" he observed under his breath.

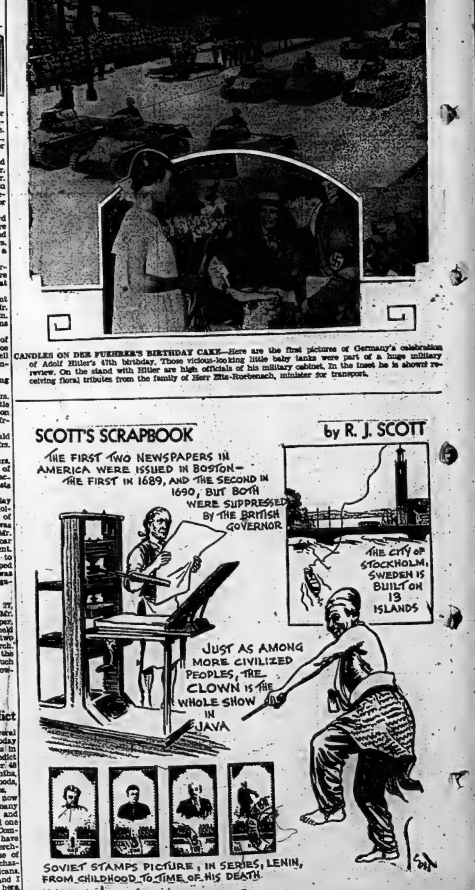
Fort Erie Merchants Do Not Fear Edict

Fort Erie, May 4 (CP)—Several Fort Erie merchants averred today they do not fear any great loss in business as result of the new edict which will permit residents, after 48 hours' absence, once in four months, bringing back $100 worth of goods, duty free from the United States.



"Residents in Fort Erie right now are as low as in Buffalo and in many instances in cases of woollen and British goods, far cheaper," said one leading business man today. Complaints on the other hand have been coming from Buffalo merchants in recent months because of large amount of foodstuffs purchased in Fort Erie daily by Americans especially butter and meats, and I think it will stimulate business here, being reciprocal," he concluded.

EATING THE SALAD

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When a vegetable side dish (such as peas) is served in a restaurant, should a spoon be sent for, too?

2. When lettuce is served with dressing, as a salad, should it be cut with the steak knife or with the salad knife?

R.

1. "If possible, use a fork" is the suggestion I remember to all cases of this kind. But it does depend on whether the vegetable in the individual dish is served with an entree. If it has no sauce, then the fork's the silverware to use. If there is sauce, cream and butter, for instance, and the sauce bores you, then you must, of course, use the spoon.

2. If the salad is served as a separate course, then we use the salad knife. (If we are fortunate enough to be served one), as an adjunct to the salad fork. Instead of the special salad fork and salad knife, the needlewoman, the hunkerson sea, knife and fork may be, correctly, placed with the salad. If the salad is served with the main course, there should still be a salad fork placed for the salad, instead of the dinner plate, on the left of the fork. For we should use a fruit fork for the salad. When a salad is served with the main course, it is usually a very simple salad, and therefore we need only the salad fork. So, unless we are in difficulties with the salad, we don't use a knife when we eat it.

ORCHESTRAL ATTIRE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I play in a stringed orchestra, composed of men and women. Is it proper for the women to wear their hats when playing? It seems to me for church affairs, it would be proper. But how about other functions, such as dinner music or similar affairs?

R.

Usually the question of attire is very definitely prescribed by the director or committee of each an orchestra. And if it hasn't been, it should be. An outsider like me should not have the right to step in with suggestions.

Since there is much uncertainty in your mind about this, and since there should be a harmony about this attire, why don't you and the other women in the orchestra consult with the director about his wishes in this most important matter of appropriate costume and accessories? Then would probably be a variation of the general rule about the wearing of hats when the orchestra plays in a church, since in these cases church regulations would take precedence, but on other occasions it is the usual custom for women playing in orchestras not to wear hats. Sometimes a director prefers that the women all wear simple black dresses, sometimes he suggests that they all wear white dresses. In general the idea is that the costumes be of such a character that the attention of the observers is concentrated on the music, not on the costumes.

JOINT WEDDING GIFT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been invited to the wedding and reception of one of my sorority sisters, along with three other girls. We anticipated giving the bride a gift together, but here is the difficulty. My fiance has been invited to the wedding and reception, and he and the bride scarcely know each other.... they have met but once. She asked him merely as a favor that I would have an escort. Will it be necessary for us to give a gift together, or can I join in with the girls and then he won't give a gift?

I.

I advise that you go ahead with your plan of giving a gift with your three sorority sisters. Under the circumstances it is not at all necessary for your fiance to give the bride a gift. Of course he may, if he wishes, send a gift in courtly acknowledgement of the bride's most gracious invitation, but it might be a very simple gift, just a hint of his appreciation and good wishes.

FAMILIARITY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going about with a nice young man, and I have met his family. He has a married sister, and brother, and I am in doubt as to how I should address them? Should I use "Mrs". and "Mr". or should I call them by their first names?

G.

You'd show surest taste if you address them as "Mrs. Smith", "Mr. Smith", until they make the suggestion that you use their first names.

Bridge-Room Arrangements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

/1. With a dining-room suite having one arm chair, should the wife or the husband occupy that chair?

2. How is the head or the foot of the table determined?

3. If, at a dinner for two, the head and the foot of the table are so far apart as to make it inconvenient for the two to sit one at either end of the table, how should the pair sit? While the good taste, in any event, for the wife to sit at the head under such circumstances, while the husband sits at the side?

D. D.

1. Here's a delicate question indeed, and I'm afraid an outsider couldn't solve it! It would depend entirely on the relative wish-to-be-powerfulness of the wife and the husband. If he is a country and gallant husband he will no doubt insist that his wife occupy this more comfortable chair. On the other hand, Mommer may insist that Popper be given this luxurious comfort of the arm-chair. They'll have to decide it between them.... or by some other arm-chair.

2. The "head" of the table is where the hostess sits. The "foot" of the table is where her husband, the host, sits, opposite the hostess.

3. This is a problem that often arises, when only two are dining together. And it is usually solved by having the places set facing the row way of the table, so that the two diners will sit, opposite each other more "cozily." Then the centerpiece and the candlesticks may be placed nearer the ends of the table.

Pretty Neck Is Obtained By Posture

Marion Davis

Exercise and creams keep her neck free of ugly lines and sags.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Having one's nose in the air may develop a superiority complex or cause the woman next door to fling a dirty look now and then, but it is an elegant way of tightening up sagging neck tissue and disposing that surplus chin that makes plump duckies miserable.

Print the superfluous nose toward heaven, clasp the hands behind the neck, lower the chin and then up it again. As the chin goes down, give a hard pull at the flesh at the nape like and send the hands upward. This stretches tight the tissues of the neck and the underlies.

This exercise must be followed by smoothing massage movements. Have the palms of the hands well lubricated with a heavy cream. Place fingers at one side of the face, thumb at the other, iron down to the collar bones, then smooth upward, keeping the head thrown back.

Make it a practice to carry the chin on the level. By doing that and keeping the chest high the fibers between the chin and the collar bones will be in normal state, having no chance to soldier on the job and sag.

A string neck is an eyesore to any woman. It can be avoided if she will stick to her beauty rules. use creams freely, sponge the flesh with cold water every day, pay heed to posture.

Can you place your chest upon your knee? Unless you are 100, you should be able to do it without touching the hands to floor or toppling over. It is a grand exercise for keeping the waistline trim.

Stand erect, arms out at the side. Take a long step forward with the right foot. Keep the left leg straight, bend the right knee, place your chest upon it. Back to first position and repeat. During the exercise the hands are kept straight out even with the shoulders. Go ahead and try it.

Confidence Improves With Inferior Group

(By Lisa Grenelle)

"I have very little social activity," writes an intelligent young girl. "I must say society bores me to flop. . . . Some how, rather than go with some people, I'd prefer to stay home."

Well, we've all felt like that, haven't we? Rather stay home than go out with some people. And maybe we're right, and then sometimes we aren't.

I was pretty much of a social flop myself once, Stephanie. None of the salutatory girls and boys would have anything to do with me, and I would not have anything to do with the others. Just like you, though I'd rather stay home.

But I got lonely. The family got on my nerves. I was bored. I wanted to get out of the house. So I accepted the secret of one of the considered undesirable, for what of it, better, and off we went.

I had the best time of my life, too. In the first place he wasn't as dumb as he seemed. We had many points in common. May be they were just petty grievances; I don't remember. Anyway, it was something to talk about.

But the most important thing as far as I was concerned, was that for the first time I didn't feel like a fool. I wasn't guessing what my escort was thinking of me. What did I care? He wasn't as hot himself.

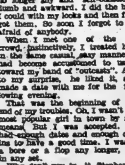
For the first time I wasn't self-conscious. I felt at my ease. I chatted and laughed, or kept quiet when I felt like it; and was it a relief!

"Outcasts" Friends

And I went out with him again, this rather unattractive boy, and others like him, other "outcasts", whom for some reason, members of the group I'd so much wanted to join. I went with strangers to town, shy, awkward boys, boys of less distinguished parentage perhaps, burdened with some small handicap, that made them unacceptable to the "superior ones".

My family didn't like it much, of course. The best was none too good for them, they said. But I was tired of shoving in where I didn't feel wanted, being the butt of snickers and whispers. I was tired of feeling like a jelly.

It's more fun, I found, to feel attracting with a less attractive beau, than to be dragged along by some charming young man who was willing to take me for a walk quite on sufferance.



And all the time, without my knowing it, my confidence was growing. These young men, girls, too, were at first afraid I would rather stay home than go out with, were doing things for me. I was their equal, and self-conscious, dumb and awkward. I did the best I could with my looks and then forgot them. So soon I forgot to be afraid of anybody.

When I met one of the old crowd, pattinctively, I treated him in the same manner I had become accustomed to using for my band of "outcasts". And to my surprise, he liked it, and made a date with me for the following evening.

That was the beginning of the end of my troubles. Oh, I wasn't the most popular girl in town by any means. But I was accepted, in fact-enough dates and enough callers to have a good time. I wasn't a bore or a flop any longer, nor to any set.

Why don't you try it, Stephanie? It has worked more than once.

While I respect and understand social discriminations, there are some people whom we don't meet, a waste of time. Social activity isn't healthy or happy for anyone to be alone too much. Nor is it good to be thrown only with people who make you feel inferior.

"Vagabond Girl" Ponders

Dear Miss Fairfax: Her Ex-Husband

"To begin with, I'm 24 and what old-fashioned people call a misfit. many of them among my relatives—but I'm going to be frank. I've been married and twice divorced, which, as my mother never fails to tell me, is some record at my age.

"I married my first husband at 17. He was an old rotter, and I got out of that as soon as possible. I then married a man of 36. He was one of the reliable, faithful type, upon whom a woman can always depend. But his very goodness bored me, and I cheated on him and the private we made when we were married.

"He had tried to go the pace with me, in spite of the fact that he was one of the home-loving type. He objected to dances, supper clubs, wild drinking parties, and was never comfortable when I was on the go. Then I asked for a divorce, insisted on it, and he finally gave me one.

"Then suddenly all this running around seemed flat, though I kept on the go more than when I was married. My mother said I needed a flat because I had no one to receive calls and make unhappy.

"About a month ago I met my ex-husband—the second one, who had been so decent to me. We walked a few blocks together, and then we went to a quiet restaurant to talk. He seemed so different from the men I had been running around with that I have since met. He asked: 'Would you like to come back to me?' and I said: 'No; you are too good for me.'

"Something has been left out of my make-up—decency, normal instincts, things the average woman wants in the way of a home. I never have any children.

"My mother begs me to go back to this other man, but I know that as soon as I am settled in a home with him, the impulse to torment him by rushing off to wild parties will be too strong for me. And as my freedom—not having to give an account to anyone for what I do—means and makes me lonely,

"I shall not always be 24, and I know what happens to women like me when they become ugly and middle-aged. My ex-husband says he is willing to take a chance on our re-marrying, but would that be fair to him? I have tried so much trying to make up my mind, that I have grown to be a nervous wreck.

"Vagabond Girl".

If you're not absolutely convinced that you can make a go of re-marriage with your ex-husband, it would be utterly selfish to keep him from some good woman whose tastes are more in line with his own.

As you say, you will not always be 24, and nothing is more pitiful than a woman of your type when she becomes middle-aged, plain and lonesome, and there is no demand for her high spirits. The saying "party girl" is more eloquent of the folly of never being serious about anything, than a thousand sermons.

It sounds prosy, but why don't you put yourself on probation? If you can go straight for a year and still want to go back to your ex-husband, why not make another try of it, then?

Advice to the Lovelorn
By Beatrice Fairfax

He Wants To Wait But For Two Years

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When he says he does not plan to get married for two years, I feel I'm just wasting my time. When I try to find out where I stand with him, he replies that I am dying to get married, and if I really loved him I would be willing to wait. I'm 19 and he is 22.

Last Christmas he gave me a beautiful dinner ring. I overheard two of my friends saying they hoped I'd promise him he didn't give me an engagement ring, but I know he couldn't get it. I like suggestions ring for the price of the one he gave me.

The other evening his sister informed me as her sister-in-law to be. Do you think he told them we intended to be married some time, or was she just taking that for granted?

Wondering.

At 22 years of age, this young man is far too young to realize he cannot support a wife at present. As to your ring, if you would like to have your future assured, it is asking entirely too much to suggest that you wait for two years.

Under the circumstances, you will be justified in making other friendships.

His Mother Threatened To Throw Me Out

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We planned to be married in June, as soon as he graduates from college. I've been to his home many times for dinner, and his family have always treated me very well. Then he threatened to quit college and his mother became angry and placed all of the blame on me. She said I had made him change his mind, and the next time I came to the house she'd have me a fine thing. She even went so far as to say she'd throw me out if on every time he asks me to go there, I refuse.

Do you think I should continue my visits to his home, no matter what she says against me, I intend to marry her and if she should I keep away? I am 19; my fiance is 23.

It is the greatest mistake possible for a boy or girl to quit college within even a short time of taking a degree. These days a college degree makes it much easier to get employment, even where a college education is not really necessary. Many high-class shops insist that their clerks must have degrees. So please use your influence to make him stick it out, until he gets his degree.

And you can hardly blame his mother if she thinks you're the cause of her son's quitting college a year the end of the course. You might write her a letter and assure her she is mistaken, and she and you have been friends. Then perhaps once to get this boy to do the sensible thing.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Will you be good enough to tell me when and how to use finger-tip towels? They are so very small that there is a doubt in my mind as to how they are used.

2. Will you please tell me, when serving a cocktail, are the cocktail napkins served to the gentlemen as well as to the ladies? I have seen them served only to the ladies, and have also seen them served to both.

R.

1. Finger-tip towels — it's a delightful appropriate name are usually emailed sheets of paper that placed in our bathrooms. They are also called guest-towels. For use of guests, who are given the "hospitality" of the house. These "guest-towels" are only for the fingertips, are not only decorative, but a great saving of the larger hand or face linen towels. They come not only in white, but in the loveliest of pastel shades, or in deeper shades, if you wish to carry out a certain color-scheme, or color-accent in your bathroom. They are often monogrammed, or they come too with pert rows of flowers or decorative motifs at the edge. Often now, as a corollary of these finger-tip towels, we have lipstick towels. Very sensible, too, for the housekeeper. Have you found out? These bits of sheer, very dainty red linen, with the word "Lipstick" stitched on them, just above the hem.

2. Cocktail napkins should be given to men guests as well as to women guests. They needn't use 'em if they don't wish to. As a matter of fact the correct way of distributing cocktail napkins is on the small plate that is first passed to each guest. The plate may be the six-inch plate, the bread and butter plate size, of china or glass, or a slightly larger plate. These plates are stacked as are tea-plates with the cocktail napkin on the top of the first plate, and between every other two plates. These plates, with the napkins, are passed to the guests before the cocktail glasses are passed. This means that the guest has a plate for the cocktail and also for the tooth-pleasers that are served. Service correct, convenient, gracious.

SECRET MARRIAGE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to be married secretly and we hope to keep it a secret for about two years. The thing is, after the two years, we intend to announce the marriage. I would like to be married in church at that time and in a veil. Is this permissable?

R. Should a second shower gifts after two years of secretly being married?

R.

1. It would not be proper for you to be married in formal wedding attire, with a wedding veil, after you have been married for two years. Whether or not you might be married in church would depend on the church-regulations, and these you would have to find out from the minister of the church to which you intend to be massed after the two years have elapsed.

2. There are no definite regulations about the giving of showers.

But I don't see why they shouldn't be given for you at that time.

BIRTH ANNOUNCEMENTS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am soon to become a mother for the second time. Will you please advise me as to whether it is proper to send birth announcements? A friend of mine is going to have a fourth baby and she is going to send announcements. Is this proper?

Constant Reader.

Yes, it is quite the proper thing to send birth announcements whether the baby is the first one or the fourth, or whatever the number.

Crippled with Neuritis and Rheumatism

Able to climb ladder, and swelling left hands after taking FRUIT-A-TIVES only four days.

"I suffered so badly from Rheumatism and Neuritis that I could hardly walk upstairs or close my hands. After taking Fruit-a-tives for only four days the swelling left my hands and I was able to climb a ladder which I have to do as my work."—Mr. Wm. Tracey, Toronto.

Fruit-a-tives are the discovery of a famous Canadian doctor. They are truly delicious. Containing extracts of nature's fruits and herbs, Fruit-a-tives are a tonic. They work to strengthen all organs of elimination. Their tonic effects help bring lasting, glowing health.

Tricks in Using Face Coloring

Harmony of features, she knows, is an important point in beauty.

By ROSEN FOLLETT

WHEN quitting hour with make-up, a girl must have a seeing eye for the harmony of features. Every feature has a problem of its own. Pigment tricks that make one girl look adorable will make another girl look like an ass.

Common errors are made that should be evident to anyone whose brain is normally active. For instance, there is the woman with the large nose who uses the lipstick to produce a pretty little Cupid's bow. Then

Montreal Power

Experienced floor traders were in demand on the Montreal Stock Exchange of Montreal Power during the recent boom in that issue. A considerable amount of buying power of the public came appeared. This is not surprising in view of the good news circulating surrounding the company. The production and electricity showed an increase of 8 per cent over last year and the political situation in this Province has cleared somewhat the atmosphere. Naturally Montreal Power, a subsidiary, is putting its house in order and as time goes on, new developments in the way of power will be found. The above mentioned developments make it appear as though net earnings in 1936 should show an improvement.

WESTERN BISHOP WILL VISIT CITY

Announcement was made in St. Thomas' Church and Christ Church on Sunday that on Friday of this week the Rt. Rev. A. E. Burgett, D.D., Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, and the Rt. Rev. G. R. Welsh, C.M.G., D.D., Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Saskatoon will pay a visit to Belleville. The clergy and lay workers of the Deaneries of Hastings and Prince Edward will unite with the Rural Dean of Christ Church Parish Hall in the afternoon and an open meeting will be held at St. Thomas' Parish House in the evening. The Rt. Rev. John Lyons, Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, will be present at the meetings.

The Western Bishops are visiting the Province of Ontario at the request of the Board of the General Synod which met at Calgary last fall. The reason for the visit of the Bishops is to give information regarding the work of the church in the western provinces and not for the purpose of raising funds.

CARDS OF THANKS

WEATHER

Toronto, May 4 (CP)—Pressure is high southwestern Ontario lower lakes and over northern Manitoba, with low pressure off the Atlantic coast. A shallow low area is moving rapidly eastward from James Bay. Moderate to heavy rains have occurred in the Maritimes and light showers in Quebec, Southern Ontario and Northern Manitoba. The weather has been generally fair elsewhere in Canada to the Atlantic.

Lake Superior—Moderate winds; partly cloudy with stationary or a little higher temperature.

Toronto and Lake River—Partly cloudy and cool; probably a few light scattered showers.

Manitoba—Fair and cool followed by rising temperature.

Saskatchewan—Fair and mild.

Alberta—Mostly fair and somewhat warmer.

International Nickel

Because International Nickel is going to probably be most popular of the market leaders and because of the superb sales profits and financial condition of the 1935 company's showing for the first quarter of this year is awaited with the utmost eagerness. It is scheduled to appear around the middle of this month. That this statement will make excellent reading for the shareholders there is no doubt as the Government's figures on the export of nickel for the period show an increase of 50 per cent over the preceding year's figures. Increased output seem encouraging for higher dividends.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied by Biggar and Crawford by Pinkerton & Co. Service.

Budget Benefits Coming Gold Producers

Although disappointment has been expressed by many mining men that the budget has brought no important taxation relief nor any changes in the method of production taxation, the exception from corporation tax for three years in the case of new producers of gold is likely to encouraging nature. A good number of coming producers will benefit directly from this tax exemption whilst indirectly it should benefit the whole gold mining industry, indicating as it does that the Government is so co-operating in bringing new producers and developments into industry.

Pamour

This Porcupine property, in which Noranda and Quebec Gold jointly own a controlling interest will be in production in four weeks with a 500-ton mill. May step-up to 1,000 tons daily by end of year.

Read-Authier

Will indirectly benefit through Sigma Mines which may announce a mill within the next few months.

Red Lake Gold Shore

A mill of a capacity of 100 tons daily has been ordered and the mine should go in production on that basis early this summer. Profits assured right from beginning of production.

Gladstone

A mill of a capacity of 225-250 tons a day is now in the midst of construction and the property should begin production late this summer.

There are also a great number of properties which are rapidly developing ore or are about to, as news of developments is such that the properties may be ready for mill construction in a short time. Among these may be listed, Stanleigh, Hard Rock Gold, Jacobsohl, Minto, Gold Bell, Sturgeon River, Base Malartic, Lamaque Malartic and a good number of other properties which are being financed semi-privately.

Belleville Ball Team to Open C. O. B. L. Season at Home Playing Kingston on May 25

Loop Meeting in City One of The Shortest in Years

PLAYOFFS ARRANGED

President Will Appoint Umpires to Work in League

Belleville's 1936 edition of senior diamond celebrities will officially pry off the O.B.L. lid on the home diamond on the morning of May 25 versus their ancient baseball enemies, the Kingston Frontes, 1936 senior O.B.A.A. champions it was announced at the annual meeting of the O.B.L. held in the local Y.M.C.A. on Saturday. Opening clubs, the system of umpires and a few changes in the league constitution constituted the agenda of the meeting, which proved one of the shortest held in years.

The opening dates allotted were 23rd—Oshawa at Peterboro; May 25th—Kingston at Belleville (a.m.); May 25th—Peterboro at Oshawa (p.m.). The remainder of the schedule was left in the hands of Secretary Newton Thompson and will be drafted and sent out to the various clubs for approval next week. The holiday dates asked for by the clubs were Belleville—May 24th, Civic Holiday and July 13th; Peterboro—July 1st; Civic Holiday; Kingston—August 3rd; Civic Holiday 26th, and Napanee—July 1st.

A schedule adopted by the representated clubs, which means each club in the league will have two games at home and twelve games away. Five teams officially entered the league meeting on Saturday, the champion Kingston Fronts, Belleville, Peterboro, Oshawa and Napanee.

Same Umpire System

Considerable arguments resulted over the question of umpires, the Belleville delegates being the only ones present to uphold the suggestion of neutral umpires being employed. After a lengthy discussion the same home and home system of umpiring that has been in vogue for the past few years, was adopted by the O.B.L. for 1936. This year, however, the clubs will not be permitted to select the umpires locally, the umpires having to personally apply for a berth on the league's umpiring staff. President Max Swanston, of Peterboro, in a motion passed regarding league umpires read—"that the same system of umpires in the league as in 1935 be employed except in league play-offs, when neutral umpires will be appointed by the league president, these neutral officials not necessarily to be C.O.B.L. umpires, however."

President Max Swanston, opened the meeting by having all delegates and reviewing the 1935 season which terminated with the Fronts as winners, which were adopted.

Under the heading of general business several communications were read. Kingston proposed that the protest fee of $10 which must be given by the home team to the visiting club be changed and established local in the hands of the league, by each club prior to the season. It was decided to leave the completion of the league schedule by all teams. This suggestion was also made at the suggestion of Mr. Jack Yanover, of Belleville, that the O.B.L. be instructed to pay the present $25.00 guarantee fee, prior to the terminal then of each league game in the case of replay games, that being games that must be played owing to tie contests or rained out games, when the visiting team will receive FIVE cents per mile, one way, for 12 players. The previous amount paid was ten cents per mile. After all legitimate expenses are deducted however, the visiting team also shares in one-third of the gate as well.

The league adopted three makes of baseballs, optional to the clubs. The Spalding, Reach and Worth ball were taken as official balls for the season. Worth ball is a new American-made sphere, that retails at a much lower cost than the former two mentioned and is used in the American Association, Pacific Coast and Texas leagues.

Play-Off System

The play-off system in the C.O.B.L. will be similar to that of last year, the league meeting in a three game series in the league semi-finals with the ultimate winner meeting the club that finishes first in a five game series. A slight change was made in the matter of the play-offs however, when it was decided that in the semi-final series between the second and third placed teams, that the club finishing second be permitted the choice of the first and third games, the possible third game to be played on the grounds on the second place club. In the final series the club finishing the regular schedule in first place earns the right to have a possible fifth game on their home grounds and also can name the grounds upon which the fifth game of the series is to be played.

The representatives present were: President Max Swanston; Vice-President Art Casteron (Kingston); Secretary Newt Thompson; Delegates, Belleville, A., Walt. M. P. Duff; Kingston, Joe Daley, Mickey Compeau; Oshawa M. Lane, G. Campbell; Peterboro, T. Holgate, G. Perdue; Napanee, Jack Gerow, T. Pointer and N. Brennan. Mr. R. A. Wilson, Past President of the League and of the O.B.A.A. officially represented the parent body and acted throughout the meeting in an advisory capacity.

Following the meeting Manager Alex Weir and Coach Roy Fox of the Belleville Club again announced the first practice of the season would be held at the Fair Grounds tonight.

WINDSOR FORDS DOWN DOMINOES

Canadian Basketball Title is Won in Three Straight Games

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Windsor, Ont., May 4 (CP)—Basking in the warmth of this city's admiration, Windsor Fords entertained their supporters yesterday while their sponsors pondered whether or not the new Canadian senior men's basketball champions should go to Germany in August to defend the Dominion's title in the Olympic games.

Wilfred R. Campbell, President of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, said he would deal with the question "later" but refused to commit himself regarding the proposed trip. Coach Jim Winden's team abroad.

Windsor registered its third straight victory in the best-three-of-five series for the Canadian championship here by defeating visiting Victoria Dominoes 40-32. The Ford Dominoes, all well over six feet in eight, fought indomitably but hopelessly against the fast-moving attack of the Fords to hold an 18-14 advantage at the end of the first half, and mustered but victories 22 to 9 in the second period.

Fords took the first game 47-38 and the thrilling second game, 33-32.

Fistic "Natural" Expected to Pack Gardens to Roof

New York, May 4 (AP)—A fistic "natural" is expected to pack Madison Square Garden to the doors Friday and inject a bit of spring into the sagging boxing season in preparation for the big outdoor battles of summer.

Raised as a pair of the greatest bantams on record, Lou Salica, the lightweight champion or McLarnin, former holder of the welterweight crown, usually brings a sellout with him when he steps into the ring. So it's no trick at all to predict a capacity crowd when they come together for ten rounds. The fans have been anticipating such a meeting as a remote possibility for months, ever since Salica won the title.

When it comes to picking the winner, the various angles of this bout seem to produce more "ifs" than a Kipling poem. Salica will have a considerable advantage in height, 5 feet 4½ inches to Tony's 125 or more, but Canzoneri never has hit a few pounds trouble him. Tony can hit and box with the best, but so can the baby-faced southpaw champion.

It's on that basis that many of the experts are picking Salica to win but Canzoneri a slight favorite. Admitting that both are capable fighters, they figure McLarnin must have lost some of the keen edge from his form or perhaps he would not be so wide open to win. Others contend that McLarnin's starting age and weight will make it just too bad for the gentleman farmer from Marlboro, N.Y., and indications are it will be a pay your money and take your choice affair when they step through the ropes.

JOCKEYS TURN FAMOUS RACE INTO A RODEO

Three Riders Set Down For 15 Days For Rough Riding

WINNER TAKEN EAST

Bold Venture, Longshot Winner Will Start in Preakness

(By Dillard Stokes)

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Louisville, Ky., May 4.—(AP)—Newly inched in the Horses' Hall of Fame, Morton L. Schwartz' Bold Venture, the shot winner of the Kentucky Derby, sped east after new conquests today, possibly to gamble his fresh celebrity for the Preakness next Saturday week.

Bold Venture and his apprentice jockey, Ira "Babe" Hanford, dropped down from the wire room at Churchill Downs after the race. They left Louisville bewildered equally by the odds-on Ervrity's stretch duel downhill and the woolly running of the race, which turned the thoroughbred stake into a rodeo.

Not since Brokers Tip and Head Play pounded down the wire home spurt in 1933 with their riders locked in combat has the Kentucky Derby looked more like a band of Cossacks out for a little rough fun than in Saturday's 61st renewal.

Only this time the whip and show were banned and the proceedings were launched the first time since 1913. Bold Venture and Brevity emerged cleanly to fight it out in a homestretch contest of courage and speed.

The stewards called it rough riding and before the horses were cooled off suspended three derby riders 15 days apiece. They let the horses' numbers hang, not changing the order of Derby.

Down for 18 days went Hanford, the 18-year-old apprentice, in his first glory. George Woolf, who brought Major Austin G. Taylor's Indian Broom, the Canadian Contender, safely through the pack into third money, and Nick Wall, rider of C. B. Shaffer's Coldstream which finished fourth.

Home Yard Race

William Woodward's Granville, which lost his rider in the bumping start, was on the same train as Bold Venture, bound for Baltimore.

Granville's handlers said he was not hurt by the plunge although he was within inches of ending his racing career right there as the field thundered past him.

Joseph E. Widener's Brevity was the favorite in the betting at post time after the start. His game recovery from the bad break to place at the first half mile up to where he could challenge Bold Venture and Venture and lose by only a head.

Comforted today by his first win in training, Brevity lost his backers by thousands, which backed Brevity from 3 to 1 to 2 to 1.

Brevity suffered a few cuts in the fracas, but was considered serious. He plans to take Brevity to Elmendorf Farm in Lexington tomorrow to join the Fair Withers and Belmont Stakes about three weeks.

Mrs. Silas B. Mason's Hie Did, the 1935 two year old, lost his speed after the mile was run, was cut slightly on the left hind leg, and was considered serious.

Bold Venture returned his lucky $5.00 for place and $4.00 for show. Brevity paid the surprising price of $5.00 for place and $4.00 for show. A $2 win ticket would have brought only $3.60. Indian Broom was $3.80 for third. The straight price would have $7.60. The time for the race, 2.03 3-5, was the third best ever turned in for the Derby route of 1¼ miles and a quarter.

Five teams were fully and officially represented at the semi-annual meeting of the O.B.L. here on Saturday and all announced their readiness to commence the fray. The meeting showed more optimism than has been registered throughout the old O.B.L. in years. The absence of so many imports throughout the entire loop is bound to have wonders, and even among the league executive, as it seems to have a leadership to give the old game of baseball a more personal touch. The only regrettable feature of Saturday's meeting was the turning down of Belleville's suggestion for neutral umpires throughout the season, but President Swanston is personally going to supervise the officials this season, so maybe the umps will be lacked up somewhat.

Late Saturday night we received a telegram from Ernie Gibbard, first vice-president of the O.B.A.A. that read—"Belleville's two applications for transfer ok, but what's the status of your team?" We thank Mr. Gibbard for his prompt reply, even (those last six words). It was good to hear that St. Louis, Syracuse, Kipp and McCaul had been granted transfers, and the "the balance of the story." Mr. Gibbard will well wait and see how they pan out. In the meantime, however, the first practice of the season will be held in Belleville at the Fair Grounds this evening, Manager Alex Weir and Coach Roy Fox desire it to be broadcast, that every player is open and available to the players making the best showing during the practice sessions. Here's hoping to see the individual players to get out and battle for themselves, and the free country so get goin' lads."

When the clubs voted on the change of play-off rules on Saturday, the decision of retention warned them to be cautious, but the delegates ignored the pleas of the wise, especially in the final league playoff, if the two contesting clubs each win two games in the final play-off, the fifth game is to be played on the grounds of the team finishing the regular schedule first. President Swanston feels this will ultimately result in a big gate receipt. With five teams in the loop, three will qualify for the league play-offs. The club finishing second in the race will clash in a three game series with the first place team, Incidentally the finals in a five game series with the fifth place team. Incidentally also as first team. Incidentally Kingston lost their two proposed amendments because their delegation was not "seeing the sights" along Front St. when we got minutes late in arriving. Mr. Joe Daley was not present to honor nothing of the amendments. It had been championed by the Pony's executive.

Following Saturday's meeting President Max Swanston informed us that Jake Solomon, the father of the C.O.B.L. indented making a Belleville visit in the near future, so soon. "Can you persuade Jake to come down and appear with the Parks here in Belleville?" we asked President Max. "Well, I don't think that would be a bad idea," replied Max. Even the announcement that Jake Solomon would appear with the Belleville club should be a magnet to C. O. B. L. fixture in Belleville. Here's hoping that Jake does, we have not witnessed a ball game in Belleville in years.

Barry Jay, spring Ford Prick, president of the National Baseball League issued a bulletin and instructions to the umpires of his league. So popular did the bulletin become, that it was subsequently published in book form and has been offered for sale to all baseball leagues and clubs on the continent. At the recent annual meeting of the O.B.A.A. that copies were distributed among thousands of those pamphlets. On Saturday the O.B.L. voted to purchase 200 of these booklets from the O.B.A.A. and they will be distributed, not only to the league umpires, but to each club, and in turn every player in the Central League will receive a copy. We understand they are extremely interesting to persons interested in baseball, as they are thoroughly technical, and that repeatedly crop up during ball games. It informs the reader of the rules governing the game, that generally is recognized as one of the finest bits of published information out baseball ever printed. Yes, we hope to have one in time and will comment on the contents. The copies retail at something like a nickel and doubtless could be obtained from Secretary Thompson, if applied for immediately.

Tomorrow night is wrestling night in Belleville. Regardless as to what the crowd runs or fans might say regarding the pastime, we still maintain that "wrestling is one of the best matched card we could think of, from the preliminary to the final frame. Starting at the bottom, what better pair of pugnacious bankers could we desire in the game ring, than Al Dunlop and Chief Lynx? Now the semi final of the wrestling card is a feature of Andy Meen, the Norwegian slam bang energy, who takes on Ed Meske recognized as one of the cleanest and best men in the business. That brings us down to the "big boys." The Unknown versus "Irish" Jack Donovan in a five city title bout would be nothing short of "tops". Donovan, since his last appearance in Belleville, has been knocking the New York, Albany and his home town at Syracuse, where he is also

Three weeks from today, weather permitting, will be our opening day. The past few days have done wonders to our greens; they never looked better. Over twelve hundred feet of sod has been used this spring in patching and it has helped considerable. A new sprinkling system will be used this summer; it is a travelling waters the whole green without attention taking some three hours to go around so the first rink to be used in these parts. This can be used to great advantage at night; something that has been greatly needed; watering in the daytime has not in the past done our greens any good. The general meeting of our club is called for Wednesday night in the Y.M.C.A. Every member will be notified. Matters of great importance to the club will come up for discussion, so try and get out 100%.

We are glad to learn that Fred Hinds will be with us this year. Fred is a good bowler with lots of experience and Mr. Hinds will no doubt be welcomed by the Ladies' Club, Mr. and Mrs. Kerns will be with us this summer, both being members of the West Toronto Club. Mr. Kerns was transferred from Toronto. He is a member of the Royal Bank staff and we welcome them. Charlie Sulman was up to the Club on a tour of inspection and is more than pleased with the shape of greens, and Charlie knows.

NEW YORK, May 4.—(AP)—Here is a one-minute interview with Henry Lesnevich, one of the greatest lightweights of all time . . . Henry is the latest to butt up with Tony Canzoneri against Jimmy McLarnin . . . Says Jimmy has been idle too long to come back against such a tough little guy as Tony . . . Doesn't look for a knockout, but wouldn't be surprised if Tony connects with a sleep producer . . .

Add coincidences: Your agent picked Bold Venture out of the hat in three separate dizzy pools. . . . Got cleaned up in a modest way, too . . . Here's a true dodger for you: Sid Catreaux, young catcher, learned to play baseball in an insane asylum . . . No, he wasn't a patient, but lived at the East Louisiana State hospital in 1934 as a paid guest in order to be eligible to participate in the institution's nine with his catching. . . Sidney Wood would look mighty good in the Davis Cup picture, but Sid says the gravy in Wall Street is too good to pass up.

The Rev. William Magee, S.J., president of Marquette University, is convinced athletic prowess are possessed by his football players . . . Father Magee popped in on spring practice the other day and the gridders sang "Hail, Alma Mater" . . . Immediately a heavy ball storm broke and sent President Magee scurrying to shelter . . . Followed by the way, that burn on Kimmy Dimaggio's dog was more serious than the Yankee front office ever announced . . . The Houston Buffs of the Texas League, sent in the dog and cat pound for a black cat to sit on the bench and help the Buffs end a 13-game losing streak.

Short and snappy: The pros have put Henry Picard on the spot by almost unanimously picking him to win the United States open . . . Bill (Strangler) Lewis says a good wrestler can beat a boxer in 30 seconds . . . After looking at the Indians for three days, New York fans think what the Club needs is more pep and lots of it.

One of the reasons Jack Burns didn't go better with the Browns is because Rogers Hornsby insisted on picking the pitches for him . . . Burns wanted to do his own picking . . . Those pictures of Jimmy McLarnin dancing with the Mrs. in the hot spots cheered the Canzoneri followers . . . The Garden may bring Joe Knight north to fight John Henry Lewis . . . Philly fight fans tendered a swell party for Lou Jaffe, Evening Ledger boxing expert, in celebration of his 35th anniversary as a newspaper man.

AVERILL'S SLIDE WASTED ON THIS DOUBLE PLAY—Earl Averill (arrow) slides into second base ahead of the throw from Cleveland Indians, Lyons, for a beautiful slide, but it's no use, for Tony Lazzeri, second baseman of the New York Yankees, has had the ball tossed to his first for a double play. The scene—a Yankee-Cleveland game in New York.

JOINS HORNSBY—Forced to seek a new first baseman following injury to "Hank" Greenberg, his knee-run hitting star, Manager Mickey Cochrane of Detroit Tigers traded Elon Hogsett, left-handed hurler, to St. Louis Browns for Irving Burns, first baseman. ARM IS BROKEN—Star first-sacker of the world champion Detroit Tigers and the American League's most valuable player last year, who fractured his left wrist in a collision with Jake Powell of Washington. He will be out of the Tiger line-up for at least six weeks.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and pop was taking a walk before supper and we was going through the square and I said, O, pop, look at him, do you think he's a holdup man or a racketeer or something.

Meaning some man needing a shave in the red sweater sitting on a bench with big wide shoulders and his cap pulled away down over his eyes, and pop said, Not a bit of it. In fact he's probably just the contrpty. It's always been a pet theory of mine that you cant tell a man's occation from his personel appearance. In real life a musician never has long hair, and a policeman in spite of popular belief, frequently has such small feet that he amuses his guests by getting into his wife's shoes. And so it is with gangsters. A gunman generally has a voice like a dove, and instead of being big and rough and terrible is mild easily be mistaken for a tailor's dummy, pop said.

Well then O, pop, what do you think that man on the bench is? I said, and pop said, Something you'd never suspect from his appearants, you may be sure. Perhaps he repairs ladies watches, or possibly he is a dancing instructor or a florist stately children, or maybe for little statelty children, or maybe he is an expert in making dolls say Mamma, pop said.

Why dont you ask him, pop, and find out for sure? I said, and pop said, If he's still there when we come back I'll see if I can lead up to the question.

And on our way back I said, He's still here, pop, and pop said, Who? O, him.

And he went up to him saying, Excuse me but aren't you the gentleman I say arranging blossoms in Herman I say arranging blossoms in a florist's shop window? and the man said, Why that must of been me brother. What I do is learn canaries to sing but by the aid of kindness, he said.

Either proving that pop was right or else that the man was sour-castic.

BENNETT WILL BE FINANCIAL CRITIC

Debate on Dunning Budget Will Commence on Tuesday

OTTAWA, May 4—(CP)—Estimates will occupy the House of Commons when it meets this afternoon and until tomorrow's session, when debate on the Budget will be opened by the Leader Bennett, Opposition financial critic.

While the Conservative group will leave it mainly to the former Prime Minister to express their comments on Finance Minister Dunning's tax and tariff proposals as announced in the Budget Friday, it is anticipated many of the Social Credit and C.C.F. members will take part in the discussion, and some of the monetary reform members in the Liberal ranks will criticise economic aspects of the Budget.

H. SHOBROOK NOT ONLY DEFENDANT

Servants And Agents Were Included In Statement of Claim

Ottawa, May 4 (CP)—In its report April 28 of Clifford Francis Fothall's successful action before the Supreme Court of Canada to sustain an award given him in British Columbia courts, The Canadian Press erroneously said Fothall alleged that during his illness H. F. Shobrook, defendant, broke into his Fothall's office, seized and carried away all his books of account and records, collected outstanding accounts and converted them to his own use.

Fothall's statement of claim said: "The said Shobrook, one of the said defendants herein, and the other defendants herein by their servant or agent, servants or agents, broke and entered the plaintiff's said office and place of business in the said premises and seized and carried away therefrom all the stock-in-trade, books, accounts, books, records, effects . . . The said defendant Shobrook and the said other defendants by themselves, their servant or agent, servants or agents, conducted and operated the business of the plaintiff to their own use, collecting premiums and other accounts and debts and things connected with the business of the plaintiff, converting the same to their own use to . . ."

The Canadian Press regrets its error in permitting the assumption from its report that Mr. Shobrook was the only defendant, regrets also any inconvenience the error may have caused Mr. Shobrook, and is glad to make this correction.

Exempt Purchases May Affect Makers

Toronto, May 4—(CP)—The Dominion Government budget exemption on purchases up to $100 in the United States, Britain and Italy affect Canadian manufacturers of women's clothing more than consumers of other articles, according to Ernest R. Freeman, president of the Freyseng Cork Company Limited.

"This privilege might be a temptation to Canadian women who like new and different clothes to do their shopping in the United States stores, border cities, like Niagara Falls and Windsor may suffer some."

C. J. Roden, president of Roden Brothers Limited, expressed the same opinion, adding it was "going to be hard on Canadian manufacturers, who have been trying to keep Canadian labor employed".

TWO LOSE LIVES DURING STORM IN WESTERN ONTARIO

Property Damage in Border Cities Area Heavy

LASTS SHORT TIME

Plane Flipped in Midair and Roof of Grandstand Blown Off

(By the Canadian Press)

Western Ontario, particularly the Border Cities area, was struck by one of the worst storms in years Saturday which left in its wake two men killed and untold property damage. Both sides of Detroit and St. Clair rivers suffered most in the deluge. Keeping to a narrow path, the storm swung inland, touched Stratford and Wallaceburg then turned toward Fort Erie. Little damage was done at these points, the full fury of the storm being spent on the border cities.

O. L. Tarter of Lincoln Park, Mich., was fishing with Harry Phillips, Detroit, in the St. Clair river, when the high winds overturned their boat. Phillips was rescued by an employee of a boat livery but Tarter drowned.

The second fatality took place in the Detroit River, where George T. Smith of Keene lost his life. Another craft near the one in which Smith and a friend were, also overturned but all but Smith were saved.

Shore communities in Sandwich East Township, Lakes Ontario and St. Clair shores and other communities reported serious property damage from the storm, which lasted only a few minutes. Electric power in Windsor was out of order for over half an hour. Street-car service in Tecumseh and Riverside was cut off for over two hours and service on the municipally owned Windsor, Sandwich and Amherstburg Electric Railway was discontinued for an hour.

Flipped in Midair

The open-cockpit monoplane of Milton Schneitzer, 26-year-old Detroit amateur pilot, flipped over in midair as he took off into the wind and nose-dived into a bank of the Rouge River. Taken to the hospital, Schneitzer was said to be not in a serious condition.

At the Devonshire race track, Windsor, the roof of the old grandstand was blown off and carried away. Several barns were also damaged.

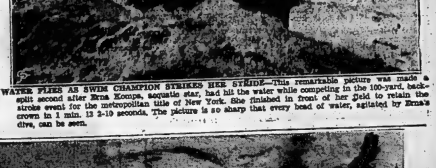
The roof of Harvey Morrison's home in Riverside was sheared off and carried 100 yards. Then the storm returned and tore the front porch off the house. It was unoccupied at the time.

In Wallaceburg the rural district suffered most. Farm buildings were blown down, roofs ripped away and telephone and Hydro disrupted. Poles were reported down in various sections of the community. A heavy thunderstorm was accompanied by a twister here, which caused the property damage.

Telegraph poles along the Canadian National Railways, right of way near Robbins, 12 miles west of Port Erie, were torn down by the freak tornado. The storm missed Crystal Beach entirely and passed over Fort Erie without causing damage.

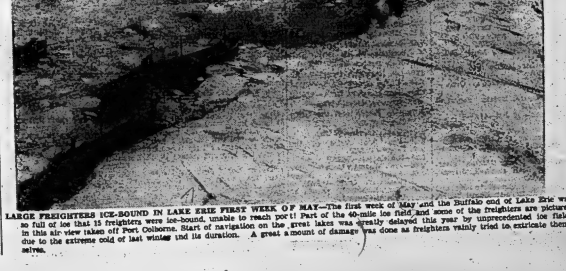
Trucks Sideswipe, One Man is Dead

Durham, Ont., May 4—(CP)—Edward Sweeney, 40, of Dornoch, died in the hospital here Saturday from injuries received in an auto crash near Dornoch on No. 6 Highway Friday night. John Birr, Sweeney's companion, is in a serious condition in Durham hospital.



Dornoch is about 10 miles from Durham, which is 90 miles south of Owen Sound.

Sweeney's truck was sideswiped by another truck, occupied by two Hamilton men, which was bound for Hamilton from Hepworth with a load of potatoes. The Hamilton men are Geo. Roseblood and G. Davis, who escaped injury.



An inquest will be held but no date has been set. Sweeney is survived by a wife and one child, a baby a few weeks old.

GAS MASKS LATEST MODE—In Kiev, Russia, to go out strolling with the dog means donning gas masks—for man and beast. The above picture was taken at a recent demonstration of the Young Communist League of Kiev.

WATER FLIES AS SWIM CHAMPION STRIKES HER STRIDE—This remarkable picture was made a split second after Erna Koenpe, Seguatic star, had hit the water while competing in the 100-yard, backstroke event for the metropolitan title of New York. She finished in front of her field to retain the crown in 1 min. 13 2-10 seconds. The picture is so sharp that every bead of water, agitated by Erna's drive, can be seen.

LARGE FREIGHTERS ICE-BOUND IN LAKE ERIE FIRST WEEK OF MAY—The first week of May and the Buffalo end of Lake Erie was so full of ice that 15 freighters were ice-bound, unable to reach port! Part of the 40-mile ice field and some of the freighters are pictured in this air-view taken off Port Colborne. Start of navigation on the great lakes was greatly delayed this year by unprecedented ice fields due to the extreme cold of last winter and its duration. A great amount of damage was done as freighters vainly tried to extricate them-

WINDSOR FORDS MAKE BID FOR BASKETBALL CROWN—After a season of stirring and successful competition in which they captured the eastern Canada men's senior basketball championship, Windsor Fords made their bid for the Dominion title in a three-out-of-five game series against powerful Victoria Dominos, defending champions. The Canadian senior champions have a trip to the summer Olympic games waiting in the offing for them, giving added zest to the final series. Fords took the first game 37-36, more than meeting the famed power attack of Victoria's sharpshooters. Border City basketeers surround Manager Gordon Fuller, whose face decorates the centre of the over-sized ball. Left to right around circle they are: Jimmy Stewart, Norm Dawson, Ed Dawson, Julius Goldman, Ian Allison, Gordie Allchason, "Toots" Meretsky and Red Wiseman. ONE WAY STREET

by JOSHUA McCORD

Madge jumped up from the step, the song wholly forgotten in her excitement. Sawyer stooped to gather her in his arms, then hesitated. For some reason, he was embarrassed.

"Of course I didn't" he assured her hastily. His shaking fingers started tearing with the bonds. "This is for you." He produced and displayed the nearest home front. "Perhaps we should go in first," he suggested. "Your mother is . . . she's at home, isn't she?"

Madge captured the ball, swept the locks into the pocket of her dress. An impatient shrug with the door and she vanished, leaving her father to follow. Her shrill voice came floating back to him.

"Daddy's here! Daddy's here!"

John Sawyer had made his way so far as the living room when there came a little rush. A familiar figure in a doorway . . . His wife. She paused there. While she stood, Sawyer at him in a shocked fashion.

The husband perked cockatoo-like his torn, crushing his cap tightly against his breast. After all, it had been four years. And in prison.

INSTALMENT 11.

"Anne! Back . . . don't you know me?"

"Johnnie!" A sobbing little cry. A naming of other days. "What did they do to you?"

The two were in each other's arms, clinging desperately.

"It's all right, dear . . . every-thing's all right now." Sawyer punctuated the words with comforting pats on the small shoulders thrust against his own.

"There hasn't been a minute, Johnnie . . . There hasn't been a minute!" That name again. She called him that when they first were married.

"I know. How is . . . everybody?"

"We're all well . . . Mrs Sawyer's head nodded assent to everything in the question and answer recalled her to the situation. "You saw Jean?"

"Yes. Bless her heart! She met me at the junction but had to get off the store." Sawyer was fighting valiantly to master his composure. He kept one arm about his wife, as if he feared to see her again.

"It was all right for me to walk here, wasn't it?" Anne Sawyer asked anxiously. Her brown eyes were shining with tears, were very like Jean's.

"Much better, dear."

"I was watching for you, John . . . I was! I didn't think it was quite time. And I've been making gingerbread . . . for you. Wouldn't you like some? And a cup of tea? You look so tired!"

"Of course. If you'll let me go with you."

No sooner had they reached the kitchen than Madge was there, clamoring for her mother's attention. She had busied herself with the newspaper pencil during the exchange of greetings.

"Mother! Look, mother! See the funny doll! Daddy brought it to me!"

"Oh . . . Isn't that nice? Watch out, darling ..... this kettle is so very hot. May be a big girl, John?"

"Indeed she is. I'm going to mind my baby."

X X X

John Sawyer imbibed this home atmosphere much in the same manner he nibbled at his gingerbread and sipped his tea. It was like breaking a long fast. The past hours of confinement and solitude stood him in good stead. He was able to keep his emotions in check. He seemed living in a dream . . . He must hold on to it carefully.

Anne Sawyer may have sensed it. She moved quietly about the kitchen attending to various little duties, adding touches to the place's things. Madge helped by climbing into her father's lap and entertaining him with her prattle and talk.

"You're holding me awful tight, Daddy."

"I wanted to make sure you were here. Do the others know I'm coming?" Sawyer asked it anxiously.

"Oh, yes. They're expecting you."

Within a few hours he had exchanged greetings with the entire family.

The situation proved a difficult one for all and alike. The tension due to the father's absence was made by any of the little group, yet he was aware the dread topic was uppermost in the minds of his wife and the older children. Hung over the reunited family like some threatening cloud. It would be easier, Sawyer decided, when he had Jean with him. She would tell him again what she loved him—that she was glad to have him back. That was what little second most. None of the others had yet a little words.

There was no need for Anne to say anything. She understood. When the two of them were alone, every barrier would be broken down. Perfect understanding then. But the children . . .

Peggy had retired shyly to his caresses, then busied herself gratefully with her books. She regarded her father with something eyes when she thought herself unobserved. He seemed that she was afraid. Of what, he wondered? What her sudden world any homecome? Afraid of him? Did he still carry some terrors from jail. . . . In that course self? He found himself wondering sadly if Anne had saved any of his former clothes. A clean white shirt would feel oddly grateful so he did. . . . It was not likely.

John Junior was frankly hostile. He had withdrawn to a corner where he sat with his face half concealed by a newspaper. When he came in he shook hands with his father in a constrained fashion, displaying an elaborate indifference to the latter's wistful advances.

"I scarcely can believe it, you, Junior? Why.... You're a man!"

"Yeah, I guess so."

The boy answered questions as briefly as might be, volunteering little on his own account. He was not working. His last job was at a filling station. He had been let out. Hard to get anything in Gorham now. That last information might have its own significance.

Jean's hurried entrance and cheery talk did the atmosphere for all of them. Then dinner.

"Come everybody. Your old place, John."

The very nearness of the group about the table brought a fresh note of constraint and the meal was eaten in silence, save for the efforts of Jean and her mother. Young John was the first to finish and was pushing away his chair with a muttered excuse when his father interfered.

"Just a minute, please, son. There is something I want to say to ...to all of you."

The boy resumed his seat in silence. Sawyer swallowed the last of his coffee with an effort, then looked uncertainly about the circle.

"Peggy, dear ....you and Madge may be excused," Mrs. Sawyer suggested gently. She anticipated what was coming.

"I'd like Peggy to stay," the father directed. "She is old enough to understand." He gave her a little smile. "Madge, you run and put the new Peggy to bed."

A strained silence as the child reluctantly left the room.

Jean looked pityingly at her father. So different. His white pinched face, that coat sagging on his thin shoulders. Gone all the cheery exertions. He plainly was at a loss to know how to begin his little speech, sitting with a spoon gripped in his fingers and making aimless patterns on the cloth with its bowl point. He did not look up as he said slowly:

"I think it would be better if we talked things over a little. I want you all to know I understand how difficult I have made these four years....for each one of you. I'm afraid my coming back isn't going to make it easier....just at first. You see, I've had so much time to think things over in....where I've been. No one spoke. He drew a long breath.

"Some day, you will be able to realize what it means to me to be home. But I want really to come back....to take my old place as head of the house, as I....I won't expect too much. I'll try very hard to win the love and respect of all of you."

"Daddy Jean!" Jean could withstand the pathos in his face and voice no longer. "Don't say that, please. You know we love you." The tears ran down her cheeks, even as she gave him a smile.

Mrs. Sawyer's eyes sent her husband the same message. Her lips were quivering too much for speech. Peggy suddenly left her chair and stole to her father's side. She passed an arm about him.

John Junior stared steadily at his plate. His face was an expressionless mask.

"This is the only thing that makes it possible," John Sawyer said, drawing Peggy close to him. "I'm going to do my best to make it all up to you. That's all I have to say. I wanted you to know."

Silence.

"Son!" The father's voice broke out desperately. "I understand. I suppose it's harder for you than any of us. But you're a man now and....I need your help badly. Can't you...."

"Oh, cut it out!"

Sawyer flinched as if from a blow. He failed to understand that the surly retort shielded a sudden regret to the contrary. It was with shame that Sturges introduced his subject in his first conversation with Stewart.

"How about your little artist, Emory? Has she said any more about leaving us?"

"She's staying on for the present," Stewart explained. "But there's a new subject—to, the affection. I wanted to tell you about it."

"You Mr. Cannon?" Sturges asked it sharply from the corner where he had dropped into a chair.

"What's he done now?"

"Been paroled. He's on his way home. Today, as a matter of fact."

"You don't say! Um—m. Then Miss Sawyer had better stay."

"It's placing her in a hard position," Stewart admitted. "Have you out moving or speaking as the boy hurried from the room.

The front door closed noisily.

INSTALMENT 12

In the press of other matters, Mark Sturges delayed checking up on Jean Sawyer's doings.

However, the matter was uppermost in his mind each time he had occasion to confer with Spencer Cannon. He half expected some reference to their clash be made. It hardly seemed possible the old gentleman would forgo reprisals of some sort. Perhaps he was biding his time.

On the other hand, Miss Sawyer must have decided to remain in the store, since there had been no report to the contrary. It was with this hope that Sturges introduced a minute?"

"Of course."

"Puzzling sort of thing..." Emory began slowly. "I've known John Sawyer for a long time. Probably as well as anyone. He wasn't the sort of chap to have intimate friends..... too much of a family man. Absolutely devoted to his wife and children. Queer that they should have proved his undoing. There's no other explanation for it."

"Embezzled for their sakes, I take it?"

"Absolutely. The man must have become unbalanced through worry. His actions afterwards were proof of that."

"Tough."

It was tragic. You would have to know that family to really appreciate it," Stewart mused. "He and Jean were peculiarly close. Few youngsters would have taken it the way she did."

"She tried to carry on in his place?"

THE TARZAN TWINS — (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Even the shocking discovery that their captors were cannibals could not long depress the Tarzan Twins. Their dauntless spirits rebounded to the vital question: What to do? It was Dick, himself now with Doc's American optimism, who made the first practical suggestion.

"The first thing is to learn the language," he said. "Then we'll know what's going on. And if we escape we can ask our way." "Sure, we might meet a traffic cop," grinned Doc. Disdaining to answer, Dick turned to their big black fellow-captive, "What's your name?"

"Bulala," replied the black, who then announced that his own native dialect was similar to that of their captors. The boys started at once to learn his simple tongue, and applied themselves diligently until darkness came, with its terrifying noises of the jungle night.

Through the opening of the hut they saw twinkling fires, encircled by savage dancers, stirred to frenzy by the ominous rhythm of tom-toms. This, thought Dick, was as rehearsal for the frightful ceremony by which he and Doc were to be ushered from this mortal world.

WAR IS OVER: ETHIOPIA IS ITALIAN'—DUCE

Britain Urges Italy to Begin Peace Negotiations in East Africa

Entire Italian Nation Mobilized to Hear News Of Entry Into Foe Capital

Seven Months' Campaign Raises Fascist Flag Over Ethiopia

VANGUARD IN TRUCKS

Situation Hallowed by Arrival of Troops, Disasters Cease

Rome, May 5.—(CP-Havas)—The Italian Government today officially confirmed the entry of Italian troops into Addis Ababa.

Premier Mussolini immediately proclaimed mobilization of the entire Italian people to hear news of the victory late today.

Screaming sirens summoned Italy's people to hear Il Duce's jubilant message concerning the East African war.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio informed the government that all precautions had been taken to bring order to the Ethiopian capital after three days of terror and bloodshed.

The news of the Italian entry into the ancient capital of Ethiopia swept Rome and the country like wildfire.

The population was galvanized into action. Immediately following their appointed assembly, messages to Il Duce's order for an "advance" or mass mobilization.

Addis Ababa, May 5 (CP-Havas)—Rome's victorious troops raised the banner of Fascism over the principal capital today.

Troops Occupy Ethiopia

The vanguard of the forces under Marshal Pietro Badoglio rumbled in trucks past the British Legation shortly after 4 p.m. (9 a.m. E.D.T.) and headed for the centre of the city.

The entry ended a campaign of conquest which began seven months ago and evolved in a series of smashing victories for Italy which left the Ethiopian Army disorganized ruin.

Arrival of the Italian troops was expected to relieve the grave situation which had existed since Emperor Haile Selassie fled his country last Saturday.

The motorized columns of Blackshirts, Askaris and other contingents, which abandoned Emperor Haile Selassie's forces in a series of victories near Lake Achangi and in the Tembien Mountains, advanced into the ancient capital after a difficult advance through the winding Imperial highway" and another route leading southward from Dessye.

Reads Telam By Armies.

Shock native Italian troops under General Alessandro Pirzio-Biroli had been penalized for a rapid drive inital for the past 24 hours but had delayed their entry to form a junction with the motorized column of 2,000 trucks bearing about 17,000 men which followed slightly in the rear.

The shock troops of Askaris had followed a route branching to the east of Dessye from Mussolini Avenue to Lice. The bulk of the northern armies had followed the Imperial highway southward from Dessye road 45 Lice and stretches westward toward Addis Ababa.

A number of swollen streams were the chief obstacles which met the forces as it marched down on the street. A sharp wind blew across the high plateau, sweeping the rain-soaked fields.

Wild Tribesmen Loosed.

The flight of Emperor Haile Selassie last week to Djibouti unloosed the primitives of the wild tribesmen. For three days looting, pillaging and fighting raged in the city. As an indeterminate number of foreigners were killed. Some of the city's finest buildings were wrecked and pillaged.

For those three days hundreds of foreigners crouched in the Legations, fighting off marauding native mobs in a manner reminiscent of the Boxer Rebellion.

Earlier the entire staff of the U. S. Legation had been conveyed safely by fifth troops to the British Legation grounds. Troops from the British Legation also had helped subdue rioting outside the Belgian Legation.

DEFENDERS SAFE AT ADDIS ABABA

U. S. Minister and Friends Are Safely Evacuated Today

Washington, May 5 (AP)—Cornelius Van D. Engert, U. S. Minister, and the little band who had stayed with him at the British Legation in Addis Ababa, were safely evacuated today.

Word that the defenders had left the building, which for four days was besieged by Ethiopian bands, both on foot and mounted, was brought to the city of London.

Ambassador Bingham. United States envoy to Great Britain, said the word came from London and it was made public by the state department. No details were available beyond the terse cable:

"U. S. Legation safely evacuated."

It was assumed that Minister Engert, his wife and the other occupants of the forty-forty fortified location had been taken to the stout British compound some three miles north Addis Ababa.

London, May 5 (AP)—The government today faced demands by Labor members for persistence in punishment of Italy as a result of the crisis in Ethiopia.

CLAIMS EXCUSE MAN WAS BARBER

Hon. P. J. Veniot Protests Refusal of Tie Contract By C.N.R. Board

Ottawa, May 5 (CP) — After a flurry over allotment of railway tie contracts in New Brunswick the Commons special committee on railways and shipping today made appreciable progress in reviewing the service for 1936.

Chairmad C. P. Fullerton of the government-owned system, and F. E. Morrow and J. E. Labelle, members of the board of trustees, gave evidence. Proceedings were largely routine in their nature.

The committee is now going over item by item various expenditures of the system for 1935.

The breeze about ties was started by Hon. P. J. Veniot who protested an application for a contract in New Brunswick whom he knew had been turned down by the railway. The letter refusing his application had stated he was a barber; but Mr. Veniot declared contracts were awarded to haberdashers, proprietors of pool-rooms and hardware merchants. As a matter of fact the man refused was not a barber having given up that calling some time before.

Mistakes Sometimes Made.

With 4,000 applications per annum for tie contracts, the railway management sometimes made mistakes, Mr. C. Vaughan, general agent in charge of purchase, stated in answer to Mr. Veniot. The contracts caused to management a great deal of trouble. Everything possible was done to see they were given out fairly to people who could fill them satisfactorily.

League to Step in as No Ethiopian Government Exists

London, May 5 (CP-Havas)—Havas News Agency says that it was authoritatively learned in London today that the British government is requesting the Italian government that peace negotiations to end the East African war begin immediately.

Havas said it learned the British request asked that the negotiations be conducted with the League of Nations sitting in Geneva.

Havas said its information was from a fully reliable source but it could not immediately be confirmed officially.

It was understood that the British Embassy in Rome had been instructed to advise the Italian government.

That London was aware the turn of events in the east, Havas indicated that the authority of Emperor Haile Selassie was crushed.

That the League was to see the East African war with Ethiopia ended:

"That negotiations to this end should begin immediately.

That Britain recognizing that the Ethiopian government is at present non-existent, that therefore a League of Nations Committee should be commissioned to represent Ethiopia in such negotiations.

POLICE NOTIFY OWNER OF THEFT

Car Found Abandoned And Taken to Police Station

When a motor car owner informs the police of the theft of his automobile, it is seldom news nowadays, but when the police notify the car owner of the theft and recovery of his automobile, well that's news, and that's exactly what occurred in Belleville last night.

While patrolling his beat along the southern section of the city about 8.30 a.m. today, P. C. Arnott discovered an abandoned Pontiac coach stalled in the centre of South Front St. With the assistance of F. C. Evans the vehicle was taken to the police station and parked for safe keeping. Later in the morning Chief Allin asked to see the East African war with Ethiopia ended:

Subsequent check-ups proved the car to be owned by Fowler, when and who stole the coach still remains a mystery to all concerned, however.

The Canadian branch of the Federation made its own rates and working conditions, different from those existing in the United States. The initiation fee was $50 or which, he thought, a good deal. Due to the international body. He said there were probably 11,500 musicians in Montreal who were not members of his union.

HALF OF ITALY HEARS SPEECH OF MUSSOLINI

Italian Press Says Peace Will Be Made in Ethiopia

NOT IN GENEVA

Military Occupation Means Political Possession

Rome, May 5 (AP)—Premier Mussolini declared tonight "the war is over" and "Ethiopia is Italian".

He made his declaration to half the population of Italy assembled throughout the nation in an adumbrala—an official mobilization of the public.

The populace was assembled in celebration of the fall of Addis Ababa.

Il Duce spoke from a blue bannered balcony in the Piazzo Venezia while thousands of subjects gathered in the piazza below him.

Ethiopia is no longer a member of the League and military occupation means political possession, informed sources asserted today as Fascist troops entered Addis Ababa.

The consensus of newspaper editorials reflecting government opinion emphasized: No direct negotiations therefore will be carried on with Ethiopia; peace will be made in Ethiopia, not Geneva, which must no longer have a voice in the Ethiopian problems; Italy's military occupation of Ethiopian territory means political possession, but with the recognition of the rights of the other powers.

"As far as I am concerned I shall continue exploration work, mines department steps in and stops me," Henderson said after returning from the Halifax Union where he said farewell to Dr. D. E. Robertson, part owner of the mine and one of three Toronto men found dead in the underground level by the collapse April 12.

"There's plenty of gold there," the veteran mining engineer said with a sparkle in his eye. He planned to enter the abandoned mine shaft through the old Kaulback workings or by means of the 100-foot shaft far distant from the famous Keyhole slope by which Richardson department brought Dr. Robertson and Alfred Scadding to the surface after 10 days imprisonment.

There were 30 men at Moose River who would be deprived of a living unless the mine continued operation, he said.

Asked if Dr. Robertson would remain a partner in the new development company, Manager replied: that depends on the doctor."

At a well-attended meeting of Thurlow Conservatives held in Carrollton last evening, Mr. Wm. Grey and Mr. Herb. Scollard were named as delegates to attend the Provincial Conservative Convention at Toronto on May 26th. A Provincial party header will be named at this convention.

POLICE BLOTTER

Robert Blackadder, Tweed, who was arrested last week on a serious charge that implicated him with a sixteen year old girl, found himself faced with a more serious charge, that of attempted abortion, when he appeared before Magistrate R. J. Bleiler, K.C., today and was further remanded until next week. The man was held in custody, Provincial Police revealed this afternoon.

Charged with operating a common gaming house, Daniel Lee, Chinese proprietor of the Belleville Cafe, pleaded guilty as charged and paid a $15.00 fine, plus costs in a speedy police court held in Belleville yesterday afternoon. The case arose out of a raid made on the Lee's cafe in question when P. C. Evans found a number of young men operating a dice game and was satisfied that the accused was paying cash premiums on chips purchased by the players. The machine was ordered confiscated and will also be destroyed by order of Magistrate Bleiler.

Inspector Frank Gardner, Inspector of Provincial Police for District No. 3, announced today, that four men had been arrested in Toronto yesterday charged with the recent robbery at Sayers' general store in Havelock. The four men apprehended gave their names as John Ottoman, Kevin Wise, Emanuel Hill and John Hill, the latter two being brothers. Further arrests are to have moved from Bobcaygeon to Toronto.

"With the arrest of the two Hill boys we expect to reach the ringleaders of a combine that have been committed in the north country this spring", predicted Inspector Gardner today, "Complete to be arrested in Toronto will be taken to Peterboro for trial."

Activities proved none too brisk in and around local police circles during the week end when only two motor accidents were reported, while only nine tramients appeared at the police station in court of last night's lodging last night.

War Buddies Meet After Nineteen Years

Two war buddies shared their bully beef, hard tack and the ordinary routine of a soldier's life in the same regiment of the 4th Canadian Mounted Infantry throughout most of the major battles of the Great War. At Paschendale in 1917, a farewell was taken and since that time, although the two returned men have lived but thirty-four miles apart, nothing had been heard of each other since.

This week William Ford, Hydro Electric employee of this city working with one of the repair gangs in the vicinity of Marmora chanced to sight Thomas Cousins of Delora, in the Royal Hotel. After seventeen years the long arm of coincidence had reached out and joined the two buddies who had served in France together.

A family reunion was held that evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Cousins, Delora, at which Mr. Ford was honored guest.

FIRESTONE HEAD MEETS DEALERS

W. H. Funston, Jr., Brings Cheering Message of Industry

Optimism pervaded the gathering of Firestone '75 and two hundred Firestone Tire dealers in this district at Hotel Quinte last evening, when they met Mr. William H. Funston, Jr., President of Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. Limited and Mr. Russell T. Kelley, President of the Russell T. Kelley Advertising Agency.

A cheering message from the business standpoint was brought by Mr. Funston as a result of personal observation on his trip across Canada. The West has to places had as much as ten feet of frost penetration this past winter and naturally the more frost there is, the more moisture for wheat. Consequently the people are looking for an excellent crop", he said. Answering the natural observation that the West is always optimistic, Mr. Funston remarked "They have not had the deep penetration of the kind for the past eight or ten years, they have had none at all. Mr. Funston told of immense developments in the packing industry in British Columbia. Millions of dollars are being spent. A salt mine is being miles north of Edmonton is developing and pouring in money. Last year was the best year in the Fraser Valley, British Columbia lumber mills which have been closed for the past ten years are going full steam ahead.

In British Columbia the smallest amount of fruit in storage for years is reported.

Tremendous activity is taking place about Edmonton and in North British Columbia in the mining industry, and even in Alberta oil prospecting is being done. It is estimated that the purchases of the mining people in Edmonton will reach one and a half million dollars this year.

Mr. Kelley also spoke at length on conditions.

Retailers Take No Action On Parking By-law Petition

Discussion Over Present Regulations of Parking is Held

Members of the Belleville Retail Merchants' Association met Monday evening in Dickens Coffee Shoppe in monthly meeting. Various matters of interest to retail merchants were discussed and action taken. Transport Traders Act and proposed Hawkers and Peddlers legislation came in for discussion and it was felt that this legislation should be strengthened in order to adequately protect local merchants. Through the legislative member for the constituency this endeavor will be made in conjunction with merchants all over Ontario to place further restrictions upon transient traders and canvassers who peddle from door to door and from truck to truck.

Parking came in for a brief discussion in connection with the proposed new parking bylaw limiting parking in the business section to one hour between certain times. The Retail Merchants' Association was asked to oppose a petition now being circulated asking the City Council to quash the by-law. It was claimed that a petition had fifty-one signatures of business men. No action was taken on this and a motion to ask the City Council to reduce the hours of parking hours to from two p.m. to six p.m. and all day Saturday, failed to carry.

Laurie Lewis, member of the City Council and also a member of the Retail Merchants' Association, said that he would be a grave mistake to interfere with the parking bylaw as proposed. Much thought had been given to it by the council and an endeavor was made to have it as satisfactory to all concerned as possible, and all in all the council was showing willing to do business in Belleville, in his opinion it certainly deserved a trial. Plenty of parking space, aside from the business streets, was being provided by the city council, and the work of levelling the lots and gravelling them into suitable parking places would give considerable work to citizens out of work.

Mr. Lougheed, promoter of a proposed broadcasting station for Belleville, was given permission to address the meeting asking for the approval of the merchants present to his proposition. He submitted that the Belleville Chamber Commerce had objected to the project as not likely to be a commercial success for certain reasons, including lack of local talent and lack of advertising support, but thought these objections could be met by programs of electrical transcriptions, hookups with Canadian National programs, and national advertising. Mr. Lougheed was certain that a radio station placed on No. 2 Highway between Belleville and Trenton would provide better reception in Belleville under all conditions. He asked the merchants present to approve and a motion was passed approving the proposition as outlined by the promoter, but without any financial commitments.

Several other matters of interest to the members came up for discussion, which Credit Week, and were dealt with.

Secretary Russell Woodley compiled the chair, and minutes, financial statement and executive meetings were read and on motion approved.

'Canada Has Abundance To Create a Civilization'

Dr. H. M. Tory, Educationist, Looks to Future With Confidence

ADDRESSES CLUB

To close their lecture season, the Women's Canadian Club had the good fortune yesterday afternoon to hear one of the most gracious dresses of the series, when Dr. H. M. Tory, eminent Canadian scientist and educationist, spoke to a large gathering of members in St. John Street United Church Hall.

Mrs. H. Williams, president of the club, in welcoming the guest speaker drew attention to his scholarly attainments in a life devoted to education and scientific research. Besides his degrees of B. A., M. A., B. S. C., P. H. S., D. Sc. Dr. Tory has received the degree of Doctor of Laws from seven Canadian universities. For seven years President of the University of Alberta, he has latterly been president of the National Research Council at Ottawa until his superannuation a few months ago.

Optimistic Over Canada

Imbued with an optimism for Canada that the years of depression have failed to dim, Dr. Tory launched his address with his enthusiasm as he showed eloquently and logically that Canadians can look into the future (of Canada with confidence. This is his unswerving belief and to communicate this belief and confirm the people of Canada in this view he has undertaken to address Canadian Clubs throughout the Dominion.

To the audience the speaker put three questions, and step by step developed the answers to prove his contentions. The questions were: Have we in Canada natural conditions that go to make a civilization? If so, have we such an abundance that we have a fair chance of competing with growing nations? and, assuming the answer to the other two questions to be in the affirmative, how are we going to realize our inheritance?

Land Basis Stressed

The foundations of civilization rest on a few simple things, pointed out Dr. Tory, in developing the first question. These things are land suitable for cultivation, as history shows that mankind has never made a single step in civilization until the elementals of providing sustenance from the land have been learned. While this is termed an industrial civilization it must not be forgotten that if it were not for the land every factory would close and every city would be a desert. Climate suitable to produce of forest and mine to meet man's other needs, for every step beyond the beginning of a civilization has resulted from man's ability to take the power of forest and mine and use it for the development of society. The secret of internal competition necessary to progress is found in the ease and quick means of communication and virile people strong enough to be independent and yet interdependent so go forward in its own way, with its own interests.

Canada Has Abundance

"To considering all these things we can say we have an abundance to create a civilization" said the speaker.

Comparing this country with others, Dr. Tory said that it is evident that it will be possible to support in Canada a population of fifty millions, some authorities suggesting ninety millions. A similar land area in Europe supports one hundred and sixty millions. The next twenty-five years promise great developments for all the intimate knowledge of science that has come to man within the space of the last two generations is placed at the disposal of the modern world.

Dr. Tory felt that whether we like it or not the doors of Canada must soon be open again to immigration. If so great care must be taken to invite only the peoples sufficiently related to us in blood, understanding and intellectual development to associate beneficially and to understand and prize the political institutions of the British Empire.

Every Variety of Climate

Every variety of climate is offered the residents of Canada, said Dr. Tory, in showing that Canada possesses all of the fundamentals of a civilization, while the treasures of forest and mine are her richest possessions if utilized intelligently and to "best advantage, especially in transportation. the fact remains, no matter how one views the present day problem, that there never has never have been a Canada had it not been for the railways which linked together the provinces widely separated in interests.

Canada has been developed chiefly by two great people, the British and the French, great races that have played a the forefront of development and who have done a magnificent work for Canada in the past, an ancestry of which all might be proud.

"To truly realize our inheritance we must continue to fight for Canadian unity and learn to think as a nation. We must hold our best men in Canada, seek to develop the highest kind of intelligence here so that in the great forward movement in which the world is engaged, Canada will take a leading place, not waiting to be carried along on the progress of other nations," Dr. Tory said.

Mrs. Williams expressed the thanks of the club to Dr. Tory and after the meeting tea was served.

HIGH STANDARD OF MUSICAL ARTISTRY REACHED IN CONCERT

In a programme that reached a high standard of musical artistry, the choir of John Street Church, assisted by Miss Jessie B. Thulle, was heard in recital last evening and the quality of the singing was both generous and well rounded. The choir was ably directed by a local group. The choice of songs and the manner in which they were rendered was under the splendid direction of Mrs. Leona Riggs, choir leader, who displayed a fine interpretation of the choruses.

Opening with "God Save The King", in the quickened tempo arranged by Dr. Arne, the choir maintained to the triumphant Hallelujah Chorus from Handel's Messiah. Evidence of performance, that showed careful training and excellent choir leader, the ensemble was well balanced with splendid tone in the interpretation of the choruses.

O'DONNELL PAYS FOR SEX MURDER OF RUTH TAYLOR

Hanged in Don Jail at 8m Early Hour Tuesday Morning

NO CONFESSION

Wife Spends Entire Night Outside The Jail Property

Toronto, May 5 (CP)— Harry O'Donnell paid the death penalty at Don Jail early today for the sex murder of Ruth Taylor. The 26-year-old service station attendant dropped through the trap at eight o'clock this morning and was pronounced dead at 8.17 in the presence of only a few officials.

Police guarded the jail grounds and only about 100 persons dotted the sidewalks around the building, standing silently as they awaited the notice, which was tacked on the jail door by Acting Deputy Sheriff Steven Wills, announcing that O'Donnell had been hanged for slaying and ravishing the 20-year-old stenographer last Nov. 4.

Newspapermen were not permitted to witness the hanging, they joined on the jail steps until Acting Deputy Sheriff Wills made his appearance with the official notice. A few minutes later Father P. A. McKenna, O'Donnell's spiritual adviser, appeared. He announced the young man had walked to the scaffold quietly, making no confession of the crime the law charged he had committed in a Gerrard Street east ravine.

O'Donnell spent a quiet night, his spiritual adviser said. At 7.40 o'clock this morning he was escorted from his cell. He walked to the scaffold followed by guards. Father McKenna walked beside him. H. E. Collings, Deputy Sheriff and Governor of the jail, H. O. Denning with the Acting Deputy witnessed the hanging.

An inquest was held immediately by Dr. John Cassels, jail surgeon. He was pronounced dead and his body later was turned over to relatives for burial.

Wife Stayed All Night

O'Donnell's wife, who was in hospital after the birth of a child, when the crime was committed, spent the night outside the jail with relatives.

"I want to stay here until the light in the cell goes out," she sobbed. That's my Harry." She walked up and down the street outside the jail for a time and then was persuaded by O'Donnell's father and sister to enter a motor car.

O'Donnell was hanged exactly six months from the day the 20-year-old stenographer's body was found in the Gerrard Street east ravine. The Don Jail is on the same street, about two miles west of the murder spot.

O'Donnell bade goodbye to his relatives yesterday after his counsel, Frank Regan, told him an application for executive clemency on the ground he was unsound mentally had not been allowed.

Father P. J. McKenna, Roman Catholic chaplain at the jail, spent the night with the condemned man. O'Donnell broke farewell letters to his relatives and counsel thanking them for their efforts to free him.

Committed in February

O'Donnell was convicted in February of murdering Miss Taylor after attempting to ravish her at the bottom of the deep, wooded ravine. A group of schoolboys found the girl's semi-nude body on the muddy ravine floor, sprawl amid a confusion of her own bloodstained clothing and skirt with her skull fractured.

O'Donnel was taken into custody the next day—Nov. 5—as he went about his work at a gasoline station a few blocks away. A couple of days later, police testified at the trial, an officer found a wrench in the ravine which they said had been used in the service station. Similar imprint was found on some of O'Donnell's tools at the service station.

In the early days of his detention his wife knew nothing of it. She had borne their first baby just two days before the stenographer was murdered and the news was kept from her in hospital. O'Donnell had visited her the night of the murder, leaving her shortly before the time at which police estimated the girl had been slain.

Admitted Passing Spot

Under police questioning, he admitted readily he had passed the ravine as he walked home, but maintained he had not entered it. His statement made no mention of Miss Taylor, who had been on her way home from his office work, when she was accosted into the alley and assaulted.

O'Donnell's clothing, and the floor of his apartment yielded burrs, and seed leaves similar to material in and about the ravine. Most damning, though, of all the evidence arrayed by the Crown's battery of scientific experts, were hundreds of tiny blue hairs picked from the prisoner's mottled clothes.

The prosecution experts swore they were indistinguishable in texture and color from material in the men's blue sweater found on the girl's body. The defence attempted to break down the implication, introduced evidence that Mrs. O'Donnell, when her husband last embraced her, wore a blue sweater also. But this was promptly denied by the maternity hospital matron.

Mrs. O'Donnell Not In Court

Mrs. O'Donnell did not come to court. After the trial, defence counsel Frank Regan, K.C., obtained from her an affidavit that she could not be recalled by the defence at the time and's declaration, that she would give hopefully new evidence if a retrial were granted. Nevertheless, the Ontario Court of Appeal rejected the appeal unanimously.

The appeal in the Supreme Court of Canada, grounded on the claim that the Ontario Court's ruling conflicted with the finding of a similar appeal in another province, also failed.

Through it all, O'Donnell's composure never cracked. Since his arrest, he had maintained the same outward coolness with which he confronted the police at the time of his arrest.

His claim, that he was innocent, never wavered. He stuck to it through the early questioning, and at the trial, he proclaimed from the dock, that he was "still not guilty." Just before Mr. Justice Nicol Jeffery pronounced sentence.

Boy's Camp Committee Prepare for Season

The Boys' Camp Committee met at the Y.M.C.A. recently to consider plans for this season's work.

The camp will be operated for boys between 7nd to 1925, and for G.O.I.T. girls from July 30th to 31st. The committee are now in receipt of a letter from the Trust to increase the usefulness and benefits to be derived from a vacation at the Metra Lake site.

Improvements were made to the site after the closing of last year's camp.

A fine new dining hall was contributed by the Belleville Rotary Club. The sleeping cabins were painted and the equipment is now in good shape.

The Camp would welcome the gift of a piano suitable for camp service.

Stevens Opposes Move Saying It is Out And Out Subsidy

Ottawa, May 5 (CP)—The budget debate, second of the regular full-dress debates of the parliamentary session, began in the House of Commons today with Conservative leader R. B. Bennett leading the floor as opposition financial critic.

Life's other members who propose to speak, Mr. Bennett has been studying the budget speech all day, by Finance Minister Dunning, and appraising the tariff and taxation changes contained in it as well as Mr. Dunning's comments on past and future financial policy.

Yesterday's sitting was devoted to the special question-and-answer estimates out of which provision will be made for unemployment relief in the present year.

For direct relief grants to provinces the sum of $26,000,000 was voted and when queried about this Labor Minister Norman Rogers agreed it was not sufficient to keep up the monthly grants at their present scale. He said a reduction of 15 percent had been made on April 1 and no understanding had been given the provinces to maintain the grants at any definite level.

On the other hand he wanted it understood there had been no decision to make an increase now. The government was anxious to keep the costs of relief down but if more money were required it could be made available by another appropriation.

10,000 Men For Railway

Approval was also given an item of $2,130,000 to reimburse the two railway companies for the wages of 10,000 men from the relief camps, who may be employed on maintenance work during the summer. The Government will bear the full cost of the men's wages, the railways providing supervision and supplies.

The men will receive the standard wages for the class of work on which they are employed and the railways will finance the supervision and supplies necessary for the work. Agreements entered into with the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways provide each company to take up to 5,000 men.

It is expected, said Mr. Howe, the railways will spend another $2,000,000 on supervision and supplies.

Donating Services

"The Government is donating the services of these men," said Mr. Howe. "We pay the wages. You might call it a gift to the railways."

The railways expressed pleasure at the men will be employed on maintenance work, that they would not otherwise have done this year. The railways have undertaken to engage all their regular summer maintenance-of-way crews before the camp workers are taken on.

About 15,000 men were now in the camps and 10,000 more were expected and hoped that at least 8,000 would find work on their own account.

The rest would be distributed equally between the two railways. The work would start as soon as the summer extra gang railway work began and would continue until bad weather put a stop to it in the autumn.

"I do not think we should let this item pass," said Hon. H. H. Stevens, Reconstruction Party leader. "We are subsidizing these two railway companies to the extent of $3,130,000. It's a straight out and out subsidy. And it should be noted that the Canadian Pacific gets in on this handout as well as the Canadian National."

REPTILES BANNED

Bagjow, Fla., May 5 (AP)—Demonstrations with poisonous reptiles were banned here today following the death of Alfred D. Weaver, 35-year-old Faith Cultist who was bitten by a large diamond back rattlesnake during a revival meeting on Sunday night.

A coroner's jury decided Weaver died "by the bite of a rattlesnake through his own carelessness" but a fellow member of his congregation said the dead man had been "ready to lay down his life for the Lord".

City council heeded numerous protests which followed the death yesterday by banning snakes on such revival meetings with strict enforcement of a "nuisance" ordinance and passage of a new law forbidding all demonstrations with snakes "to protect the health and safety of Bartow citizens".

SOUTHERN ARMY COMMAND LEAVES

Follows Emperor Selassie Into Voluntary Exile

(Copyright, 1936 by The Associated Press)

Djibouti, French Somaliland, May 5.—The high command of Ethiopia's regular army, last organized military resistance to the Italian campaign of conquest, followed Emperor Haile Selassie into voluntary exile today.

Ras Nasibu, governor of Harar Province, who held out stubbornly for seven months against the Italian forces on the Somaliland front, abandoned his defence of Harar, second city of Ethiopia, and fled with members of his general staff.

The Ethiopian officers arrived in this French territory last night after attempting to go to Berbera, British Somaliland, port about 200 miles southeast of Djibouti, on the Gulf of Aden.

Wheeler Also Leaves

Accompanying Ras Nasibu was Wehib Pasha, former general of the Turkish Imperial Army, emergency advisor to the southern Ethiopian army throughout the campaign.

The chieftains rushed aboard the British cruiser Enterprise for a last conference with Emperor Haile Selassie.

In turning to British territory for succor, Ras Nasibu accepted the example of his emperor, who sailed yesterday afternoon with other members of the Imperial Family aboard the British cruiser Enterprise for Palestine.

The position of French residents in Addis Ababa, where looting and plundering broke out after the Emperor's departure early Saturday, apparently became more precarious.

The railway from Addis Ababa to Djibouti — Ethiopia's only modern means of access to the outside world —was cut at Mojio, 30 miles east of the capital.

SPEED LINERS

The sea race is on. That much is clear. The Queen Mary has not yet taken to the waters which bind the continents, when it is stated that the great French liner-Normandie will shortly took the speed crown for the ocean voyage across the Atlantic will be given a new trial of speed in case the British ship would carry off the title.

Britishers will hope to see the speed rest with a British ship, and such rivalry is assuredly a way to increase speed and influence construction. On the other hand it is claimed that such huge craft carrying thousands of souls on a voyage cannot be economical. The other day a shareholder of the Cunard-White Star line let forth a wail about the waste of money in such competition.

On this very point a New York writer with a shy "dig" at armaments race says that if it were not for the billions going into the armaments competition he would predict that the world would go bankrupt from building liners for speed. He tells his readers that the construction of such ships is an ideal way of eliminating the profit motive out of the shipping industry.

EXIT SELASSIE

The flight of the Emperor Haile Selassie to a place from which he has taken ship with his family for Haiff, Palestine, with those scenes which have been enacted in Addi Ababa, indicating revolt on the part of tribes, is the result of one of the phases of modern progress. The crack-up of the Ethiopian resistance should not have been something to wonder at as not likely to take place for the odds were on the side of the Italians from the start despite the utterances of the Emperor, that Ethiopia would never be conquered. Selassie's rule was not the first of a modern king, but was a remarkable union underneath which lay discords and currents likely to cause a crisis.

JOKES EVER THE SAME

Jokes are old and yet ever new. Over two thousand years ago the Greeks loved to wisecrack. Some of the jokes which the Athenians perpetrated so long ago are the foundation of the jokes we of today and have appeared again and again in literary records. Prof. Prescott of Chicago told a convention of classical students some of this mirthmakers efforts.

Egnius, a surgeon, operated on Ancestorides with fatal results. Then he went to the family and consoled them thus:

"Poor fellow, if he had lived he would always have been lame."

The Greeks were wont to make fun of persons with prominent noses. Of Nicon, for instance, it was said that if you saw his nose, he could not be far off, and would be along presently.

Demetrius was described by the classic wits as being so short he could not stoop. He always lay flat on the ground when he tried to get up.

The joke about the three deaf men has more whiskers than it is popularly credited with. The Greeks had it this way:

Plaintiff (in court): "You owe me five months' rent."

Defendant: "No, I do all my grinding of grain at night."

Judge: "Well, what are you two fellows disputing about—she is your mother. you ought to share her upkeep."

DIAMOND IS CUT

The famous uncut Jonker diamond, fourth among the great diamond finds of history, and unequalled in beauty and purity and potential beauty, is in pieces. It has been cut by a Belgian scientist. It is the second of the great diamonds of history to be cleaved.

It is said that recently the stone sold for between $700,000 and $1,000,000. The cleaning was performed in private by Lazare Kaplan, a native of Belgium, said to be the master diamond cutter of the world. He explained the process by saying that cleaving is the first step in putting up a large stone. The exact grain of the gem is found and a groove is cut along it with the sharp edge of other diamonds. A hardened wedge is inserted into the groove and with the tap of a weight the diamond is split along the grain if the job is properly done. A slight mistake would crack the diamond in many pieces and so destroy its value.

The task of preparation for the cleaving of the diamond led to the making of more than one thousand plaster and 161 lead models of the stone to assist his calculations.

The first split was perfect. So tense and serious is this job that it was done in private, not even the owner being allowed to witness the operation which was done in the presence of the diamond cutter and his son.

This diamond is now in three pieces and will be cut into twelve gems in all.

The diamond originally weighing 726 carats was found in January 1934 in Landsfontein, Pretoria, South Africa. was registered as extra blue white and pure.

The twelve stones will be made into a necklace, one of the stones being the third largest in the world and of unparalleled beauty. Although 300 carats will be it is estimated lost in the cutting, it is expected that the twelve diamonds will be worth twice the original price. An attempt will be made to keep them together, if there is anyone rich nough to make the purchase.

Thomas Curtis Clark in The New Outlook

There was a man—or was He but a man?
Who walked alone with God. Though at His side
Walked other men, they could not know
His dreams.
They wahdered oft and far. His eyes could scan
The secrets of the stars; and lo they cried—
This man is made! But blinded by the gleams
Of dawning glory, still He hoped and sang.
He sang of beauty, sang of love and hope.
The children gladly heard His songs;
But men—though bells of Heaven rang
With joy for him—they could but blindly grope.
They rallied upon Him, gat them whips of thongs,
And beat Him. Him at last they slew—
Who, dying, cried: "They know not what they do!"

WORLD CRUSES ARE NOT ALWAYS just one continuous round of pleasure. This a citizen of the United States found out to his sorrow. He is Alvan Tracy Simonds, president of Simonds Saw and Steel Co., of Fitchburg, Massachusetts. With his wife he embarked on the Hamburg-American liner Reliance for a world cruise. The passengers were mostly Germans. Mr. Simonds at Singapore gave a newspaper interview on Germany's violations of the Locarno and Versailles Treaties. Said he: "I don't see how anybody can make any agreements of any kind with Germany, because she regards agreements as scraps of paper." When the German passengers read the interview they were red and declared war for it is notorious that folks on shipboard are charged with super-patriotism for their own country and resent any aspersions on it. According to a correspondent's report, Mr. Simonds' voyage was spoiled from then on. "German curses followed him down gangways; Germans bumped him, stepped on his toes, buttonholed him to shout vociferous abuse. German women, he later claimed, even spat on his wife. For five days the United States couple sat in their cabin, eating canned food. Mr. Simonds radioed ahead to Manilla for an armed guard to meet him and his wife at the pier. When the Reliance docked he went ashore behind four policemen to protect to U. S. High Commissioner Frank Murphy, and took rooms at a Manilla hotel. To newspapermen he said: 'One of my German friends who openly sympathized with me was attacked and beaten. I feared they would attack us. The officers and members of the ship's crew, however, treated us fine.".

"THE WOMAN IN RED", who betrayed John Dillinger, notorious bandit killer to the G-Men, who filled him full of bullets on sight, has been deported from the United States to her former home in Roumania. Her name is Anna Sage, and she boasts of receiving $5,000 for luring Dillinger to his death. She accompanied him from his hide-out to a neighboring movie theatre in Chicago, and wore a red dress, as arranged with the G-Men. The theatre was surrounded and when Dillinger came out he was shot to death in the presence of hundreds of amazed people who happened to be in front of the theatre. Every bullet shot entered Dillinger's body and he carried out his boast that he would "Die with his boots on," meaning that he would never be taken alive. "The Woman in Red" leaves a husband and son in the United States. Deportation proceedings were based on a conviction for keeping a disorderly house. She has relatives in Roumania but swears she will return before long to the United States.

The tablet bears the following inscription: "In loving memory of Anson Gilbert Northrup, born April 14, 1832; died June 6th, 1904. A large audience greeted the Royal Bridge Building Amateurs in the Carman Opera House. The performance was a very creditable one and reflected much credit upon the training they had received. The songs, quartettes and choruses were well rendered. Mr. Vanderveer as interlocutor was well fitted for the position, and with the end men's Robinson, Hall, Bateman, T. Siebert, S. Gillings, R. Carr and W. Hendley, kept the house in a roar during performance. Songs were given by A. Putman, W. Cumming, Jos. B. Hall, S. Simpson, C. Symons and A. Twining which were loudly encored. Miss Nellie Cunnington was especially fine in the song "An Old Little Servia." The boxing by four members of the company was very amusing. The banjo and cornet selections were very interesting, the latter under the leadership of Bandmaster Lieut. Washa, being well executed. The programme was concluded by a laughable farce entitled "Lodging To Let."

Former Labor Member Gives Impressions of Parliamentary Personages in Autobiography

Sir James Sexton Criticizes Ramsay Macdonald For Dodging Critical Issues—Says Most of The Snobbery Toward Him Was Displayed by His Own Colleagues—Praises Snowden

London, May 5 (CP)—The British House of Commons is the most political, the friendliest and yet the most democratic assembly of men in the whole world, declares Sir James Sexton, many years Labor member for St. Helens, Lancashire, in his autobiography published here.

Jimmy Sexton, as he is known to all his friends—he is not a known enemy—was earning less than $1 a week at the age of nine. He went to sea as a stowaway and later organized the Dockers' Union. He entered parliament in 1918 and was defeated at the election in 1931 which produced the National Government.

"I can honestly say," writes Sexton, "that the only signs of snobbery and patronage extended towards me came from a very small section of the front bench in the two Labor governments, whilst amongst the many expressions of sympathy I received when I left my seat a very large proportion came from the men who were, politically, my colleagues personally, my dear and dearest friends."

Critical of MacDonald.

Jimmy Sexton's charity towards all men does not prohibit some severity in his remarks on Ramsay MacDonald. When the latter came back to parliament in 1929 after four years absence, J.R. Clynes has to sacrifice to him the chairmanship of the Labor party.

"Then," declares Sexton, "we saw the beginning in MacDonald of that inordinate sense of his own indispensability which, if it did not entirely destroy the work to which many of us had devoted our lives, has most seriously impeded for a decade."

Sexton is surprised that MacDonald and Philip Snowden managed to work together for so long, considering the dissimilarity of their characters.

Snowden's views are vague and evasive on all critical issues. Important engagements turned up with a persistency exceeding when awkward topics were forward, and even when he was present he always seemed content to rely upon his personality to get him out of difficulties.

Praises Snowden.

"Not so was it with Philip Snowden. His character was as great as his sense of responsibility, forbade the slightest suggestion of his ever shirking an issue. Like Ramsay MacDonald, Snowden was ambitious, but no one would say of him that his ambition was concentrated upon his personal advancement.

Writing of the fall of the second Labor government, Sexton remarks, "I for one do not see how its course could have run otherwise than it did. Ramsay MacDonald at its head, relying upon men who, with a few honorable exceptions, were aristocrats and novices in the work of government and were opposed by men descended from families who had for generations been accustomed to rule the country, and by others whose vested interests and natural instincts made them bitter enemies of every fundamental of the Labor party's policy, unlikely now to come within measurable distance of adoption for perhaps a score of years."

DR. D. E. ROBERTSON GOES TO TORONTO

Shows Few Signs of Ten Days Imprisonment Underground

Halifax, May 8 (CP)—Still weak but showing signs of his great ordeal during 10 days imprisonment 141 feet underground in the Moose River gold mine, Dr. D. E. Robertson boarded a train today, bound for his home in Toronto, with his wife in a private car attached to the Ocean Limited.

Behind him he left his fellow prisoner in the mine, Alfred Brandling of Toronto, who was still in hospital here recovering from a severe case of "over-work."

His condition was improving rapidly and physicians said danger of complication had passed.

The third member of the small party, that entered the mine Easter Sunday night, Harmon Magill of Toronto barrister, died in the underground cavern three days before rescue workers broke through to the men and to the surface. He was buried in Stanfield, Que.

Dr. Robertson was accompanied to the train by a nurse.

An inquest into Magill's death, before adjourned, will be continued in the city of Halifax tomorrow, it was announced today.

We was eating breakfast and ma said to pop, I had the most vivid dream last night, William, really it was so vivid I'm sure it must have some significance.

Pop looked very significant of the fact that you were asleep, and it probably had some significance that you made yourself a cheese sandwich at the refrigerator before you went to bed, pop said, and ma said, But it wasn't a cheese sandwich, it was a dream, and pop said, Well, it is what you said not me.

Then pop said, that's a fine way to treat me when my wife's turned, pop said, and ma said, Humm, you dont usually mean to say it literly happened and I didn't dream it at all?

It's all true except the part about using bad language, pop said, and ma said, William Pettit, that's the truest part of all and I'm surprised at you. No wonder the whole incident seemed so real, and now I guess you'll admit there's something in dreams after all, she said.

You, eh, it's a wonder we're not poor.

And he folded up his paper and left.

still seems so vivid it's more like a vision out of a mysterious book or a dream out of this air, she said.

By golies I take back everything I ever said about interpreting dreams being bunk, pop said, if you realize that fully as you were dreaming it I was axually living it? he said, and ma said, Why William, you dont axually mean to say that you believe in dreams after all these years, she said.

I'll say I do except the part about using bad language, pop said, and ma said, William Pettit, that's the truest part of all and I'm surprised at you. No wonder the whole incident seemed so real, and now I guess you'll admit there's something in dreams after all, she said.

You, eh, it's a wonder we're not poor.

Choose a Hat To Fit Features

Anita Colby
She chooses hats that accentuate her charm and beauty.

By HELEN POLLETT

WHEN A PLAIN woman with sharp features brushes her hair back smoothly from her face and places over her head a severe-looking halo hat she is playing a dangerous trick on herself. She does it because everybody else is doing it and she must make it with the crowd.

Let her give more freedom to her locks, wear a bang with a brim for appearance will improve. Bonnet of that character is flattering. It casts a shadow over thy wrinkles if they be present. It is youthful. Misses' Fashion offers a variety of sailors. They're sweet, too.

The plain woman can't get away with much fluff-ruff. It doesn't suit her type. Yet she should not keep entirely to plain effects. Smart modernist fluff is soft and lacy is a blessing to her.

Shining fabrics like satin are not friends. Black is a good color for her, so white. She must be careful about over-dressing. Only a few women can get away with clothes that shriek and hate.

After all, simple effects suit most of the sisters, especially when they carry an effective accentuate touch. Has a clever belt, an ornament that claims relationship with the robe and serves a purpose.

Fashion Flashes

HOT WEATHER is on the way. Be the-up is the older, heavier type. For the youthful, splendid rule of heavy woolen with braid worked in school design effective long, loose to form basques on suits, coats. The coat which closes at the collar. Tuck in basques on suits, coats, and pocket flaps.

HOT EXPENSIVE . . . considering its homely look is the wandering of wide caps of white for dyed shade color. It has a big collar.

A TIE-UP between hat and shoes is noted this year. A hat of shiny calliphane straw, with yellow suede tabs and ribbon for trim, suits to worn with gloves having leather cuffs, cloth backs and navy blue capeskin pallas.

BEAUTY WALKS in blossoms this season as flower fashions continue to register more strongly. A delightful accessory is an evening shape, waist-length and wide, made entirely of gardenias in velvet, the flowers cleverly simulated.

A MAJOR NOTE in the Spring fashion song is the three-piece cape suit. A typical model has a tight-fitting coat (or jacket) with high waistline and a skirt with inset panels. The cape is circular and has tuxedo borders of natural lynx. The fabric is oatmeal color tweed.

SOFT CLOUDS of gray mark the fashion horizon. A charming frock of all-over pleated gray chiffon with belt of Parma violet suede is worn with suede gloves.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

GIRL'S HOME TOO UNTIDY FOR BOY FRIEND TO CALL

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"For over six months I have been going out with a young man to the theatre. We are very much attached. The feeling, I believe, is mutual. He wonders why I never invite him to my home, as he has said pointedly he would like to meet my folks.

"My father is unemployed and drinking a good deal of the time. My poor mother — life has been too much for her, and she nags, scolds, screams. Sometimes I wonder if her troubles aren't driving her insane.

"There are six children younger than I, and they have never been brought up with any idea of discipline. Mother is downhearted when it all and lets them run wild. They are dirty and quarrelsome.

"Now can I introduce a man I love dearly into such a home? I have never met his mother, but I've seen her, and know that she is a splendid social worker. What would she think of a daughter-in-law from such a background? His own home is lovely.

"My high school teacher was very much interested in me when I was in the grades I made. And she got the money from a fund to pay for one year's tuition in college. I am a bright student, and I feel that my self-respect will not allow me to accept this money. I feel confident that a girl of my training should be able to get a position in your town and see if there isn't something for me. Hoping you will answer me at your earliest convenience, I remain, Yours truly,

"What can I do to stand him off, to make some explanation of my continued refusal to have him meet my people? I've thought of leaving home, as there are no more funds to continue my studies at present.

"I have no money to pay my way to another city, nor any friends or relatives to stay with. If I could manage to get there. I think horrible black thoughts, but I know this is cowardly. Have you, Miss Fairfax, any suggestion for me?

"A Desperate Girl"

Yours is indeed a plight which would require the wisdom of a Solomon. But let's see if something can't be salvaged from the black picture you paint. Your teacher recognized your ability. Go to her again. And if friends who paid your tuition last year are unable to continue, get her to use her influence in securing you a job with someone she knows.

I've heard from social workers that the demand for mothers' helpers is never filled. And while that type of employment does not pay well, it might help as a solution to your problem.

Borrow the money from your teacher and advertise for a job as a nursery governess. Or try to get work in a shop that seems to be the smart thing to do these days. Many shops will take nothing but college girls. Go to all the employment agencies in your town and see if there isn't something for your good, wholesome self.

Don't be too bashful about what they have to offer in the way of social service. I feel confident that a girl of your character and education will win.

Register by frank with the young man and tell him that the bad home and its conditions are very crowded in your home, and that it's not convenient for you to have guests at present. Your situation, I agree is here, you two can take walks together.

WIFE'S NAME

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A friend of mine is a chiropractor and has her office as Dr. E. Case (we will say) and she married a Dr. R. Adams (we will call him). She still practices and has her office as before. It has passed me to know how to introduce her. I noticed in the Lodge book that she is listed as Mrs. R. Adams, but we have always addressed her as Dr. Case, and we would like to know how to address her now.—Inquisitive Wife. What is a wife to her husband. I find it difficult to say "Dr. Adams" to both.

Her husband is a very fine surgeon, and I believe that she is so proud of him and of his name that she prefers to be called Mrs. R. Adams, and thus the introduction of that listing of her name in the year book.

Reader.

R is always a problem for us to solve, but in this case a married woman doctor who is married. And there is only one solution to this problem: to find out from the woman herself what form of name she wishes to have used socially. Most married women doctors that I have known have chosen to be addressed socially just as this friend of yours has approved, using her own name and then before her husband's name, Mrs. Robert Adams. Professionally, Dr. Mary Case; socially, Mrs. Robert Adams.

Perhaps this friend of yours has listed herself in the Lodge book as Mrs. Robert Adams. This is the form of name that you would use for her socially. You are fortunate to be given the one as to what form of name she prefers socially. . . . oftentimes it isn't so easy as this. And remember that socially it is Mrs., not Doctor.

You are probably partly right in thinking that she is so proud of her husband that she prefers socially to be known by his name prefixed by "Mrs." But the other part of your judgment is that she has a sure and sound point of view about the "margins" between her professional and social life. Many, Many married professional women, doctors and dentists, nowadays, these days make this matter wise choice, using their professional names in their professions or in their business life, and using their formal social names in their home life.

HOSPITAL CALL

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been "keeping company" with a young man for about a year. He has been to his mother was taken to the hospital and was operated on. Is my friend would like me to go to the hospital with him to visit his mother. As I have never met her I feel that it is rather unwise. It would be appropriate for me to give her some sort of gift, and if so, what?

Z.

Yes, it would be appropriate for you to take with you, when you go to the hospital with this young man to see his mother, some simple gift that you know a hospital patient would enjoy. Flowers (with the exception of lilies) are always welcome, especially spring flowers at this time. And a group of current magazines would be an excellent gift. Or a book or two, if you know enough about this mother to know what might be her taste in books. Another useful gift to her is a writing-portfolio, one of convenient design to use for writing in bed, and equipped with small sheets of note-paper.

Mother Loved Even When Selfish

By LISA GRENELLE

ALL THE children, including Elsie herself, liked Elsie's mother best. All the other children thought the children and unfair of the children's mother, because Elsie's mother was a drab, because Elsie's mother was a vain, selfish, frivolous woman, or so her neighbors considered her. Yet there was poor, little Mrs. Smith, for instance, who worked her fingers to the bone for her brood, and what did she get for it? Not thanks certainly, nor any undue devotion either. Why, those Smith kids never lifted a hand to help their mother; nor did they so much as stay home to keep her company evenings, or of a Sunday afternoon. And the way they spoke of her! Just the tone of voice—exasperated, irritated, not a word of tenderness or appreciation.

"Don't you realize all your mother has sacrificed for you?" some neighbor or relative would remonstrate them. "It's didn't stir her to; the children would silently retort.

Obviously, the Smith children were a poor, ungrateful lot. Or is there another side of the question? Is it possible that Mrs. Smith scorned the children's help, was impatient at their efforts, told them it was easier to do it herself?

Was It Her Fault?

Is it possible that, working so hard, she was too tired, and consequently cross and impatient, in no mood for casual talk or companionship?

Is it possible that she reminded the children frequently of the sacrifices she was making for them, and made the children feel that they weren't worth it and that they were useless and a burden?

We have observed that the self-sacrificing parent is often not altogether appreciated by the devoted, hard-working, conscientious mother appears to be more or less commonplace — rather than loved. We parents who consider ourselves devoted and conscientious find that we always fully appreciated have, perhaps, been sometimes bitter over a selfish, frivolous, or weak and foolish parent, who was loved and more considered than ourselves.

And is not this phenomenon too common to be dismissed casually with "Children are always selfish and ungrateful, so what can you expect, with a father like that?"

Let Them Know

All the children, including Elsie, liked Elsie's mother best, not because she was vain and frivolous or for any other trait of character, good or bad, but simply because she made the children feel more comfortable and welcome—and she let them alone.

Children often are more devoted to weak and selfish mothers than to strong and unselfish ones for the very human reason that weak and selfish mothers, for lack of will or because they are too centered on their own affairs to bother, leave the children more liberty. The children then do not feel themselves weak or selfish because they are obliged. They feel freer, more independent, more self-directed, and important.

That doesn't mean that we recommend weak and selfish mothers; far from it. They do a great deal of harm. But we have always even have the advantages mentioned.

Consider Vanity

My sympathy as well as my admiration are, of course, with the devoted, hard-working, unselfish parent. (I hope that I fit to some extent into that category myself. But I do think we all must realize that in order to reap the rewards of our self-sacrifice, we must not let it be too apparent. We must not make the children feel that we must not dominate or possess him.

The many readers who found Dr. Mendel's "Story of Sea Mammals" and Shelhearsted's "Arches of the Years" so enjoyable, will find entertainment in William O'Sullivan Mobley's book, "How Animals Follow Orders." It is an old truth that a sincere autobiography, or even a diary, is always interesting, being a thing of interest. This is particularly true when the author possesses an unusual personality, as unusual personality has Mobley, as has an extraordinarily interesting career. He has a remarkable literary talent and with which to set it down. Readers are very much interested in the book, his ideological searchings and his fight against the disease which photos (the dread of space). The former led him to abandon the war-guilty" Christian civilization for the soothing calm of the primitive world-feeling; from this to become "free-lance organizer" of an international anti-vivisection movement in Poland, Hungary and other Central European countries. Belleville General Hospital is progressing favorably and is now at her home, Yeomans Street.

Twenty-five friends and members of St. Andrew's Club assembled at the station yesterday noon to bid bon voyage to Mrs. J. A. Seymour who is leaving for Australia after eight years' residence in the city. Mrs. Seymour came to Belleville with her husband, the late Dr. J. A. Seymour, former minister of the St. Andrew's Church, where she took a very active part in church and community. Possessed of charm of manner and delightful personality, Mrs. Seymour, who took a prominent part in the life of the city, has attracted large numbers of friends to whom her departure is a matter of sincere regret. Mrs. Seymour was guest of honor at many interesting functions given in her honor before the city. She will attend the marriage of her son, Dr. Stanley Seymour and Miss Elizabeth Rymer Elliott, in Montreal, on Thursday and will leave Friday to spend several weeks with friends in New York. In June Mrs. Seymour will sail for Australia, her home for many years before coming to Canada, and will reside in Melbourne.

"MUSIC DAY" AT ROTARY ENJOYED

Mrs. Mac Haig And Lloyd Bullen, Toronto, Are Assisting Artists

Monday was "Music Day" at Belleville Rotary Club weekly gathering and a fine program was presented under direction of Harry Moorman. A special trio was provided in the presence and participation on the programme of two talented vocal soloists, Mrs. MacLean Haig, (Helene Morton), widely known for her excellent singing on radio and concert programs, and Lloyd C. Bullen, noted English baritone, now located in Toronto. Both were accompanied by Mr. Leo Rapp and both declared the appreciation of the excellent manner in which Mr. Rapp played their accompaniments. Mr. Bullen declared that in the many concerts in which he had taken part in this country he had never been favored with a more capable accompanist than Mr. Rapp.

Mrs. Haig's splendid voice has been heard before in Belleville and she rendered several solos in her usual delightful manner, including "Joy and Love," an Italian folk song, "Life" and two old English songs, "My Love Is Like a Red, Red Rose" and "Bonnie Sweet Bessie, the Maid of Dundee."

Mr. Bullen made his first appearance before a Belleville audience and with splendid voice and expression gave a group of songs in a manner which stamped him as an artist of exceptional talent. His selections included a rollicking "Sea Fever," "Shining Thinking," a German song, and "The Glory Road," made famous by Lawrence Tibbett, and "The Conquerors" by Sergeant-Major."

Mr. Bullen was born in England and received his musical education in that country, studying under famous singing masters. His voice may be described as a glorious one of rare volume and tone, possessing a range of over two octaves. His repertoire includes about five hundred musical selections.

Rotary appreciation for the fine program rendered by the guest artists was expressed by E. V. Illsley and President Bert Boyce.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

Tomorrow—Two Real Entertaining Features; "Clarion Murder Case"

Fifth Vance fails in love!

Right in the middle of one of the most perplexing murder mysteries of his career, with three crimes within the space of a week, Philo Vance, life sleuth has a severe heart attack and is taken to the hospital. The next, smartest bit of femininity that ever strolled down Fifth Avenue.

That's the big news of the "Case of Clarion Murder Case," newest of S.S. Van Dine's phenomenal best-sellers—that and the fact that Richmond Love portrays Philo Vance, the book's sleekly-gowned Virginia Bruce as the society girl who gives him palpitation of the heart.

The picture opens tomorrow at the Capitol Theatre.

Nat Pendleton is the amusing Sergeant Heath, Gene Lockhart is Garamin, egotistical millionaire with a yen for fast horses and pretty women, or vice versa. Miss Bruce is his niece and there's no love lost between them.

Even the supporting cast is rich with quality. Etienne Girardot becomes Dr. Doremus, the autopsy surgeon. Reni Smith is a proper young man who thinks he's in love with Miss Bruce, but disappears when she gets in a jam. Charles Walton, Grant Mitchell, Henry B. Walthall and Charles Trowbridge fill other roles.

"Fang and Claw"

The result of a full year of work, danger and hardship has been condensed into the less than two hours that it takes to unreel "Bring 'Em Back Alive" and "Fang and Claw," which comes to the Capitol Theatre tomorrow. The noted animal collector spent nine months in the jungles of the Malay Peninsula and northern India, and the balance of the year in traveling and cutting and editing the 100,000 feet of film to its present bitten length.

The picture, which is said to be a most worthy successor to the noted animal trapper's preceding cinemadrama, his "Wild Cargo" and "Bring 'Em Back Alive" and "Wild Harvest" are new heights of interest in that it reveals to the public some new secrets of trapping and outwitting the wary birds and animals of untamed every known variety, the patience being spiced with many heartrending escapes of Frank and the members of his expedition.

AT THE ELLIS

"She Couldn't Take It"

Joan Bennett and George Raft Featured in Comedy Hit.

Check "She Couldn't Take It" as a picture you most definitely must see.

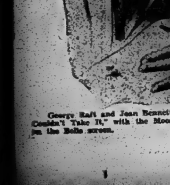
This new Joan Bennett-George Raft comedy opens in the Ellis offering at the Bells today and Wednesday matinee and evening.

The versatile Columbia Studios produced "She Couldn't Take It" as a companion piece to their two-star record hits, "It Happened One Night" and "The Married Bachelor." Let it be said that this latest film is in every way as well written, well-acted and well mounted as its two memorable predecessors.

Billy Carroll is responsible for the lively direction of the sparkling script from an original story by Gene Towne and Graham Baker. The dialogue glows with good cheer and spontaneous wit; the situations are cleverly contrived and interpreted with an adroitly blended sense of comedy and exciting drama.

George Raft bears his big-shot racketeer who, on his release from prison, finds himself sole trustee and guardian of the "dear Van Dyke" so named because of their front page escapades. The lovely, tantalizing Joan Bennett is the wildest of the clan, a spitfire Park Avenue deb who refuses to submit for the humiliating dictation of the handsome Raft. It finally "routines itself into a battle of wits between the girl and the man, with the fun and thrills tempered by a blossoming romance.

A cast that reads like "Who's Who In Hollywood" supports the two stars. There is Walter Connolly as the patron of the mad family; Billie Burke, his giddy, frivolous wife; Alexander Hackyl, the sane and sour in the household; Wallace Ford, the loud-mouthed gangster who remains with Raft at the end, and Lloyd Nolan, Donald Meek, Tom Kennedy to lesser roles as is to be expected from such veterans, their gallery of characterizations adds to the general excellence of the production.



George Raft and Joan Bennett as a screen team are a revelation and a delight. Their fans everywhere will keep you howling with glee; their hearty, belated romance will have you sighing with sympathy.

"Last of the Pagans"

The humbling fascination of the South Seas; the idyllic lives of the natives; a stirring romance; intrigue amid the thrills of primitive lives; these are the elements caught in an absorbing story of entertainment "Last of the Pagans," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's tropic idyl, filmed on an uncharted coral isle in the Pacific.

The new picture announced as the second feature attraction on the Bells program, has been directed by Z. travelogue about it, though it shows in detail the intimate life of the Polynesian natives. It is a gripping and romantic love story with a fine girl in the island paradise; of their separation through the work of rascally white men and their final triumphant reunion. Mala and Lotus Long, the fondly remembered stars of "Trader" play the leading roles.

A special extra attraction on the same program is the exhibition of the Moose River Mine rescue pictures. The interest in these pictures is enhanced by the vivid description of the different scenes described most capably by a noted commentator. These special pictures will be exhibited today at the Wednesday, matinee and evening, with the two shows feature attractions.

Georgy Raft and Joan Bennett in the smart comedy-drama, "She Couldn't Take It," with the Moose River mine rescue pictures, now on the Bells screen.

Red Cross Jrs. Help Crippled Young Children

Over 11,500 crippled and handicapped children have been assisted during the past twelve years by Junior Red Cross members in Canada, it was announced by the Canadian Red Cross Society today.

Junior Red Cross, with over 11,000,000 child members in 51 nations circling the globe, 323,000 in Canada, and 125,000 in Ontario, is now the largest child organization the world has ever known.

"When one tries to think of this vast body," says Dr. F. W. Routley, director of the Ontario Red Cross recently, "a children's crusade seems the most fitting word in history inspired by the ideals of health, service and international friendliness — bearing the finest kind of citizenship in the good citizens of their communities, of their countries and of the world. And learning a lesson in citizenship never taught in the days of the good way —when one thinks of this, one begins to understand something of the power of the Red Cross Possibilities in the Red Cross. — a possibility Canada is responsible for the lively direction of the sparkling script from an original story by Gene Towne and Graham Baker. The dialogue glows with good cheer and spontaneous wit; the situations are cleverly contrived and interpreted with an adroitly blended sense of comedy and exciting drama.

"The phenomenal expansion of Junior Red Cross, according to Dr. Routley, is due largely to the fact that each Junior club is officered and controlled by the children themselves, under the direction of a teacher, but that every such club, no matter whether it is situated in the backwoods or the city, has the privilege of feeling that it is as part of a world-wide organization, and that in many other lands are striving towards the same ideals of Health, Service for Others, and International Friendliness.

Over a thirteen year period rapid strides in membership are recorded. In 1922 there were 1,000,000 members in 14 countries; in 1926, 3,000,000 in 25 countries; in 1930, 12,500,000 in 41 countries; and in 1935, 15,000,000 in 51 countries.

"In Canada the same rapid growth is shown," Dr. Routley asserted. "In 1923," he said, "there were 20,000 members in 1924, 40,000 in 1925, 236,394; and in 1935, 323,000."

"In following their ideal of Service, Canadian Juniors with their saved and pooled pennies and nickles have assisted 11,500 crippled children, equipped clinics with surgical and medical treatment during the past twelve years, and have thereby given these children their chance at normal, happy childhood, Dr. Routley declared.

Threat of Kidnap 'A Child's Prank'

Westmount, N.J., May 5 (CP)—Police guarded the home of Albert H. Brenner today as the federal agents investigated a kidnap threat he said he received against one of his two daughters.

Police expressed the opinion the threatening note was either a "child's prank or the work of a crank."

Brenner, a mechanical engineer, has two daughters, Barbara, 7, and Helma, 7 months. The letter, written in pencil with a scrawly hand, did not specify which child it said:

"We want $500 or you see your little girl very much longer. Put money in small box under bush."

Apparently the word "won't" was omitted.

And the hymns were all favorites of the deceased being "Nearer My God to Thee," "Abide with Me," and "Peace Perfect Peace." The choir rendered as an anthem "When the Roll is Called Up Yonder." The Misses Mina and Lucille Dracup gave a duet by request, "In That City."

The pall-bearers were the six sons-in-law Messrs Hugh Morton, Frank Johnson, Leonard Sharp, Jack Brown, Floyd Armstrong and Ray Armstrong.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied by Biggar and Crawford to Financial Services.

Selling in Factors on Gold Stock Exchange. Unfavorable developments may be construed as bullish for the outlook of gold stocks. In market circles, the results of the French election, although having a depressing influence on Wall Street and other industrial share markets, have caused a revival in preliminary sentiment besides indicating the possibility of a devaluation of the French franc. It is expected the French franc be devalued it would no doubt hasten currency stabilization amongst the leading countries of the world, a bullish development of the first order. Despite definite stabilization of the price for gold at $35.00 an ounce throughout the world.

The announcement in the budget of $1,000,000 for new producers will be exempt from corporation tax for a period of three years indicates the Government's favorable attitude towards the industry and will stimulate exploration and encourage in bringing new producers.

The recent decline in the industrial share markets has brought a revival interest in the gold stocks and a great number of issues are showing more interest in junior gold producers today than at any time since 1934.

The 14le Spring and early Summer is a most active season and developments in the North country are more than at any other time of the year. As a rule public interest in the gold stocks is greater at this time.

Pickle Crow's Earnings to be Substantial'd and When Mill is Doubled

Recent announcement that the shaft at Pickle Crow Gold Mine will be deepened to 1,000 below the 750-ft. level and three new levels are to be opened up immediately with the management looking forward to an objective of doubling the production. There is also the intention to the earning power of this promising mine, if and when the mine is operating on a basis of 400 tons a day, on such a basis can easily earn $1,000,000 per year. This may be estimated as follows: 400 tons per day on a yearly tonnage of 144,000 tons.

Ounces of gold with millheads of .75 ea. 108,000

Value of production with gold at $35 an oz. $3,780,000

Costs, estimated at $9.00 a ton, $1,296,000.

Estimated profits $2,464,000.

The above estimate of profits, if and when production is doubled to 400 tons a day, is equivalent to 80 cents on each share of stock outstanding. These profits are by no means fully be reduced after deduction for taxes, depreciation, depletion, etc., but should approximate close to 70 cents a share.

The Mining Analyst Reviews Arcadia Gold Mines

An interesting and complete analysis of Argosy Gold Mines appears in the current issue of The Mining Analyst. The analysis concludes with the following summary:

"The Argosy Gold Mines may be tentatively classed as a most promising small development possession all of those qualifications considered essential for successful conclusion of such an undertaking."

In view of the sharp setback of the last two weeks, it is not anticipated that an immediate reversal of trend will take place but that there will very shortly resume its vigorous upward movement. Many operators are of the opinion that strength in the mining market will feature the trading in the week ahead and following suit some time this summer. On present indications many issues will reach attractive buying levels and investors are again being presented with an opportunity of acquiring high grade junior equities at attractive prices.

The Brookmire Counselor, in its market policy, advises clients this week as follows:—

"Brokmire is now conclusive that the important reaction, normal to expect at this time, is exceptional for which started in March, 1933, is under way. While rallies will occur, lower prices are likely to be seen before this corrective reaction is completed. However, since fundamental factors of basic importance remain favorable, the reaction should eventually prove to be only an interruption to the longer-term uptrend. Ample advance notice of further reaction and opportunity to turn it to advantage are believed likely to be given. Meanwhile, only moderate holdings of bound stocks and for the short pull should be carried."

The Trader Gives His Views

"Thinness of the markets is bound to discourage impulsive and unreasoning speculation. We look for good business news and stimulating developments during the next few weeks. Looming up are the political conventions and the opening of active Presidential campaign forecasting an atmosphere disquieting to business and capital. The bulk of the public participation at this time being, has probably been effected, and, in any event, it would be dangerous to project a speculative sequence based on the patter of pre-Nov. marches. Even during the rise there was no general mass movement, it is futile to make head and tail of general predictions, the necessity being greater than ever for individual to study the relation of prices to earning power and to the future course of profits for the remainder of the year. Indications that should be best in the second half-year, particularly in the fall, may well gradually emerge from the current speculative slough—and vice versa."

TORONTO MINES (1.50 P.M.)

Toronto, May 5 (CP)—The Toronto mining market blossomed out with a 1,500,000 share trade today, the first of that size since 1929. Activity in the golds in the heavy turnover was due chiefly to buying wave in a half dozen of the low-priced gold issues with Hard Rock the feature. Hard Rock was in trade of 1,000,000 shares and is finally closed with a rise of 4 cents at 14 cents. Sentiment was firm to strong and the indices were up for the week.

Trading on the mining section reached 1,500,000 shares in the first three hours, but interest among the market has seen since around the noon hour. Hard Rock was not the feature for volume, trading in it being exceeded by that of others. The price advanced 10 cents to 1.30 at the opening on top of Monday's gain of 52 cents and in the afternoon it weakened to 1.50, off 20 cents net. Mid-afternoon found the price up again to 1.55. A generally firm tone prevailed.

Along with Hard Rock several other golds of the cheaper group displayed activity. Goldora Gold Mines touched 1.17, Red Lake 1.22, Bidgood 1.80, Bralorne 1.60, Pioneer 1-2 and Argosy 1.47, all up 2 to 5 cents. Dividend payments early and irregularly lower and base metals steady.

Argosy sold up to 1.50 for a gain of 10 cents and Howey advanced 2 cents. Central Patricia declined these prices slightly. Gains of 2 to 4 cents were shown by Bankfield, Canusa, Algoma and Manitoba-Rassen.

The close was up 2 to 5 cents for Sylvanite, Chibougamau, McKenzie Gunsar, Red Rose and Goldora. Mining gained about 20 cents. Red Lake slightly. Losses of 10 to 13 cents were shown by Central Patricia and San Antonio and Pamour was off 5 cents.

In the base metals prices were a little stiffer for Ventures, Falconbridge and Sherritt, and Noranda held unchanged. Of the silvers, Castle was down a few cents.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS (1.50 P.M.)

Toronto, May 5 (CP)—Industrial share industry today showed little change registered a narrow advance, trading was somewhat below the much commotion in the matter of trading. Volume remained under the 50,000 share mark. International Nickel attracted heavy buying with 2,000 shares sold in the first sale below 46 and the price advance for the limit was about half a point. Elsewhere the list was little changed though the day, all trading in subsidiaries centred on Orange Crush and Brazilian and C.P.R. displayed moderate strength. Liquor stocks were well engaged in the morning session and higher prices ruled in the uplifts, gold and base metals.

A majority of the Interlisted issues were on the up side with the gain out in front and showing gains of ¼ to ⅝ each.

Noranda was active at a gain of about ½ and C.P.R. was up ¼ this afternoon. Elsewhere the prices changed hands in volume and the morning price reached 67 and Nickel held slightly above its Monday closing price. Yesterday's announcement of the 3 per cent stock dividend had evidently been anticipated.

Lake of the Woods Milling Co. was also advanced more than a point and other gains in the list were Consolidated Smelters, Dominion Stores, and the two preferred issues of Orange Crush. Moderate gains in the steels were posted for pressed metals and Dominion Steel. In the base metals Bell Telephone and United Fuel, pfd. advanced better than two points each.

Massey Harris, pfd. Abitibi Pfd., and Pulp Mills were the leaders of the day. Hamilton Bridge pfd. and Steel of Canada were off.

WALL STREET

New York, May 5 (AP)—Stocks pushed forward over a broad front in the final session of the week. Additions to three points generally and two to nine for the specialties.

Conspicuous gainers included Allied Chemical, U. S. Smelting, Yellow Truck, common and preferred, Douglas Aircraft, Du Pont, Westinghouse, Columbian Carbon, I. T. and T., U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Consolidated Edison, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, and N. Y. Central. Losses of one to one and a half points were few and far between. Transfers approximated 1,400,000 shares.

Thirty Players Answer Call For First Practice of Season Much Enthusiasm Being Shown

No Strenuous Work is Attempted as Players Umber Arms

GOOD MATERIAL

Catcher From Airport Has All Essentials and Makes Hit

Baseball is far from dead in Belleville.

This statement was proven beyond a shadow of a doubt last evening at the Fair Grounds, when nearly two dozen local boys, many of whom are just out of their teens, answered the first call of the season and worked out with Belleville's prospective 1936 senior O.B.J. squad.

Pitchers limbered their arms slowly in the ball park, while the remainder of the squad tossed the balls around to loosen the arms, stiff after last season's long hibernation. The baseball curtain rolled down. Following the limbering up process, Manager Weir ordered a light workout by hitting out flies and all participated in the old game of shagging flies in the outfield. Naturally no strenuous labors were permitted, but those present experienced a very good bout of wholesome relaxation of the tightened arm muscles. The practice will be continued nightly at the Fair Grounds, with possibly a scrub game being played next Saturday afternoon.

Among the prospective hurlers to limber up last night the kinks out of their arms were Ernie Smith, speedy St. Louis and Johnnie Rawden, the latter grandchasing from last year's local junior team. St. Louis hails from the Hamilton Kingsmen Fontes, while Smith is a local product. On the receiving end were Nelson "Bunny" Epp of the B.O.A.F., a short stocky sorrel-topped gent, who made a hit with the mid-birds and Don Thomas, who has played junior ball in Belleville and also caught in the Hastings County League, also handled the shoots of the hurlers in spasmodic relief.

No Infield Practice

No infield practice was held, the diamond not being groomed for baseball as yet, although Intermediate Manager Weir and Coach Pox had local boys in Cy Bartrige, Chuck Barrage, Mitchell Shannon, Cole, Shud Ehler, Scoy Grey, Ted Moran, Vic Hanley, Cliff Bennett, Bill Whalen and a ball a dozen other youthful aspirants, who are keenly interested in making the team and playing for the home town. Incidentally, all of the local players, McCaul and Trenaper, who were to have come from the Airport, were on hand last night, but will join the squad later this week. With such much keen interest being shown by Belleville's native sons, all that is left to assure a banner season is support, as the whole-hearted support of the citizens. Practices will continue nightly.

Following the practice the executive of the Belleville Baseball Club convened at the Y.M.C.A. and plans for an extensive finance campaign were made. Season tickets will later be placed on sale at the nominal figure of $2.00 and the club has to pay the amusement tax on every entry into the park on a season pass. Such figure was also thought too high.

President Clapp and his associates also announced, that a public subscription list, to assist in the financing of a local baseball team would also be prepared. Vice-President Mr. F. Dutt seized his option of the marked enthusiasm being shown by the citizens in general following the announcement, that local players would be given every chance to make good on one of Belleville team.

The chairmanships appointed to work in conjunction with the executive and Secretary-Treasurer, Lorne McDougal (Y's Men's Club); Owen Sound (Kiwanis); Chairman of Publicity, Gerald Ivey (Kiwanis); Chairman of gates, — M. P. Duff, (Rotary); Chairman of Grounds — Jack Yarrow. It was later announced by Mr. Duff that the tickets and patrons would be drawn from the three local service clubs—Rotary, Kiwanis and Y's Men's Clubs' members.

Giants Fail to Back Hubbell Who Allows but Four Hits Being Defeated by Reds 1-0

Team Only Gives Pitcher One Run in Last 26 Innings Pitched

CARDS CHECKED

Ray Benge of Boston Wins Fourth Straight For His Team

By ANDY CLARKE
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York baseball batsmen should hang their heads when Carl Hubbell comes along for they have been letting him down in shameful fashion.

In the last 26 innings the southpaw has worked on the mound, the Giants have given him exactly one run to go with it. That isn't much of a load in any ball game, even with Hubbell a pitcher, who won 23 while losing 13 last year, toiling on the hill.

Hubbell pitched four- hit ball yesterday but the Giants failed to get a single run and went down 1-0 before the Cincinnati Reds. In his previous start Hubbell went 17 innings against the Cardinals but lost 3-1, when his mates failed to fathom the stanis of Leroy Parmelee. Hubbell won his first two games of the season.

Only one of the four hits against Hubbell was an extra base blow but it subsequently spelled defeat. Eliri Coyer opened the ninth inning with a triple and after disposing of the next batter, Manager Bebe Herman and Ernie Lombardi to load the bags. The New York infielders played in close to cut off a run but Sammy Byrd hoisted a fly to Mel Ott right field and Coyler raced home with the winning run. Hilding Gus Mancuso is the best Ott's throw to the plate, the pitchers had scattered the Reds' other three hits and retired the side.

The Giants managed to collect eight hits off Ethen Blue, 37-year old rookie but it was the old story of failing to hit with a run in sight. Only the Cubs have a softer spot.

Rain played havoc with the schedule, washing out games in the American League and one American League game were played.

Benge Wins Four Straight

Ray Benge, the leading pitcher in the National League, registered his fourth straight win as the Boston Bees defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 7-6 to halt the latter's win streak at six games. The Cleveland Indians took their second straight victory from the Senators 9-3.

Although Benge was credited with the victory, he was relived in the fourteenth half of the seventh after he had walked Iwo and Leo Durocher had singled to fill the bags. The Cards scored a run on two hits, however, as Frankie Frisch hit into a double play. The Bees won the game with a four-run rally in their half of the seventh, which started after Ott, Cuyler and Lombardi were retired in order.

Pete Appleton, former Montreal hurler, was treated roughly by the Indians, being belted for 13 hits while Wes Ferrell was expected to fire innings but Cleveland scored every inning after that. Appleton had three straight victories to his credit before the encounter.

The Indians got their hard-hit in the illness of Bruce Campbell, which was expected to terminate his career, received another blow in this game, when Earl Averill poked a leg muscle and was expected to be out of action for two or three days.

As the Reds battle on the ball field, there was turmoil behind the scenes. General Manager Larry Is Macphail inferred that Paul Derringer, the Red Sox ace hurler might be dropped from the active list unless he pitches "like he's supposed to." Derringer was suspended without pay, when he failed to slide home in Sunday's game. Derringer won 22 games last year but he has failed to show his customary form this season.

WELTERWEIGHT CHAMP PICKS McLARNIN TO WIN OVER CANZONERI

By EARL HILLIGAN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Chicago, May 5 (AP)—Barney Ross, who takes pardons from both ends and handed a few back, picks Jimmy McLarnin to whip Tony Canzoneri Friday night when the two classy Hills ringmen meet in a scheduled 10-round bout in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Ross, world's welterweight champion by virtue of a victory over Jackie Fields, has been under extreme holder of the lightweight crown, taken from Canzoneri, but McLarnin because he thinks he's a harder punisher than Canzoneri. "I look for a tough fight, but I think Jimmy will win," said Ross who will see the fight. "Jimmy, from my fights with both boys, is the harder hitter and the superior boxer. I also think that Canzoneri will have to give away too much weight.

"I don't think there'll be knockouts and if McLarnin does win it's going to be only by a decision."

Sam Plan, co-manager of Ross, believes his champion is a "good picker."

"Whether Ross meets the winner the night Friday may depend oh how decisively it is won," Plan said. "I hope Tony wins by a knockout, because if he did a Ross-Canzoneri fight would draw great

HANDBALL

With warmer weather in the offing, indoor activities at the Y.M.C.A. will begin to fall off, now that, enabling the physical department to run off the annual handball championships. This year all members will compete for the singles championship in the new Y.M.C.A. gymnasium.

Handball is a game that never loses its appeal and has been shown in handball this season that ever before and is due to the ever increasing demand for playing accommodation the physical department is hoping to be able to build courts apart from and independent of the gymnasium, where at present all handball has to be played on a small court.

If time allows, a consolation series will also be run off for the losers in the double draw. Players who compete at once and all entrants are requested to get in touch with the physical director, Mr. Fowler, and play off their first round games at the earliest possible date. The schedule of all available time for tournament games is being made and the players can make their reservations during these hours. Handball for the present season will be furnished by the Association but the players will provide their own handball gloves. A small entry fee is being charged which will go toward providing an award to the winner of the tournament. A prize will also be awarded the winner of the consolation series.

The following is the draw for the first round of play in this tournament:

F. St. Dennis vs. E. Buchanan
O. Scott vs. C. Bonner; O. Wood vs. A. Tobe; E. Poste vs. A. Clark

TORONTO LEAFS DOWN BALTIMORE IN 12 INNINGS

Kemp Wicker of Bears Allows Bisons But Three Hits

By OSLO ROBERTSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

After getting away to a fine start the Baltimore Orioles are beginning to find it tough going in the International League.

With their pitching none too steady the Orioles have dropped 3 of their last 4 games, two to which went into extra innings. Two of the defeats were by one run and the same score, 4-3, while their lone triumph was by the same margin.

Yesterday they carried Toronto Maple Leafs 12 innings but finally lost 4-3 when Edith Molesworth, the professional football player, connected with two errors in the final frame. Molesworth pegged wildly to first to send the Leafs' way on the rally that gave them victory. Pete Monty, last of the three Toronto hurlers, was the recipient of the gift. He was sacrificed to the mound and then Bevo handed out two passes, one of them intentionally, to fill the bags.

Cliff Mallon was called to receive Monty and apparently had the situation well in hand when Pool sent an easy grounder to Molesworth, who had doubled in the eighth, the Baltimore shortstop heaving it

LEFT FRONT HAS CLEAR MAJORITY

French Voters' Answer to Fascist Elements in Republic

Copyright 1936, By The Hearst News Agency

Paris, May 5.—(CP-Havas)—A Left Front majority of 375 votes, including 57 Communists, in the next Chamber of Deputies was the French voters' answer today to Fascist elements in the Republic led by Col. Francois Casimir De La Rocque, leader of the Croix De Feu.

The Left Front—coalition of Leftist parties in the chamber—had a clear majority of 136 over the Right and Centre groups, with a few seats still to report.

Latest returns today from yesterday's run-off election indicated that the United Socialist Party, with at least 146 of the 618 seats in the chamber, will be the strongest single party, displacing the more moderate Radical Socialist group predominated in the last Chamber, but who had captured only 115 seats on the sweeping Available figures.

The Right and centre groups had a combined strength of 238 seats.

The people's Front Parties, representing the entire left wing of French politics, polled more than 500,000 of the total vote of 1,500,000 recorded today. The Rightist Parties had about 400,000, the Centre about 900,000, while 60,000 votes were credited to parties not affiliated with either of the major groups.

The defeat of the Fascist groups was regarded as little short of a rout in view of their showing as compared with their pre-election claims.

Marmora, April 5—The annual Sunday School prize-giving took place in Deloro Hall on Friday, after the scholars had enjoyed a bountiful supper made by the bountiful ladies of Schools' Well Wishers, games were played. Later in the evening a program was given by the pupils following the singing of "Fight the Good Fight", chorus of welcome was rendered by the school. Superintendent W. Reynolds in an apt speech acknowledged the assistance given Nichols ways of the Sunday School and its activities. Jean O'Reilly also then put on a recitation with chorus. Those who are the youngest in the school were highlights o the evening's program. A sparkling chorus was then rendered by Hilda Mumby's class of boys. The class of Mrs. W. R. Reynolds then followed with the amusing sketch "Mrs. Brown's Sewing Party." A few members of Jean O'Neill's class then returned to sing some nursery rhymes. Four girls of Mrs. W. E. Hancks class sang a chorus which mentioned all the books of the Bible. Floyd Loveless, one of the older scholars rendered "The Hasbeen do Count Back" after which twelve young girls or Marjorie Loveless' class sang "Tell Me the Stories of Jesus". Girls of Mrs. Michael Corrigan's class ably impersonated the elements of Betty McCrea. This was followed by a duet by the Secretary Treasurer H. R. Hancks who spoke on the operation of the Sunday School. The school held thirty-two sessions in 1935 with an average attendance of twenty-five. The enrollment is 100 and the average offering for the Sundays was $2.70. On one Sunday during this year there was a record attendance of 100. The joint classes of Mrs. W. Kerr and Mrs. Joris Loveless then gave a chorus which was followed by a reading by Norman O'Neill. The program continued with a second drill neatly executed by Doris McCrea's class, after which a silver collection was taken for the Sunday school funds. Four rolls of pictures were then shown the children with the prize-giving the final item on the program. Prior to the presentation of the prizes, Mr. Elliott on behalf of those interested in the Sunday School tendered a hearty vote of thanks to the workers. Prizes taking the form of books were presented by W. R. Reynolds and H. R. Hancks to the following:

"Oh, I'm SO relieved . . . we were getting worried . . ."

Jim missed the last train home; funny at that meeting how time had slipped by unnoticed. And wouldn't she be anxious. Unhappily he trudged along, killing time.

Then . . . the inspiration; Long Distance! A simple call, quick, inexpensive, and everything was smoothed out, both of them relieved. There's one thing they couldn't bear to be without; their telephone. It's surprising how often you can make use of Long Distance!

ONE WAY STREET

By JOSEPH PHILIPS COTTON

"Just that. Took the entire responsibility. She moved the family into a small house and went to work. Made good from the start as an ad saleswoman. The paper, in addition to that, she attended night classes at the Institute. I used to point to keep track of her progress and fixed the place for her when she felt she was ready to do something with designing. Soon settled. That's what burned me up when the boss told me to let her go. If it wasn't that I had a family on my hands, I'd have told him to go to the devil."

"Don't blame you. I pat the same way after I had a talk with her. A kid like that deserves all the encouragement in the world."

"Of course. That's why I'm worried about her just now."

"What do you mean?"

"Figure it out. Here's John..... leaving prison today. He was well known about town. I suppose he's worried, too. Now he has to face his old friends. How many will be find?"

"Very few."

"There you are. No matter if he has paid his debt, he still carries the taint. He's on parole. That means he must keep in touch with the authorities....can't cut away from his past."

"I don't suppose we can do anything for him here," Sturges reflected.

"Hardly.....on Jean's account. Besides, Cannon is tied up with the Commonwealth's board. That's where John worked."

"And that accounts for all the exhibition of outraged decency."

"There. That's why I'm sorry for Jean. She's carried a picture of her dad in her mind all this time.....as the man who went away. Very sensitive chap, John. I hate to think what Jean would have done to him. Of course he's broken, I told Jean to take the day off."

"Very thoughtful."

"It wasn't that altogether. I was thinking of John, too. It struck me it might be easier for him if he could see Jean before he saw any others. I suggested that she run up to Canonchet Junction and meet the train. Thought it would help the two of them."

"It would."

"It will be an ordeal for her. But there's a lot of good common sense tucked away in that little head, I think.....Yes? Come in."

The last was in answer to a hesitant rap on the door. It opened. Sawyer entered.

"I wanted to tell you I was back, Mr. Stewart.....Oh!" She broke off in confusion at the sight of Sturges rising to his feet. "Excuse me. I didn't know....."

"That's quite all right," Mark said cheerily. He brought forward his chair and placed it behind Jean. "We were just speaking about you, Miss Sawyer."

With Stewart's little story still in his mind, Sturges studied the girl with renewed interest. She made no move to accept the chair but addressed directly to the department head. She was speaking of some unfinished task, a series of clutches.

"That will be good," Stewart observed rather abstractedly when she had finished. "Now's your father, Jean?"

"Quite well, thank you."

Sturges saw one of the small hands clench. It was the same little gesture he had seen that day when she told him the story of John Sawyer. Once more, it was the sole betrayal of her emotion.

"You found him without difficulty?" Stewart pursued.

"Oh, yes."

"I'll see you later," Sturges interrupted abruptly. He left the room.

X X X

Had the new general manager at Cannon's been called upon to enumerate any of his own good qualities, modest pride must have suggested his ability to arrive at prompt conclusions. Mark found his greatest satisfaction in attacking the accumulated problems of each working day, making swift decisions, disposing of each matter in turn. His secretary had abbreviated holdovers. It worried him if each day could not be finished on schedule.

It was with surprise, not unmixed with chagrin, that he found himself sadly unable to settle down to the tasks the afternoon he left Jean Sawyer and came downstairs to the latter's office.

Each time he attempted to concentrate upon letter or report, a face seemed to come between him and the printed page. A small face with a sensitive mouth. Brown eyes, appealing for some reason, he could not banish the image. It almost irritated him.....but not quite.

He also was conscious of Cannon's voice in the adjoining room .....a low monotonous drone. Dictating letters to the efficient Miss Howard. Sturges' mouth settled in a grim line. Almost etched the old gentleman would try to take some action against "that Sawyer girl," .....or say something about it. He even fancied himself telling the boss a few things. He would.....

Bunkum!

To be day-dreaming when there was work to do. Of all things! Mark pushed a call button almost savagely. He'd better be cleaning up his own correspondence.

Nevertheless, he found himself thinking frequently of Jean Sawyer. Wondering. So much so that he made rather a point of keeping away from the dress department. If he were to allow himself to worry over the personal troubles of some five hundred employees, he would have little enough time for business problems. That was his nearest approach to a diagnosis of his feelings.

But these good resolutions did not prevent him from experiencing a distinct thrill while dining in a restaurant a few nights later when he glanced up from his soup to discover Jean entering the front door. An older woman was with her.

Mark watched the two covertly from his corner as they selected a table near the front of the room. Jean sat with her back toward him but he was favored with an unrestricted view of her companion's profile.

It was Nan Gamble.

Mark regarded Miss Gamble with unfeigned curiosity. His immediate reaction was a feeling of surprise, not unmixed with resentment. The woman was so palpably made up. That had no particular significance these days, but she bore herself with an assumed air suggestive of boldness. It was revealed by her crisp manner of address to the waiter and in the latter's anxious servility.

Curiously enough, her manner underwent a change whenever she spoke to Jean. A singular transformation.....gentleness. Her fondness for the girl was very evident. As he watched, Sturges became more and more puzzled by the odd companionship. He wished he might catch a view of Jean's face. His gathered that she was in a light-hearted mood. She was laughing now, enjoying some spirited account her friend was offering.

His coffee and cigarette finished, Mark folded his paper and strolled to the front of the restaurant. There, moved by a sudden impulse, he halted at Jean's side.

"Good evening, Miss Sawyer."

"Oh.....Mr. Sturges!"

"And how are you?"

"Very well, thank you. Miss Gamble.....may I present Mr Sturges?"

"Hello," Nan returned unexpectedly. "I had a sort of hunch it was you. Bill Sorra, I've been hearing a lot about you." She flashed him a smile as she indicated an empty chair at her right.

"Thank you." Mark seated himself, according briefly for his presence. "I was dining back there in the corner when I saw you....."

"So I noticed." Nan interrupted with a twinkle in her hazel eyes. "I was shy of company myself until I happened to run into Jean. I made her come with me. I think you're wearing her too hard at the store. She looks peaked."

"I do not!" Jean remonstrated, flushing uncomfortably under Mark's scrutiny.

"I'm not sure Miss Gamble isn't right," he decided. "We'll have to see about that."

Nan came to the rescue with second-nature tact.

"I'm glad to have a look at you, Mr. Sturges. She proved her pleasure rather to his embarrassment, before she continued, "They tell me you're doing a good job bringing the old from Block up to date. It can stand it."

INSTALMENT 11.

"Now who's been talking to you?" Mark smiled. He found himself rather enjoying this direct approach.

"My customers," Nan replied "You know how women gab about such things. I suppose I'll be looking out to you soon enough."

"Then you're in business here?" Mark ventured.

"That's a blow. And I haven't a card with me. Sure I'm in business. Nan's beauty works up on the avenue ..... Le Salon Nanette. That's because I'm French. Born in Bayonne..... New Jersey."

"I see. Then we're competitors."

"Well, I don't know as I'd get that far. Spent much time in that beauty parlor of yours at the store?"

"Haven't so much as stuck my head in the door," Mark confessed hardily. "Why? Does it need the modernizing touch?"

"I never knock anybody who's trying to get along. But if you can score up to date ideas..... drop in and get an eyeful of my plant. Any time."

"I'll do it," he assented gravely "I think that's a very fair offer. Don't you, Miss Sawyer?"

"Of course," Jean answered soberly. "Nan is like that."

Mark had a feeling that the girl found herself rather ill at ease in his company and was glad to have Miss Gamble take over the burden of conversation in her gay brusque fashion. She amused him greatly, but he was rapidly revising his first estimate of her. His believed he understood how Jean might easily rely upon this older woman's experience and judgments, frankly expressed as some of them were. A unique character, he decided.

It was Nan who terminated the visit in her impetuous fashion as she snatched up the check with one hand and shook with the other.

"Guess we'd better be shoving off," she announced. "I promised Georgeous.....the girl friend here.... I'd let her go home early—if she'll wait and have a bite with me."

Jean already had risen with a murmur of acquiescence, when Mark decided upon a bold step.

"I'll treated myself to a new car the other day," he remarked casually. "It's parked across the street. May I have the pleasure of taking you ladies wherever you're going?"

"I hope to tell you!" Nan fairly beamed at him. "You might as well find it out now as any time. My reel hurt.....It's chronic."

"I think I'll walk home," Jean interposed hastily. "It isn't far. Thank you just the same."

"You'll do nothing of the sort," Mark said firmly. Then a bit awkwardly, "You and Mr. Sturges can run me home first. I haven't given you a chance to visit with him yet."

"Of course," Mark agreed, ending the discussion by starting in quest of his car. He was back in a few minutes sitting behind the wheel of "Which way?" he inquired, when his two passengers were aboard.

"To the shop for mine," Nan directed, "It's a two-and bath over it. Saves walking."

The trip up the avenue was quickly and Sturges brought his machine to a halt before the Le Salon Nanette.

"You have an attractive place," he observed.

"Not a bad little dump," Its owner agreed. "Don't forget what I said about dropping in some day and looking us over. Good night, Georgeous. Very glad to have met you, Mr. Sturges."

"Thank you. And I'll remember that invitation, Miss Gamble."

"Okay."

"Isn't she fun?" Mark asked rather impulsively as he set the car in motion. "I like her."

"I'm glad." Jean said simply. "Nan is the best friend I have. When you really know her, she's rather.....wonderful. I don't know what I would do without her."

THE TARZAN TWINS—

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

To drive the savage chant of their captors from their minds, Dick and Don returned to the study of the native language under Bulala's instruction. And now the other prisoner, the pygmy, Ukundo, became interested in the experiment and crept out of his dark corner.

Ukundo the pygmy was a full grown man, but he was no higher than the shoulders of the Tarzan Twins. He was brighter, however, than Bulala, and so it was largely his own dialect that the boys learned. Soon the lesson was interrupted by a guard with a bowl of food.

Though half-starved, Dick and Don could not eat the repulsive, malodorous mixture; but Bulala and Ukundo gobbled noisily. Now the night chill crept into the hut. The boys drew close together and at last they fell asleep, cold, hungry and exhausted.

About midnight they were awakened by a thunderous sound that rolled out of the jungle. "Hear that?" whispered Don. "It's a lion," Dick replied gloomily. "It wouldn't do us any good to escape. It would be like jumping from the frying pan into the fire!"

Bitten by Black Adder, Trainer Has Left Arm Amputated at Bellow

Montreal Man Who Was Treating Sick Reptiles May Not Recover

Montreal, May 6 (CP)—His left arm amputated, a Montreal man fought for life in hospital today while doctors sought to check the spread of poison through his system and police gingerly guarded the reptile that bit him.

Police said they were reasonably sure the black adder was in Smith's room in a house on McGill College Avenue. The window was open when they conducted a hasty search but the snake was believed hiding among some suitcases.

Fearful of being bitten themselves, police sounded the alarm for Miss Florence Zoda, snake charmer extraordinary and Smith's assistant. Then they settled back to guard the room where Smith, snake raiser from Schreiber, Louisiana, was bitten last night.

The snake had been ill for some time and Smith was treating it when it wriggled free, coiled about his left arm and bit him. Dropping the reptile he rushed to a drug store for first aid treatment. He is in hospital where it was found necessary to amputate the left arm above the elbow. Doctors said he might not recover from the shock.

Smith is well known in Montreal for his collection of various breeds of snakes kept in cages in his room. He boasted of having been inoculated against rattlesnake bites and a few weeks ago offered to stage a fight between his rattlesnakes and the black king cobras from the Louisiana swamps, for newspapermen. The match was a slow affair. It came at a time when the snakes were shedding their skins and refused to go into action. Smith even put a twin in his wrists in the hope the blood would provide the incentive for the snakes to do battle but they refused to be pepped up.

It could not continue "first because our credit will abhor and the minister (Finance Minister Dunning) will be confronted with difficulties, for example, which he contemplates but does not even care to mention, and secondly and cause the country to be ruined."

Robb Wave Organ Company, Ltd. Selects Belleville in Which to Manufacture New Type of Organ

New Industry Will Locate in the Tiger Tire Company Plant—Officers of New Firm All Local Men—Company Has Had Tempting Offers From Other Cities—Work of Renovating Plant Already Begun—Many Orders Waiting to be Filled

Following a special meeting called by city council yesterday morning and the completion of minor details later in the day, a new industry has been assured for Belleville.

Known as The Robb Wave Organ Company, Limited, the new concern which will have as its general manager Mr. Morse Robb of this city, will commence the manufacture of a new type of electric wave organ in the old Tiger Tire and Rubber Company plant on the west boundary of the city immediately. A working staff of eight skilled mechanics will be employed at once, with this number of employees added to as work progresses. Orders are already waiting to be filled.

Officers of Company

The new Company with these as its officers, R. H. Martin, K.C., President, J. Robb, Vice President and General Manager and Mr. Jamieson Bird, Secretary.

Negotiations carried on for some time by Mayor Harry Ellis and members of the city council resulted in Belleville being chosen as the site of the new concern, it is learned, the fact that tempting offers had previously been made by other municipalities in this area.

In securing the new industry the concession of a fixed assessment of $2,000 for ten years was granted by council with the proviso that the extension of water and light services would be made to the north side of the railway bridge at the plant's location.

Work on renovating the former company's old plant has already started. Glazing is expected to be finished this week, the interior work is being carried on.

Acclaimed by Critics

Invented and perfected by Mr. Morse Robb, local inventor, after years of experiment, most of which work has been carried on right in this city, the new organ, described by leading musical critics of the larger cities of Canada, where it has been demonstrated as an instrument whose possibilities are unlimited, and one which marks a new era in the field of music, it is also one which depart radically from ordinary organ design. Small enough for any room of the ordinary home, the instrument is yet large enough to serve the largest cathedral or church. Dependent only upon electric waves for its wide and powerful range, no tuning or other work is necessary after the organ is once functioning perfectly.

Critics of metropolitan papers in Toronto who attended a recital on the new organ were lavish in their acclaim when they witnessed its performance in the T. Eaton Company's Georgian Room recently.

Private homes, clubs, churches, theatres and assembly halls are all adaptable to the use of the new instrument, whose manipulation varies little from the pipe organ of standard design.

"We're happy to welcome this new industry to Belleville," Mr. Robb said only after a lot of hard work that we were able to get it here. Several other places have been after it and they had given many tempting offers but this new industry was declared Mayor Hill today.

Future Appears Bright

Mr. Jamieson Bone, secretary of the new company today spoke optimistically of the future. "We have orders already to fill, and within a few days we expect to have them placed and begin to be advertised, the first steady work should then be given. The plant is large and is full of organs which need either repairs or replacements and we are in a position to offer them our instrument at a cost which would make them handle it for us at not too much work on them. The fact that they have been allowed to run down is due mainly to the depression. We are the only company of its kind in Canada, and perhaps one place else that is able to do this. Only one other company on the continent is at present engaged in the manufacture of an instrument, but it is somewhat remotely like ours," added Mr. Bone.

'Drain of Transportation Need Not Continue'—Beatty

President of C. P. R. Addresses Meeting of Shareholders

MANAGEMENT ISSUE

Montreal, May 6 (CP)—The people of Canada, Sir Edward Beatty told the annual meeting of Canadian Pacific Railway Company in his presidential address, are not overgoverned by "though disappointingly slow".

Sir Edward said the country had been receded during the latter part of the year, he said, and it continued into the early part of 1936.

"It was a matter of regret to your directors," he said, "that after reviewing all the relevant factors they were unable to justify the making of dividend declaration in respect of the year under review.

Reduction in Rates

Improvements and modernization of the service were continued by the company and also downward trends in the importance of passenger revenue to gross revenue, he said, continued, and that it no doubt would be necessary for railways to adopt more competitive rates established by United States railways.

"In keeping in this policy, he added, will be taken next June 1 when experimental rates at lower levels will be put into effect.

Unified Management.

"The development of the methods of transportation which compete with rail services has been very largely the result of large public expenditures made without any real consideration of the economic consequences. The railways are naturally jealous of their competitive future, but it should not be forgotten that the interest of the people in the sound financial policies of public authorities is even more pressing.

"Many and varied misconceptions exist as to the nature and effect of the plan for unified management of the railways of Canada, concerning which I have advocated as a means of relieving the country of its railway problem. The benefits of this plan would inflict hardship upon railway employees.

"A wisely controlled and humane policy of unified railway operation applied would bring about substantial immediate savings that would steadily increase without detriment to railway labor until, in the course of a few years, the full benefits of this policy would be obtained.

"More general appreciation of the effectiveness of the safeguards which may be employed to prevent hardship to railway employees is a common understanding of the mutual interest of taxpayer, shareholder, management and men in placing the railway industry on a solid economic foundation."

ROMAN CROWDS HOLD SECOND DAY OF CELEBRATION

Mussolini Warns Industry Must Go Because of Sanctions

DUCE ACCLAIMED

Italy Expected to be Represented Before Council on Monday

By ANDRUE BERDING

Rome, May 6 (AP) — Marshal Pietro Badoglio, establishing Italian rule over Addis Ababa, caused Conqueror Mussolini and Emperor Victor Emmanuel to be proclaimed today by thousands of students.

Roman Fascists accepted this action as a triumph of Premier Mussolini's proclamation, after the occupation of Addis Ababa yesterday, the "Ethiopia is Italian".

Marshal Badoglio, commander-in-chief of Italian Forces, telegraphed thanks to Premier Mussolini for the "devotion and valor" of workers who effected the fall of Ethiopian city.

Fyalis of Victory Refloated.

Italy's greatest war on Ethiopia received into an unsigned peace and Premier Mussolini immediately enforced a campaign to defend the fruits of the African conquest against the world.

Intoxicated by the occupation of Addis Ababa and the Duce's declaration that "Ethiopia is Italian", the nation decided to boisterous celebration into the second day, but Mussolini ruled that domestic business must continue as the country's continuing League of Nations sanctions.

Echoing Mussolini's proclamation during the national mobilization last September, workers are ready to defend our shining victory with the same intrepidity and tenacity with which we achieved it," crowds shouted, "hear that Geneva?"

A tentative program for transformation of Ethiopia into an Italian possession was being formulated.

"Emperor! Emperor!" twenty thousand jubilant students shouted over and over again to King Victor Emmanuel this morning as the Quirinal Palace.

Mussolini Acclaimed.

The students went there in a triumphal march after acclaiming Premier Mussolini at Venice Venezia Palace. Il Duce appeared on the balcony of his office and cried, "Vive Italia."

King Victor Emmanuel also appeared on the balcony of the Quirinal Palace in answer to roaring cheers. Dressed in the uniform of a field marshal, he saluted but did not speak as the throng greeted him as the roars, "Imperatore! Imperatore!"

With Fascists proclaiming the structure of Italian Ethiopia former empire was "not only dead but embalmed", an informed source intimated Italy would go on before the May 11 meeting of the League Council contending the last vestige of Ethiopian claims to national sovereignty had vanished.

Stock-Taking by League Essential, States Eden In View of War Lessons

Laborite Charges British Gov't. With Failure Under Obligation

CONDEMNS OIL SALE

Declares Ethiopians Were Encouraged to Resist by British

By GEORGE HAMILTON

London, May 6 (CP) — Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, in a recorded House of Commons today that the League of Nations "must go on" but at the same time he said there must be a "stock-taking" by the League on the basis of the lessons learned in the failure of the League to halt the Italo-Ethiopian war.

Eden also told the House the Government is ready to consult Parliament "on the problems involved" in Italy's conquest of Ethiopia.

Secretary Dispassionate.

Eden made no effort to conceal his disappointment over the failure of the League of Nations to end the Italo-Ethiopian war as he addressed the crowded House of Commons.

But he declared in firm tones: "The League of Nations must go on!"

For hours he had been the subject of a bitter attack by Hugh Dalton, parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in the last Labor government.

Interrupted by labor cheers and frequently interrupted from the government benches, Dalton had gone out in his attack. He charged that the government, by not making clear to Premier Mussolini at once the dispute that aggression would be met by League action, was itself responsible for the outbreak of war.

He charged the government with having failed to carry out its obligations under the covenant. He charged the government with having encouraged the Ethiopians to resist in the belief that the League would help them and then have left the Ethiopians to their fate.

Dalton was particularly aggrieved regarding the supply of British oil to Italians. By the supply of that oil, the government profited through its share-holdings in the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, and thus the use of that oil, the Italians were able to continue their campaign.

Eden Denies Charges.

Eden denied the charges with a sharp reply.

He declared that Dalton grossly distorted the facts and the issues. He asserted that all through the early days the British government had striven to effect conciliation. It was not true that Britain had let the League down.

There were only three great powers in the League. Of these only two —Britain and France—were Mediterranean powers. Therefore upon them must have fallen the chief responsibility and the major risk. There could be no doubt that if Britain had taken the lead at Geneva, it was only necessary to read the Italian papers to see that.

Before the dispute the percentage of British exports to Italy by companies was only about 13 per cent of the total they received. Eden thought that last year it was 4 per cent. Did Dalton suppose he was getting at what effect could it have had on the course of the dispute?

From the Italian point had taken the view that action must be collective. Piecemeal actions adopted were for a deliberate purpose: they were on commodities under control of the League's consideration. A weakness was that they could not immediately be effective.

EIGHTY YEARS OF ROYAL ARCH MASONRY TRACED AT GATHERING

On May 7, 1856 The Royal Arch Chapter of Kingston came up to Belleville and instituted Moira Chapter No. 7 in this city, and on Tuesday evening, May 5th, 80 years after, representatives of the Kingston Chapter came to Belleville to help celebrate this long period of capitular Masonry.

Several Grand Chapter officers were present, including Grand First Principal Jas. Glenn; Grand Second Principal Mills of Brantford; Grand Third Principal W. H. Poston, the Grand Superintendent of the District, and Most Grand Superintendent, A. O. Hertly, K. T. Cherry, and J. O. R. Kennedy, Grand Scribe, presided at the banquet.

Prior to the toast to the Grand Chapter M. Ex. Comp. Campbell gave an interesting address on the principles, aims and achievements of Capitular Masonry, which evoked complimentary observations from M. Ex. Comp. Poston and M. Ex. Comp. Mills.

In proposing the toast to the Kingston Chapter V. Ex. Comp. Cherry after referring to the importance and results following the efforts of the Kingston Companions in helping to establish Chapter at Belleville in 1856 referred to important events in the history of Belleville including the coming of the Grand Trunk Railway through Belleville that same year and also the starting of the Allen Steamship line making direct connection between Canada and Great Britain. At that time Belleville was connected with the County of Hastings for municipal purposes by a plowed road, the late Col. Jas. Brown as Reeve and S. Few Applications For Garden Plots Either these able-bodied men hanging around get busy and dig their own lots or they don't get any at all," was the pronouncement from the office of the Mayor regarding unemployed lots today.

"If the lots haven't been plowed before, or are sodded over, then we'll see that they're plowed. But if they have been worked before, then they won't get them. Of course, the man isn't really able to do the job.

Reporting the fact that more applications have not been registered for the lots Chief Magistrate pointed out that men out of work and with plenty of time on their hands should be glad to take the opportunity of helping themselves by growing their own garden produce for the coming winter.

"These lots aren't just for the men who are on relief, they're free for all unemployed. All they have to do is register. Seed will be furnished free, as much as they need, and in this matter we've been helped by the Provincial Government, who will be given out by the Relief Office, but the supply will be checked, as will the gardens after they have been planted," added the Mayor.

GEORGE A. WHITE

Trenton, May 6 (Special)—With the passing of Mr. George White, Trenton lost one of its oldest and most distinguished citizens. Mr. White was in his ninety-first year and would have celebrated his ninety-first birthday May 17th. Mr. White was predeceased by his wife, the former Teaile Stephens, almost one year ago. They had recently celebrated their fifty-eighth wedding anniversary on March 12th, 1935. Mr. White was born in Sidney with her parents Thomas Francis and Marie O'Coyne to a dance at Sulphurville, Sidney, on the evening of twelve o'clock, when all went to the home of Edward Dwyer, where Grace beer was served by Constable Mr. Casabo.

"What was his condition, when you went to the dance?" asked the Crown Attorney.

"He was sober," said the witness.

"How was he when you got to Dwyer's?"

"He was drunk."

"Where had he had you go?"

"We all went over to O'Coyne's and I remained there all night because I was afraid to go home with him. He was all right, when he was sober but when he was drinking he would pound me," said the woman, who appeared quite frail in the witness box.

"When did you go home?"

"Not until around noon on January 4th."

"Did you see your husband?"

"No, nor had any of the family. I hunted around the place and noticing the cellar door slightly ajar, I went downstairs and saw the rays of a lantern and then I saw him in the potato bin and I saw a smashed in the affirmative. The doctors stated that the man bled to death. Melville Clarke, pharmacist, gave evidence of taking pictures at the Casabo home and identifying same in court, Constable Hayes of Tweed, who conducted the first investigation described the position in which the body was found in the potato bin and the position of the gun with respect to the body. "One empty shell was found near the body," said the constable, while two other discharged shells were found outside the bin in the yard. There was a powder smell in the barrel of the gun and the hands and hands were bloody as if he had tried to stop the flow of blood. Casabo was lying on the flag of his back."

"Is there any evidence of a struggle?" asked Mr. Donnan.

"None whatever," said the constable.

At this point part of the clothing of the dead man was produced and also the gun and all were identified by the constable.

Mrs. Rose Casabo stated she had been married to Casabo for four years and on January third went with her husband to Francis and Marie O'Coyne to a dance at Sulphurville, returning until after twelve o'clock, when all went to the home of Edward Dwyer, where Grace beer was served by Constable Casabo.

"What was his condition, when you went to the dance?" asked the Crown Attorney.

"He was sober," said the witness.

"How was he when you got to Dwyer's?"

"He was drunk."

"Where had he had you go?"

"We all went over to O'Coyne's and I remained there all night because I was afraid to go home with him. He was all right, when he was sober but when he was drinking he would pound me," said the woman, who appeared quite frail in the witness box.

"When did you go home?"

"Not until around noon on January 4th."

"Did you see your husband?"

"No, nor had any of the family. I found death was "due to hemorrhage, a large hole being blown through the left leg below the knee. Asked by Mr. Donnan if the wound would cause death, both physicians answered

MADOC BENEFITS THRU OPERATION OF SLATE MINE

Increasing Activity on Only Slate Mine in Canada Absorbs Extra Labor

LARGE TONNAGE

Madoc is in the throes of industrial expansion at the present time with mounting employment figures and expectations of a continual increase in pay rolls as the result of a new development by the Canadian Slate Products, Limited, of a large slate deposit one mile north of the village.

At the present time, with fourteen men working, by June, it is expected a total of sixty men, recruited from that section will be employed. The number of workers employed then on will be gradually increased. Construction of a large steel building on the site of the deposit is to start at once.

Canadian Slate Products has under lease at the present time about four hundred acres. Following an examination of the property by Ernest H. Jones, mining surveyor, it is the opinion that the assumption of the ridge of slate that has been exposed on the surface for a length of 2,000 feet and a width of 300 feet, and extending to a depth of 60 feet, a total of approximately 10,000,000 tons of slate are available. Such tonnage is ample to supply the market for an indefinite period.

At present the mine is being operated by Thos. Jones, foreman, and former experienced Welsh slate miner. Main work during the winter months has been the stripping of the top surface.

Warning will be given by the Company today that sufficient registrations have been taken at workers by supply them for some months. This is to avoid disappointment at the mine on the part of those who might apply for work from long distances.

Following is a comprehensive report taken from the Financial Post on the activities of the Canadian Slate Mines Products, Ltd.

Machinery has been ordered from Wales and all plans laid for production in what might become an important new mineral industry for Canada, namely the mining and finishing of slate.

The slate deposit at present being worked is located at Madoc, in eastern Ontario, and has been known for many years. Canadian Slate Products Ltd., which has been working the deposit, was formerly the Canadian Slate Mines Ltd., the name having recently been changed. The company expects to be ready for production in a few months.

The Financial Post has examined reports made on the property by Ernest H. Jones, mining surveyor, and by Stuart R. Sill, consulting engineer, of Buffalo, N.Y., and their report was made early in 1934, and that of Mr. Sill in June, 1935.

Both engineers have reported favorably on the tonnage possibilities of the property. Mr. Jones reports that "it is my opinion that slate extends to a much greater depth than has been proved, and if the ridge afore-mentioned, (which runs across the property for a distance of about 2,000 ft.) is calculated at a depth of 60 ft., there would be a total tonnage "of approximately 10 million tons available.

Wide Margin Possible

The tenor of Mr. Sill's report is equally optimistic. In dealing with costs, he states that "there is a potentially capable of producing a great variety of products, principally roofing slate, panels, veining, cutting, school slates and slates for structural purposes. In addition to a demand for the ground or powdered products.

All slating used in Canada today is imported, and retails at prices of from $17 to $30 per square, which at the quarries should, according to Mr. Sill, be reduced to a cost as low as $4 per square.

The slate deposit at Madoc is, so far as government reports indicate, the only known deposit of commercial slate in the Dominion. It was worked over fifty years ago, and was used for roofing a few public buildings in eastern Canada, at that time it was planned to utilize slate for paving sidewalks, but the advent of cement put an end to that proposal.

Named After Parismadoc?

It is more than a coincidence that one of the most important slate quarries in the world is situated at Parismadoc, in Wales. The fact that the early settlers of the Ontario district were Welsh has led to the belief that it was the discovery of the surface showings of that commodity which gave Madoc its name.

As for quality, Canadian Slate Products, after the recent construction of the Canadian Construction Association in Toronto, have received letters from outstanding contractors testifying as to the high order quality of the company's product over the product now being imported from the United States and from United Kingdom.

Slate imports figures prepared by the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa. The Post estimates that in the calendar year 1935, Canada imported slate and slate products to the value of $36,288. This figure shows a sharp decline from other years. For the fiscal years 1930, 1931 and 1932, the average yearly imports of slate and slate products was about $215,000 annually, before adding duty, freight and taxes.

The 1935 import figures, prepared by The Post from government reports could be tabled as follows:

Slate, reports, free	$ 14,992
Roofing	11,197
Slate Pencils	2,117
Writing slates	10,279
Slate manufactures	6,295
Total	$ 36,388

In addition to the above markets, Canada state that there is a demand for so-called by-products, in the form of powdered slate widely used in slate paints. Terazzo chips, slate flour, etc.

In addition to the home market which is undoubtedly suffering from capital goods depression, the government aim to compete with other countries in the export trade, relying on superior quality and cheaper production cost.

Canada Slate Products has an authorized capitalization of one million shares, no par value, including an offering currently being made, of 125,000 shares at $1 per share, there are or will be outstanding 600,000 shares having 400,000 shares in the treasury.

Officers and directors of the company are as follows: L. Ampleford, president and general manager; H. R. Leader, secy.-treas.; Hon. J. W. Armstrong, Alex. MacLeod, G. A. Gillespie, ex-M.P., Peterboro.

ENVOY ENDANGERED

Sir Sidney Barton, British minister at Addis Ahaba appealed to the Italian military command in the name of the diplomatic corps to hasten his entry into Addis Ahaba to restore order and protect the foreign legations against Ethiopian rioters. The British legation has become a haven for many Europeans and Americans in Addis Ahaba. Italians entered the city to restore order.

CHALLENGES GOV'T TO DEAL BOLDLY

federation itself and destroy the very fabric of this Dominion".

When in office Mr. Bennett had an extensive inquiry made into the railway problem and created the set-up of the Canadian National. Yesterday he complained the government was retaining the legislation his government enacted almost in its entirety, merely substituting seven directors for three trustees. That was not enough. The problem could not be solved by substituting one man for another.

The last loss on the C.N.R. last year was $115,000,000, said Mr. Bennett, a figure just about equal to the federal loans to provincial governments. It constituted one of the two chief obstacles in the way of a balanced budget.

Figures Challenged.

The figure was challenged later in the session by the railway committee when C. P. Fullerton, chairman of the C.N.R. trustees board said a fair statement of the cash loss would be $47,000,000. Mr. Bennett's figure included writeoffs of obsolete equipment which should have been spread over several years and interest on government loans which has never been paid, the committee was told.

In view of the protestations made from this side of the house when we were in office," said Mr. Bennett, "I had expected that some legislation worthy of the name of legislation would be introduced to deal with this problem.

"But instead the major part of the existing legislation is left alone while there is to be substituted seven directors for three trustees, in that the government's conception of its responsibility to the people!

"They have the majority. They have the power. I have the right to criticize. Let them proceed to give effect to that inclination and they will receive the support of those members who are interested in a solution of problem."

The economic fabric of Canada will rip apart under the slight-pressure of this tax, Mr. Bennett warned the House.

Wielding his finger at the treasury benches across the green-carpeted table, he said his opinion Canada's could not stand a sales tax at a level of eight per cent and predicted it would hasten the end of the capitalist system.

Referring to his lack of faith in the government to wield the economic axe he thought it should wield, Mr. Bennett said, "we cannot save Canada unless we are prepared to face the line and make appropriations such as the United Kingdom made when it formed a National Government in 1932."

Free Importation Questioned.

Mr. Bennett protested against the disastrous results which he believed would follow the"budget proposal to permit free importation of $100 worth of goods by Canadians spending 48 hours in foreign countries. It practically turned Canada into a free-trade area and it would be possible for millions of dollars of dutiable worth of goods to be imported free.

As a man who travelled sometimes, he would welcome the change and he had no doubt it would be extremely popular "but this country must learn that there are many things that we do who which we should not do."

The government discriminated against Alberta in turning down its application for a charter, he said, but council scheme was rejected, Mr. Bennett declared. It was unfair to submit one province to such pressure and then, when it was rejected by Alberta, indicate that it would modify its terms.

On the central topic of conversation, the Conservative leader gave his opinion a general scheme, involving the Bank of Canada, Provincial Municipalities and Railways, would be impossible until there were real signs of recovery.

Protection Too Low.

Turning to tariff reductions, he asked if it was fair to reduce duties on farm implements from 12½ per cent to 7½ when a parliamentary committee was formed to study the whole industry and before manufacturers had the opportunity to present their arguments. Reductions on automobiles and automobiles resulted from tariff board hearings but "why should the agricultural implements industry be singled out for treatment of that kind." In his judgment it was open protection was too low.

Countervailing duties, introduced in the budget on eggs, potatoes and cut flowers indicated "the cowardice of our people" and the country is afraid to raise a duty" and actually was "a genuine gesture to do something" because the United States Congress was interested in tariffs this session and the President had no power to reduce them.

DAYS OF LAWLESSNESS

Four days of riots in Addis Ababa with wild tribesmen loose and free to do whatever they would as their emperor was gone, told a story of disintegration of a people, who were face to face with modern tragedy—war of civilization with arms which mutilate, kill and poison. Their country overswept by the heavy armed squadrons of Italians, their sands arrowed with the march of tanks and trucks, their skies lighted with flame of destruction and their atmosphere smelling of poison gasses, and at last their emperor gone! It was a break-up of what little rule there ever has been over these wilderness men.

In that seething place the only places of stability were the legations and compounds of the foreign powers. These put up heroic fight against the mob whose only aim was destruction. Some of them had troubles enough. Sikhs from the British legation and other Britishers were able to render aid to the United States citizens and the U.S. legation's staff who found their way into the British compound.

That was the picture of the capital of a land conquered by the enemy and no doubt the victim of treachery on the part of some Ethiopians, so that even their ruler was forced to depart. It was utter absence of law and order.

Now there is no doubt that this phase has passed. With the entry of conquering Italians into the city rioting will cease, the conquerors will see to that.

THE FICKLE MIND

The fickle mind is the foe of happiness, said the Rev. E. C. Elsea declaring that too many people float on the surface of public opinion. He was addressing the congregation of Tremont Presbyterian Church in the Bronx, New York. "Great masses of the people float on the surface of public opinion today, swept in and out with the ebb and flow of the tide. This has a decided religious significance. The church and the Kingdom of God are suffering today because they lack an abiding faith and have no firm convictions. The reason why so many people today are so miserable is that they are being tossed about by every wind that blows—whether that wind is atheism, rationalism, communism, socialism, humanism, sacramentarianism, barbarism, unity, or what not. This suggestibility, this tendency to refuse to think for one's self, this laziness on the part of church people is being exploited by fakers and charlatans. Many people have dropped their religious habits altogether; they have had their faith destroyed, they forgot their religious ideals simply because someone told them something and they believed it, swallowing it 'hook line and sinker' without stopping to think."

Continual argument is seen as sapping faith, by the Rev. Raymond L. Forman of St. Paul's M. E. Church. His subject was "Religion is over-defended." He said "the strength of Christianity is in the power of God, the power of truth and the consciousness of the presence of the Eternal Father. Proof must be in personal experience and cannot be transferred." He went on to state "that we have today, in an economic way only one end in view, to break down the restrictions of law. Down with dogma; up with freedom—that freedom which will take for all the masses the product of honest working men. But it is over-defended. The more noise it makes the weaker it gets. Soon our alien agitators will have what they are looking for; a nice little ocean voyage back to the lands of fascism."

Rev. A. Wismer of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, New York, said "the world has its own philosophy—that one hundred cents make a dollar; that a man should put in strong licks to rise to fame. And then when he has achieved that fame he finds that it is futile, and hollow, that he has saved and struggled, only to leave it all behind him.

"We know that our great business here on earth is not to build up a puny name for ourselves or an enviable fortune, but that we should work for the lasting glory of God. We will receive no material reward. There will be suffering for us, just as there was for our Master, but we will have built toward a lasting state and something that has permanent value."

Charity must be cheerful, there must be no grudging gifts to the poor, said the Rev. Joseph Titheridge at St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York. Unwilling giving no more constitutes charity than negative obedience to the commandments of God constitutes piety. "One of the most unfortunate circumstances of charity nowadays is that exhaustive inquiries must be made about the life and circumstances of the object of our charity. Too often investigation creates a vicious circle around those in distress. It is well to remember that both St. Paul and St. Chrysostom enjoined us to make no inquiries but give alms to the poor.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise praised Irwin Shaw's "Bury the Dead" as "the mightiest protest against war since the Great War." He said that the lesson to be learned from this play was that the youth of the land ought to refuse to die for war. Declaring that there was no effective peace movement in the United States, he urged that a war resisters' league be formed to check the growing menace of war. He said that he would like a declaration of faith signed by twenty million people of his country presented to the President stating, "I will not give either physical or moral support to any war whatsoever."

Weariness of sin makes men of today old at forty, when life ought to begin, says the Rev. Wesley G. Huber at Calvary Baptist Church, New York.

THE HARPER

At gloaming time the harper came
He sat and harped till break of day:
He neither told his place nor name,
But oh, he harped my heart away.

My father drank his evening wine:
The firelight touched my mother's loom:
My brothers, rubbing arms to shine,
Rose up and made the harper room.

He raised his hands to touch the strings:
We waited—never a word we spoke:
The sudden music came on wings,
My father's goblet fell and broke.

The good wine flowed, a crimson rill,
But no one stirred in all the crowd,
All night we sat and listened till
At dawn my brother wept aloud.

The music ceased: the harper went:
Up sprang the sun and brought the day:
They rose: They laughed: the spell was spent:
But I—my heart was harped away.

NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENTS AT ADDIS ABABA in the Ethiopian war zone have not only been nearly bolled alive by the terrific heat of that country but they have had to dodge bullets and sword thrusts. Such an interesting profession, but the show must go on, the newspapers must have the news whether of a Sunday School picnic or a war of extermination where the bullets are not labelled avoid non-combatants—and the newspaperman takes his profession seriously—it is all in the day's work whether his present assignment is pleasant or whether it is decidedly unpleasant and dangerous—and it is not a question of money, either. The true newspaperman's pride encompasses in work well done, and a good story is worth more than many simoleons. Selah!

ACCORDING TO NEW YORK KEYHOLE COLUMNISTS King Edward VIII is preparing to join the benedicts and while the King may not know anything about his approaching nuptials as yet the aforesaid keyhole columnists have selected the bride-to-be, a Princess of Denmark, publishing several pictures of her—also the date of the proposal and the beginning has its own philosophy—that one hundred of the royal engagement. Imagine finding a column of all behind him. fifty, or forty or twenty years ago (from our files of that date) they will probably be publishing news (problematical) that far ahead. However, folks who try to live too fast generally trip themselves and their fall is farther and more disastrous than from the sublime to the ridiculous. It is more or less shocking to think that even the royal bedchamber is not immune from the Snoops and Peeps of Yankee journalism.

No Wonder

The hotel was about the worst in the country, as the two visitors soon discovered.

After an appalling dinner they retired, disgruntled, to their bed-room. Upon entering one sniffed suspiciously.

"Well," he said, "if that's not the limit. There's gas escaping."

"Can you blame it?" retorted his friend bitterly.

DEFEATED AND DESERTED ETHIOPIAN TRIBESMEN PILLAGE ADDIS ABABA

Ethiopian tribesmen, beaten by the crack troops of Italy, have turned to looting and murder in Addis Ababa, abandoned by Haile Selassie and his guard. This picture was made when the natives pledged their lives in defence of the Ethiopian capital, but have since changed their minds and are now spreading havoc and destruction before escaping with their loot to the hills when the Italians enter the scene. Italian troops meanwhile are reported to have entered the city.

All the reports were most satisfactory and encouraging.

50 YEARS AGO

May 6th., 1886.

At a meeting of the city council Ald. Hanley introduced his notice of motion to provide for electric lights over each of the bridges, one in front of the axe factory on Mill Street, and at the junction of Cannifton Road, another at the corner of Emily Street and one at the entrance to the depot yard. He put special stress upon lighting the street to the depot. It is he said, a dingy street to travel at night time. The footbridge had been all lighted by Bell Co. The light supplied by Mr. Ritchie. The city clerk should also be better lighted. There are about 13 oil lamps lighting the city to the depot which cost about $1150 each per year. The difference between electric light and maintaining the oil lamps was not a trifle. He said that he would not press the motion, but would leave it to the good judgment of the council. Ald. N. B. Palmer was in favor of the motion. A well lighted depot and approaches would give the city the appearance of brightness. The difference between a coal oil light and an electric light was very marked and would cost the city $200.00 more per year. The people of Bleecker ward paid heavy taxes, but have poor light. Finally a resolution to put up six electric lamps was carried.

Methods of Rescue to Be Shown by Men

Halifax, May 6 (CP)—Methods of rescue work as employed by members of the Stellarton Draegermen who took Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Spalding from the Moose River gold mine April 23 will be demonstrated in Halifax this month, according to a statement issued by the Nova Scotia Exhibition Commission.

More apparatus will be used than in the actual rescue of the two Toronto men from the gold mine, the set calling for a four-man crew. Working with respirators, the men will use special lighting apparatus and will administer first aid treatment when they reach the "injured" men.

Mrs. Matilda Arthur and Miss Nellie Arthur, Ann Street, who have been spending the winter at St. Petersburg, Florida, expected to leave for home May 4th.

Miss Elizabeth Cook who has been in the hospital for the past three weeks, is now at home, 370 George Street.

Members of the Women's Canadian Club were entertained at the home of Mrs. A. R. Macdonald on the annual business meeting this afternoon.

Last evening under the auspices of the Children's Aid Society, the motion picture film, "King of Kings" was presented in the Capitol Theatre auditorium. This production was a touching and reverent characterization of the ministry of the Saviour, Jesus Christ. School children attended as afternoon matinee of the film.

An enjoyable afternoon was spent in the Moose Auditorium yesterday when the Women of the Moose entertained their lords' evening party. Prizes were won by Mrs. Vickers, first; Mrs. Charnock, second; Mrs. Batchelor, third, and Mrs. Vickers, guest prize. Dainties served and refreshments after the games.

Mrs. B. J. Theobald, 261 Charles Street, opened her home for a reunion of the Women's Missionary Society of Bethesda Church, Parish Guild last evening. Thirteen tables were in progress and the evening was a most enjoyable one. Delicious refreshments were served during the games. Two of the guests were very appreciative of the gracious hospitality extended them by the host and hostess.

In the Conservative Club rooms on a very interesting event took place on Thursday evening when Mrs. Ella Naylor, President of the Women's Conservative Club on behalf of the Ladies of the Club, presented Mrs. A. Savage and Miss Erma Lazier with corsage bouquets. Mrs. Savage is leaving the city to reside in Toronto and Miss Lazier is entering nurses' training at the Kingston General Hospital. Mrs. Savage and Miss Lazier, who were greatly surprised, thanked the ladies for their kindness to them.

The afternoon was spent by a sociable game of cards which was greatly enjoyed by all, after which light refreshments were served. The bridge prizes were won by Mrs. Neale and Miss D. Thompson. The euchre prizes were won by Mrs. Gilmour, Mrs. Soderberg and Mrs. Hall.

Dr. Mathieson Addresses Guild

Dr. Lily Mathieson yesterday addressed the Guild of Christ Church on Modern Women. "The Maiden of Many Moods" was the amazing when applied to the background of Canadian women, every age of which holds out its promise of being one. No one is of great value unless a distinctive personality.

The speaker had thought modern women a little odd but with added years of discretion she saw in their leadership was demanded and constant study. Even the Queen of Sheba Cody was quoted as saying, "If we go the thing at first we achieve, we don't need extended education."

Dr. Mathieson gave variety to her remarks by giving the characteristics of women as examples of various environments, mid-Victorian days as she chose Elizabeth Barrett Browning, the darling of history who is a type that does not go out of style and make a success of life. Others were Dr. Mathieson's own mother, Dr. Margaret Patterson, Judge Emily Murphy, Helen Keller, Nancy Astor, the Queen of Holland Mary Pickford, Agnes Macphail, Mrs. Geo. Black, Mrs. Plumpton and many others, giving her listeners a glimpse of her keen mind seasoned with ready wit.

Dr. Mathieson was introduced by Mrs. Robert Bateman. A hearty vote of thanks was extended by Mrs. Wright for the interesting and informative address.

A song, "Old Fashioned Garden"

Suffered years bad headaches and Constipation!

Quick relief from FRUIT-A-TIVES and troubles have not come back.

"For many years I suffered from severe headaches and constipation. Then I read of Fruit-a-tives and tried them. They brought quick relief. Now I am never bothered as I used to be, for I know Fruit-a-tives can always make me fit and healthy."—Mrs. F. Dougway, Guelph. Fruit-a-tives are the discovery of a famous Canadian doctor. They contain concentrated extracts of nature's fruits and herbs. They tend to induce normal function of elimination organs and tend to tone up the entire system. A fair trial of Fruit-a-tives will convince you.

Good Manners

RANGUET, BRIQUETTE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to attend a banquet and would like to know just what to do.

1. Will you please send me some advice as to the order in which the silverware is placed on the dinner table? Please explain definitely.

2. The banquet is to be held in a hotel, and I am uncertain as to whether to wear a dinner gown or not? I think I should. Am I correct?

R.

1. The silverpiece should be placed in the order in which they are to be used, so that a guest begins with the silverpiece farthest from the plate and works toward the plate. Spoons and knives are always placed to the right of the plate, and all forks, except the oyster fork, are placed at the left of the plate.

Let's say that the first course will be a shrimp cocktail; use the outside fork, which will be farthest from the plate at the right. If the first course is a fruit cocktail, there will be a tea spoon farthest from the plate at the right. (Soup next. Let's say; then you find the soup spoon at the right of the plate, nearer the plate than the oyster fork. Let's say there is an entree next; with this probably only a fork, the salad fork next to the plate, at the left. Next the main course; the dinner knife at the right of the plate, the dinner fork at the left of the plate . . . . still we are progressing toward the plate in our use of the silverpiece. Next, a salad, served as a separate course; the salad fork nearest the plate at the left, and perhaps a salad knife at the right of the plate. (If the salad is served as part of the main course, you will, I hope, have a salad fork at the left, next to the plate. You use this to eat your salad, using your knife and fork for the rest of the food served in the main course.)

If there is a bread and butter plate (as we often find at banquets) you will be placed to the left of the plate, just above the forks. The individual butter knife will be found on this plate. You will probably use this bread and butter plate too as a "helper" for your celery, olives or other food-accessories of this kind, as well as for your rolls and butter, if butter is served.

Now for the dessert course. Usually the table is set with the silverpieces up to the dessert course, and the dessert-silver is brought in with the dessert. This is the best form, but sometimes hotel-service varies. For instance, you may see that the dessert silver, dessert spoon and fork are placed above the plate, as they are in Europe. Then, after the dessert course has been placed, you take the dessert spoon and place it at the right of your plate, and take the dessert fork and place it to the left of your plate. Or you may find that the waiter, after the table has been cleared and crumbed, places the dessert silver at your place before the dessert is brought in. The after-dinner coffee spoon are brought with the coffee.

2. You will probably find that a dinner gown is the appropriate attire for this banquet. However, if it is to be a strictly formal dinner, you would wear a formal evening gown.

R.

SILVERWARE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When resting the fork on the plate, should the prongs be turned up or down.

2. Is it preferable to replace the correct silverpiece when one has picked up the incorrect one, should one finish the course with the first silverpiece incorrectly placed?

S.

1. Rest the fork on the plate with the tines turned up.

2. If the first silverpiece that has been taken up is just about as convenient to use for the course, it is better, however, to continue and to finish the course with the first one.

NO SHOWER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married next month and I would like to know whether it is proper to have a miscellaneous shower and the wedding reception together? If this is proper, I would appreciate it very much if you would give me an idea as to how the invitations should be worded?

Anxious Bride-to-be

I am definitely unenthusiastic about your plan of combining a miscellaneous shower and the wedding reception. I hope that you will not carry out this idea, for it is neither most inappropriate and in poor taste.

IT IS A COMFORT to think of a silver fox cape as an economy, for it can be worn with almost every costume for day or evening. Something very choice is a sleeved scarf tail jacket made entirely of silver fox in charming design. It is a waist-length model.

Belleville Presbytery Meets At Albury United Church

The last regular meeting of the Belleville Presbytery of the United Church of Canada to be held before Conference took place on Tuesday of this week at Albury United Church in the Pastoral charge of Rednersville, Rev. H. W. Pixley of Springfrook, chairman of the Belleville Presbytery, presided over the meeting which was attended by about one hundred representatives covering an area bounded by Trenton on the West and Odessa on the East and reaching north as far as Maynooth and Madoc. During the opening session special tribute was paid to ministers within the Presbytery who had passed away during the year and the splendid work each had accomplished before their death. Among those mentioned were Rev. J. D. Wilson, D.D., late Rev. M. Taylor, D.D., and late Rev. H. B. Kenny, all of whom had served in Albury during the last year. Messrs Kingley Joblin and Sigis Joblin were appointed to the Presbytery by the College and Students' Committee of the Belleville Presbytery and recommended for ordination at the next conference which will be held in Centenary United Church, Oshawa, Both these gentlemen, sons of Rev. Fred Joblin, former minister of Albury Presbyterial charge, have completed their studies at Toronto.

The following Ministers within the Belleville Presbytery are seeking a change to other pastorates: Rev. M. R. Brown of Tamworth; Rev. R. D. Mullin, Bedenevville; Rev. T. Smith, Actinolite, Rev. W. F. Gardiner, Cherry Valley; Rev. J. M. Fraser and Rev. R. C. H. Ferguson has been invited to Bethany pastoral charge, having been established for the past year. Rev. Basil Northport, Rev. J. S. McMullen, formerly of Belleville has been transferred to Toronto; Rev. E. S. Nelson transferred to Sask., Rev. Kingley Joblin transferred to Toronto Presbytery, where he will be stationed at Bolton. Rev. Joblin will sell of Deer Park United Church.

Rev. Wylie of Deseronto

The speaker to address the morning session was Rev. A. D. Wylie of Deseronto, his theme being "Christ and the subject "Life's Problems Solved in Christ" from John 3: 3; "Verily verily I say unto thee except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." Such were the words addressed by Jesus to a Jewish Ruler centuries of his day and in speaking these words to Nicodemus, He states the most fundamental law of all spiritual growth. This great law of rebirth never always fascinating to minds demanking so much so that it is reflected constantly in myths, customs, dreams and religions.

Christ told Nicodemus that he must be born again because that was again out of a world of dreams and fancies, racial prejudices and false conceptions, but of a world of realness; born out of a world of ideas into a world of realness, born blood, into a world of reality where there is pain and suffering, crime and sin, and the death line. Jesus continued, bring, the death of the body, mind and spirit, but life to these, above all else "in as much as—Jesus told Nicodemus that religion of dreams Deseronto, but law of reality, religion is getting close to and keeping close to reality.

"No wonder we as ministers are at a loss, how to grip either the "green and cocks" or the "red and outs", and our ministry is a frigid barren impersonality and atmosphere of lackadaisical indifference and activity" stated this powerful speaker "We are living in a world more evangelism in present day religion. "We will have an evangelism worthy of the name until we know how, Life will return to our church with pentecostal power and fire. The ministry, the laymen, the Church, need the power of God to meet the call, not for rampant and consuming emotionalism on the one hand, nor for frigid formalization on the other but the fusion of both. Free me that I may be right, I will see and think right, and I will do right. Where the intellectual and the emotional are both consulted, there a St. Paul was born, a John Wesley, an Andrew Mason and a Kagawa", he stated in closing.

During the hour recess at noon the ladies of Albury United Church served a sumptuous dinner that was greatly enjoyed by the visitors, many of whom had travelled long distances to attend this important meeting.

With the opening of the afternoon session, the business of the day was continued when Dr. James Semple, B.A., S.T.B., T.h.D. of Belleville and Rev. T. Wilson Ferguson nominated as Commissioners of the General Council of the United Church in Canada which meets in Ottawa in Sept. of this year. It was also placed on record that the Belleville Presbytery nominated Rev. Peter Bryce as the next Moderator.

Nominees to the settlement committee were Dr. Semple of Belleville and Rev. T. W. Fanner, D.D. of Lancaster who delivered a fine address on the "School Question". There are those who would have us compare our educational system in that of the province of Quebec, he stated, and there is no reasonable comparison because there are no public schools there, they are all denominational schools and separate.

This was the last meeting of the Belleville Presbytery of the United Church of Canada that will be held before the next Conference meeting and was one of unusual activity and interest.

KIWANIS WILLING TO ASSIST UNDER CERTAIN CONDITIONS

In an opening meeting to discuss the application for recreation facilities in Belleville the local Kiwanis Club heard a splendid review of their yesterday's club meeting. Enthusiasm revealed at the Kiwanis Club being paramountly interested in the development of Belleville's recreational facilities. Before the above-line adjacent to the eastern boundary of the city entrance to the city of Quinte for recreation purposes. It was a club spirit on the other side and willing to assist in the erection of a recreation park along the bay shore. It believes that such improvements should be made prior to our club taking over the park and golf course plans. We might better be a little more patient. Appreciation of plans along these lines than too premature," cautioned Kiwanian Frank Dennison as he voiced the feeling of his fellow-clubmen regarding any hasty action. He also pointed out along the shores of the Bay of Quinte, before the land was prepared by the city. A general consensus of opinion of the club revealed, that the Belleville Kiwanis Club was ready and willing to provide its recreational facilities for water-front, but could not act at this time as definite plans for such and the fitting of this land to attain a proper size would have to be necessary prior to their drafting of plans for such an important venture.

Will Add Equipment

The Kiwanis Club agreed to more fully equip the present two playgrounds in Belleville, it was however, and expect to erect a building on the Victoria Park grounds that will include a toilet. It was also placed on record as recommending to the city, that assistance in the filling in of the unsanitary ditch at the Bridge Street playgrounds be provided prior to the playgrounds being open for playings. Slides for the kiddies and new games will be added to the two play-grounds by the Kiwanians this season.

In order to assure better disciplines around the play-grounds in general, the park police force be recommended that one of the present supervised and be increased to three boys, who are frequenting the local play-grounds in Belleville.

A motion that the club send a number of underprivileged boys to a summer camp was also passed. This matter will be given further serious attention in their future, however.

President Frank Dennison concluded the chair while Jack McLaughlin acted as secretary-treasurer and Harold Seldon as song leader.

"Klondike Annie"

Mae West Returns Tomorrow in Its Comedy Everyone Says is Her Best

Toss out all your preconceived notions of Mae West; all you folks who have only visualized her as a languorous creature moving softly around in shimmering silks and satins are in for the surprise of your lives — when you see her in "Klondike Annie" coming to the Belle tomorrow and Friday, matinee daily.

This one thing is certain, when Mae leaves the Barbary Coast of San Francisco, in the surrounding which, we've grown accustomed to associating with her, and winds up in the frozen regions of the Klondike — gold-field! But don't be alarmed ...even wrapped in a big fur jacket, Mae West can still be every bit as lissome as we like to see them, and although her figure may be cold and frost-bitten, they still retain the ability to lose off wise-cracks that will, we prophesy, be repeated in every city and town months to come, until the next Mae West film, to be exact!

May plays the part of Sir Prince Dell, rushing off to the Klondike on the big boat, Captain Bill Brackett's (Victor McLaglen) boat to try to escape the Prince police, who are anxiously searching for her. After a succession of alternately thrilling and hilarious experiences, during which she has assumed the name of "Diana Ander" and famous evangelist, she finds herself in love with the Federal agent who has been sent out to bring her back to San Francisco to stand trial.

At this point she finds that the revival meetings which she has been holding, in her role of "Diana Annie," have had their effect on her character, and she gives anything in the world to be able to marry Phillip Reed, who loves her, but she knows that he could never love him more unhappiness than joy. So she determines to run off by herself, who has been urging marriage on her ever since she stepped on his boat.

"Klondike Annie" is recommended as great entertainment, "the best picture" say critics. Under the able direction of Raoul Walsh, McLaglen is superb in the role of the hard-boiled captain who needs, for the first time in his swashbuckling existence, a woman who can make him lose control.

Excellent Short Treats

A splendid array of varied short treats are announced for exhibition on the same program featuring "Pirate Party at Catalina Isle," a smart thirty minute musical Nemo in color with a host of famed entertainers. Next comes Pete Smith reeling favorite screen stars at work and play, and "16th Hole Striking" in the Terrytoon completes the program.

Moose River Rescue Films

The Moose River Mine Rescue pictures will be presented at the Belle tonight for the last times showing at 8.30. Beside Miss Nelle George Raft in the fast-paced comedy-drama "She Couldn't Take It" and the South Sea adventure picture "Last of the Pagans", the last show starts at 8.30.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Garden Murder Case" and "Fang and Claw"

The inimitable Philip Vance, with his suave British thinking thag coldly analytical brain, holds sway on the screen of the Capitol until Friday nite.

Edmund Love is the famous scientific sleuth, and a more delightful interpretation never has been given to the famous role. Love is superb. His nonchalance as he moves through a series of perilous situations is at once thrilling and humorous, and his masterly handling of those he suspects of crime is supreme entertainment.

With him is Virginia Bruce, but a new, lovelier and livelier Virginia Bruce than the screen has seen before. She has permitted her bone hair and wears an attractive new bob, and with it has come a new personality that is even more intriguing. She is a delight. Sid Sir Lowe's whimsical love-making.

The story is the latest of S. S. Van Dine's exploits of Philo Vance. It deals with three mysterious murders, each of which appears to be accidental. But Vance refuses to believe them accident, and through his sophisticated and unbelievable cleverness and his subjects him. Finally able to trap the culprit, but with surprising results.

"Fang and Claw"

Frank (Bring 'em Back Alive) Buck, sans his trade-mark and without benefit of Hollywood's props and publicity agents, gives a big show in nature's jungle settings in his third successive picture, "Fang and Claw", which opened last night at the Capitol Theatre.

Before the camera eye, as it were, the bare-handed Buck, and half-breed companion, Ray Spiker, tiger would no double love to touch, search for the humanity of the beasts in their zoo and circus fodder, then their traps, snares and pitfalls and sit back and wait for something to happen—and it's usually the unexpected that does happen.

Buck's dexterity with rope and his steady eye with a rifle along with his willingness to mix it bare-handed with dangerous foes keep the interest of audiences at high pitch throughout the pictorial story of a year's doing true through camera-eye of tropical vegetation and giant trees that house fauna and claws.

Major Bowes' Amateurs

Graduates of the Major Bowes' Amateur Hour of the Air, recipients of one of radio's most coveted awards will be seen on the stage of the Capitol theatre for one day, Saturday, when the Small Unit of the Major Bowes' Amateurs will tour comes to Belleville for the first time.

Fifteen young and talented amateurs who are experienced in the thrilling taste of fame back of the footlights will comprise the unit which has been touring the middle west.

Singers, imitators, musicians and dancers are included in the roster of the "simon pure" performers.

Letters Written by Mr. Geo. M. James Conveying Impressions of His Travels Across The Continent to The Land of The Golden Sun

No. 4

Hello Kansas City, good-bye New York!

Starting New York we paid a visit to Sixth avenue and found crowds of people for blocks before employment offices eagerly awaiting an opportunity to use their talents and, earn a living. A year ago we reported the same conditions, and upon inquiry discovered that to-day there is no improvement in the unemployed problem. New York still collects a sales tax of two per cent. on all merchandise purchased for the unemployed relief fund.

Careful investigation reveals the generally admitted conclusion that President Roosevelt will be again elected for the following reasons:

1. Although he has made many bitter enemies, nevertheless no one has anything better than his policies to offer.

2. In the last federal elections there were forty million voters. At present considerably over half of that number are receiving benefits, directly or indirectly, from the present Roosevelt administration. It is reasonable to suppose that these people will not take a chance on losing what they are now receiving, inadequate though it may be.

3. The land of Liberty under the Stars and Stripes cannot be in such a deplorable condition under Democratic rule as the Republicans would not be so anxious to take it over.

Visitors to New York should go to Fifth Avenue, and take bus number 5 or 19 for a trip through the typical shopping and residential districts. This will include the famous Riverside Drive region and Grant's Tomb. Some palatial homes are for sale, others rent for ten dollars per week a year. No other city in the world can offer you a similar trip for the same money.

On several occasions the writer visited places of business in New York City, and discovered that they had catalogues and letters addressed to James Tweedie, carefully filed away for immediate reference. Only business people can fully understand what this means, and how long it certainly took the James Tweedie firm to establish business connections not only in New York but in many other large centres all over the world.

"The James Tweedie Limited" is an international slogan, known and more day by day call at 162 Front street on panting through Belleville; even some within the past year were from London, Regina, and from Swiftcurrent.

Then came a delightful week-end at Irvington-on-the-Hudson, a suburban community miles north of the city and not far from Yonkers, N.Y. This invigorating region reminded us of a summer we once spent in Muskoka, with its mountains, lakes and eternal hills and rocks. We were greatly indebted to our friends, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wheeler, for this splendid outing, and were taken by auto to their summer residence on the crest of one of the hills in too beautiful and comfortable to be left uncoupled for so much of each year. The owners of Irvington-on-the-Hudson are to be congratulated. They are carefully cultivated and cared for. A year ago we spoke of Mr. Wheeler as a former citizen of Belleville. Their home in Belleville did not wish to openly but made it, with the result that after forty years he is one of the most prominent and respected business men in Irvington-on-the-Hudson. Brooklyn's prosperous and respected business men are to a large degree a fact that is not generally known, but that patience, perseverance, honesty, and self-denial overcame all obstacles.

On the visit to Irvington we saw for the first time a searchlight in operation for the guidance of pilots of airplanes. A powerful revolving light is placed on a high metal derrick, which itself is placed on high ground. Similar lights are placed at suitable intervals between Los Angeles and New York, also between Chicago and New York, and other large centres to help airplanes on their course at night, and also to avoid crashing into high mountains. Later we saw many of these lights on our journey from New York to Chicago, and Kansas City, where we are being written, Saturday, May 2, 1936. The air has become like a great ocean, requiring warning and guiding signals similar to those of established lighthouses.

Everywhere we go throughout the United States, there is only one sentiment with reference to Governor Hoffman of New Jersey and his indictment in the famous Hauptmann case, and that feeling of disbelief in his guilt surrounded in the words: "No modern court would have justified his methods." It would seem to be a case of cheap notoriety even though accompanied by universal disgust.

After a brief, happy week in New York, the day came to buy tickets for one of the most extended bus de luxe trips on record. Our tickets covered from New York to Los Angeles through Pittsburg, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City and others at each of which we stopped over one or more nights. This total distance is three thousand miles across the American continent east to west from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and is similar to a trip westward from Halifax to Vancouver. But that is by rail instead of bus. After touring California to San Francisco, we go eastward and homeward through Reno, Salt Lake City, Chicago, and Detroit to Toronto, having covered in all by bus or auto, approximately ten thousand miles. The fresh air and constantly changing panorama of scenes and persons make it one of the most desirable trips in the world while time

Baseball Soothsayers Hurry To Amend Choices as Boston Gains Momentum in America

Detroit Tigers Having Tough Road Without Greenberg

5 STRAIGHT FOR GROVE

McFayden Pitches Three Hit Ball to Defeat Cards

(By Andy Clarke)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The baseball soothsayers are hurrying to amend their choices as the Red Sox gain momentum and the Detroit Tigers find barriers heaped along the way.

Many of the experts, including Broadway's noted picker, Jack Doyle, have leaped from the bandwagon of the Tigers to string along with the team that Tyrrell built. They figure that with Hank Greenberg out of the Tiger lineup for more than a month with a broken wrist, and Lefty Grove, Wes Ferrell, Mickey Cochrane and the rest clicking in top form with the Sox the odds are on the Boston team to lead the way down the stretch in late September. That is if the Yankees, with a fine all-round pitching staff and Joe Dimaggio and Frankie Crosetti playing sensationally, don't take command of proceedings.

Fifth Straight For Grove

Grove turned in his fifth straight victory and his third shutout of the season yesterday as the Red Sox beat the Tigers 5-0 with 18,160 of Boston's faithful in the stands. Lefty gave five hits but Roger Cramer and Doug Cramer gave him some great backing, robbing the Tigers of at least three two-baggers with spectacular plays. Mickey Cochrane, back in the game despite his injured foot, hit a double and a single. Eldon Auker, on the mound for Detroit, allowed only seven hits but three were bunched in the second frame, when the Sox scored their runs.

Grove's win, however, featured pitching duel, as Auker pitched brilliantly. It was the fifth in succession. The Tiger hurler, outstanding exhibition goes to slender Danny MacFayden of the Boston Bees, who beat the St. Louis Cards 1-0, allowing only three hits. He bested Paul Dean who allowed only five safeties. The lone Bee run was made when Bill Urbanski smashed a triple and Gene Moore followed with a single.

Five Pitching Chores

Other fine pitching chores were turned in by Young Gene Schott of the Reds, who pitched five hit ball in a 3-2 victory over the Giants; Jim Weaver's six-hit pitching which gave the Pirates a 4-0 shutout over the Dodgers; Bill Lee's five-hitter which enabling the Cubs to defeat the Phillies 5-4, and Pat Malone's feat of completing his first game since 1934 to give the Yankees an 8-3 decision over the luckless Reverar.

In other games, the Athletics defeated the White Sox 8-4 with Wally Moses ending the game in dramatic fashion with a home run smash with two on and two in the 10th inning, and the Cleveland Indians brought some timely hitting into play to defeat the Senators 8-4. The White Sox were beaten by the same method they had employed to get most of their runs, Zeke Bonura having clouted two for the circuit and Manager Simmons one for three.

The Yankees, led by Lou Gehrig, who got two doubles and a home run single, collected a total of 15 safeties off three Browns hurlers and handed the men of Rochester their ninth straight defeat. Dimaggio, with a pair of home runs and a single, as did Red Rolfe and Bill Dickey, helped famed Jim, while allowing eight hits.

Besides turning in outstanding job on the mound, both Grove and Schott featured with the hickory. Grove belted home the first Boston run with a double and scored the second on Dusty Cooke's triple. Schott made two hits to drive in as many runs.

ALBER COLLEGE WINS OVER O.S.D.

Interscholastic Softball Loop Opened on College Campus

Albert College drew first blood in the local senior interscholastic softball loop when they downed the O.S.D. "muahhaliers" 11 to 7 on their home grounds yesterday afternoon. The game was a typical early season battle that saw plenty of hitting throughout. The feature of the pastime was Hollingsworth's four-base clout in the last frame, scoring Clouse ahead of him.

Johns ascended the mound for the Albert nine and hurled splendid ball, allowing the "cast iron" exactly five safe hits. Bostnari hurled for the losers and was touched for a total of nine safeties. The latter were somewhat evenly divided as Albert bunched their hits and the O.S.D. made five mistakes. Wildness on the part of Bostnari in the initial frame placed two aboard, both of whom subsequently scored. Jones whirled five wide ones in the next three back to the Albert bench via the three strike route.

Jones led the Albert squad with three safeties, Mr. Hollingsworth helped himself to two hits, Bostnari, Major and Storring were the outstanding hitters for the losing team from O.S.D. The next game scheduled in the local senior interscholastic loop will be played at Alber College on Thursday when the St. Mikes "Irish" play their initial game of the school season.

Limits Orioles to Two Hits And Smacks Single For Winning Run

ROYALS BREAK ON TOP

Winning Teams at Home Taking Plenty of Beating on Road

By The Associated Press

The teams, that looked so good on their home grounds during the first two weeks of the International League season have begun to take their beatings now that the scene has shifted from the southern sector of the loop to the northern, the same things goes with reverse English for the big losers. Especially the last two in the standings.

The Newark Bears, almost invincible as they leaped to the top with 11 victories in their first 13 games, have lost four out of six on the road, dropping an exciting 2 to 0 game to the Buffalo Bisons yesterday. Rochester, which won two and lost seven in the south, has won four straight at home, mostly by heavy hitting. The Red Wings belted out 20 runs in the big inning yesterday to whip the Albany Senators 7 to 4.

Montreal's Royals, who supplanted Newark as League leader, racked up their sixth straight triumph. Their usually fine pitching helped the Royals swung their bats effectively to defeat the Syracuse Chiefs 9 to 3 in 12 innings. Toronto moved ahead of Baltimore into third place with a 4 to 3 triumph over the Orioles.

Ken Ash and Spurgeon Chandler allowed only six hits apiece in the Buffalo-Newark scrap and neither allowed a run until the eighth inning. Then with two out Moe Mallony lined one over the distant wall in left centre for a home run and the only tally of the game.

Wistert Whips Weiss

Two runs behind going into the ninth frame, Rochester landed on Tomas De La Cruz, the busy Cuban hurler but just replaced Orlin Rogers, and his successor, Leon Pettit, for six hits to pile up the winning runs. Bob Seeds and Babe Dahlgren were the big guns of the Montreal-Syracuse scrap. After gaining an 8-3 lead, the Royals let it, when Dahlgren hammered out two homers, a double and a single in five times up to drive in six runs. Seeds also had a pair of five with a triple and three singles but one was the winning tally.

Francis (Whitey) Wistert was almost the whole works in Toronto's win over the Orioles to two hits, but gave Weiss the. When the passes and two errors had let the Baltimore boy down in the first inning he smacked his fourth hit of the season with two out and Punk on second in the ninth to bring home the winning run.

Wrestling is a queer business, to-night you see a thrilling bout and tomorrow night the same grapplers do not appear quite so hot, but "its queer especially when the fans stay at home, there's when the contestants actually put on a show that pleases. This statement was proven by the three bouts staged at the Arena last night. Without fear of contradiction we contend, that last night's wrestling show at the Arena was the best three-card show ever presented in Belleville. There were the odd few, who belittled the inability of Jack Donovan to return to the ring, but there were sufficient fans to visit the dressing room, after the main bout, to eliminate any doubt as to Donovan's inability to continue. "Sure I can wobble into the ring and try to finish my bout but my back is now too sore and I know if I do, that guy (The Unknown) will only make matters worse for me by centring his attack on my back, so rather than be laid up for months I merely conceded the bout, but remember this, I want a return match right here in Belleville." Donovan stated to us after last night's main scrap and we are with him to the last drop (?)

Matchmaker Jack Corcoran is to be congratulated on the splendid show he is providing local wrestling fans. For instance, we doubt if a better bout was ever staged in Belleville than last night's semi-final scrap between Ed Meske and Andy Moon. Two smooth and well used his superb strength to win, but Meske, a scientific grappler and when science met brute strength well the old axiom went to the winds for once. We say all Meske's as a clean and game wrestler. We repeat—the Moon-Meske bout was the best wrestling bout ever staged in Belleville. As a matter of fact the Dunlop-Chief bout was all that could be asked for, while in the final bout Jack Donovan had matters all his own way, until the "beyond great" applied that bone crushing hold, the Chinese backbreaker. The only regret we have is, that the fans stayed at home and missed one of the best wrestling cards ever presented in this city. Maybe next week's show will swing into the sport fans of the community by into residing, that Belleville is the best wrestling city in Canada being afforded the best wrestlers on the continent.

The local junior baseball squad opened the season's activities with a lengthy practice at the Collegiate Campus last night. Coach Lee, of the Kiwanis Club, had Leo "Stub" Barrett at the helm of the local pitching and watching them go through their paces. The pitchers were herded in one corner of the lot and limbered the kinks out of their arms. Leo has plenty of left handed hurlers were in the lot of eight pitchers to turn out, all fall raggy kids with plenty of promise. A total of 25 keen keen boys answered the initial-call to try-out for positions on the local junior squad. Baseball is fast from dormant in Belleville, all that is needed is a little encouragement from the civic-scene in general. The junior hurlers will assemble for a warm-up at the Collegiate campus again on Thursday, while the entire squad will be on hand next week for

Irish Jack Donovan is Forced To Concede Bout to Unknown In Best Card of the Season

Moose Meaker Bout Brings Fans to Feet With Excitement

SLIM CROWD

Best Three-Card Show Ever Staged in a Local Ring

Three of the best wrestling bouts ever staged in Belleville were presented to a small crowd of some 500 faithful fans at the Belleville Arena last night, when The Unknown, a giant masked gent, won the headliner, over "Irish" Jack Donovan, who sustained a badly strained back and was forced to concede the match to his foe. The semi-final scrap, however literally stole the whole show, as brute strength overcame science, when Andy Meaker, Moose Jaw, Sask., Indian, battled with Monte after a thrilling half hour of wrestling, that has never been equalled in Belleville. The opening bout, when Al Dunlop forced Buffalo Joe, the Indian, to concede the bout, after 15 minutes had the entire show, staged by Matchmaker Jack Corcoran, was outstanding as it gave local fans thrilling bouts in succession and left 500 fans satisfied that Belleville was being afforded the best there is in the wrestling world.

Favorite Held

Being his favourite hold, the scrupulous head scissors, "Irish" Jack Donovan won the only fall in the main bout, when he pinned Tex Ungaben's shoulders to the mat after some 27 minutes of hard wrestling. Both men, who weighed well over the 200 pound mark, started at slight advantages in this main affair, that held the fans breathless one moment, and then had them shouting for the Unknown's blood the next. The excitement was with Donovan almost to the end, and bowled with delight as the Irishman once applied a scientific death-lock, but, without success. The Unknown used the giant's strength to eventually wear Donovan down, however, as Donovan had won the initial fall of the main bout he returned in the ring for again be the aggressor and all but unmasked the "hooded ghost" before time and the weight of the heavier man saw the tide of battle change, and suddenly the Unknown, who failed his favorite hold, that has made so many wrestlers say "uncle" of late, the Chinese back-breaker and once the pressure was fully applied Donovan was forced to concede the fall and was dropped limp to the mat and left writhing in pain. The Irishman was assisted from the ring by Matchmaker Corcoran, and could not return in time for the third round, the decision being awarded the bout. Donovan's back injury forced him to concede both falls.

Meaker Unanimously Praised

When Andy Meaker, the Norwegian badman, defeated Ed Meaker, the Ohio, Slate titleholder, the fans for once saw strength and villainous wrestling overcome science. The battle, probably repeatedly turned in this semi-final feat as Meaker and Meaker staged the most thrilling 30 minutes of modern wrestling ever staged in Belleville. Meaker, gradually punished Meaker with continued arm and wrist twists, that subsequently took their toll and allowed Meaker to work a fresh chancery hold on Meaker, however, was nearly forced to concede his bout, following out of this hold Meaker fell victim to a wrist-lock, that was applied with a vengeance for nearly four consecutive minutes. Meaker foiled Meaker, however, and Referee Wells stepped in to part the grapplers, when the Norwegian attacked the official only - to have Referee Wells crash Meaker to the canvas with a well-placed flat as Meaker shouted —"you lay off me, see". Later Meaker used a series of elbow smashes and scissor holds to allow amateurish, but undeniably More boos with four flying tackles and later fell on Meaker with a final chancery to win over the Ohio grabber in a little over 31 minutes. Prior to his title over it all Meaker demonstrated many defiant Meaker demonstrated many scientific holds, while Moon showed brutality and sheer strength to make the bout one long to be remembered in Belleville.

The opening bout saw plenty of action as well as Al Dunlop, Toronto hurled Chief Lynx, the Indian villain, from the ring and with his arms after sixteen minutes of torrid and exciting wrestling Dunlop finally returned to the mat however, Dunlop worked on that injured arm with an arm-lock forcing Buffalo Joe to concede the fall. The bout saw both contestants ferociously and pugnaciously attack each other by legal and sometimes illegal tactics at times, much to the delight of the customers. The entire card was one of action and stood out in the annals of wrestling in Belleville as "tops".

BOLD VENTURE, BREVITY MAY MATCH STRIDES

New York, May 6—(CP)— Amid an increasing argument as to the respective speed of Bold Venture and Brevity, the one-two finishers in last Saturday's Kentucky Derby, Chairman Herbert B. Swope of the New York State Racing Commission was out today with a suggestion the thoroughbreds clash in a match race.

The Swope idea is that the two speedsters that finished a whisker apart in the Blue Grass classic be rallied against each other during the Belmont Park spring meeting later this month. Morton Schwartz, who collected the major share of the $40,000 with Bold Venture's Louisville victory, is said to be agreeable so long as the engagement does not interfere with his horse's engagement in the Belmont stakes. Brevity is also entered in that historic stake. His owner, Joseph Widener, has not yet commented on the suggested match bout.

C. A. H. A. GIVEN RETREAT ROUTES BY AMATEUR HEAD

If Rule Enforced, Hockey Body Can't Send Team to Olympics

UNDER A BAN

Definition of Amateur to Remain Same as Far as A. A. U. of C. is Concerned

Toronto, May 6 (CP)—The bold and progressive left wing of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, the cradle—at almost cradle—of a new amateur definition in Canada, had a choice of retreat routes today. Having taken a stand the C.A.H.A. may retreat either to left or to right.

It can beat a hasty, sorrowful retreat from its new ideals, abandoning its pursuit of more elbow room and generally greater freedom for the amateur hockey player.

Or it can run up the battle flag and cheerfully withdraw from the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, looking to its participation in such events as the Olympic games and the right to govern Canadian players outside of Canada.

President W. A. Fry of the A.A.U. of C. placed the choice with the hockey body last night, addressing a letter to Cecil Duncan of Ottawa, C.A.H.A. president, in which he declared the Amateur Union would not entertain proposals for changing the definition of an amateur.

Mr. Duncan and other officials of the C.A.H.A., including George Dudley of Midland, Ont. and Clarence Campbell and Prof. W. G. Hardy of Edmonton, won their first round of their uphill struggle last month at the annual C.A.H.A. Convention here.

Mr. Fry Changes Mind

They succeeded in having passed a resolution altering the amateur code so that professionals in other sports could play as amateurs in hockey; players could be paid for time lost from work to play hockey; players could capitalize on their ability as athletes to obtain legitimate employment.

And at that time Mr. Fry agreed to have the subject considered before other allied bodies of the A.A.U. of C. in a mail vote. He would let the C.A.H.A. know by July 1 what other sports organizations thought. The C.A.H.A. agreed it would then place the legislation on its books until the vote was held.

But Mr. Fry told Mr. Duncan in his letter, that he had changed his mind. He had decided no vote would be held and he urged the C.A.H.A. head to discover the real opinion of the sports in their own branches before going ahead on the basis of action taken at the C.A.H.A. annual meeting.

That vote, he charged, was "cast only after the strongest kind of 'steamroller' lobby by some of the delegates." On this, he found it had some solid linen to clean as he suggested the C.A.H.A. get busy and do some cleaning.

Writer Speaks Plainly

"Apparently," he told Mr. Duncan, "some amateur leaders haven't got their ears to the ground to know that there is, all over Canada at the present time, a definite trend in the public mind at failure of controlling bodies in connection with amateurism, so you at once follow the advice of your then president (E. C. Gilroy, last November in Halifax when he said: 'It wrong conditions exist in the game, the branches get in and clean them up and do not let the racketeers, or shirt manufacturers in and disorganize hockey for us.'

"I must tell you that the days of concessions are over—all the Union asks is that the game be protected from the encroachments of those who do not want to play the game fair and that goes for all other branches of sport that have been bringing criticism and discredit on amateurism."

Should the C.A.H.A. go ahead with the new definition of an amateur, then Mr. Fry said it would lose most of its authority over affiliation with the A.A.U. of C. It could not, for instance send a team to Olympic games, if England, Europe or the United States.

Would Be Under Ban

"Your association would be under a ban," he advised Mr. Duncan. "You would lose your affiliation with the International Ice Hockey Federation, in which you must be in good amateur standing if your players wish to make those thrilling European exhibition tours Canadian teams have so much enjoyed every winter.

"Then, too, at your recent convention you suspended large numbers of hockey players, who had jumped to England, Europe and the United States last winter without transfers. If you withdrew from the Union, who is going to insist that your suspensions be enforced? Will you have any alliance with the A.A.U. of C. which protects you, because we are guaranteed co-operation with the amateur controlling bodies of all the other nations of the world."

INJURY JINX

Disconsolate "Hank" Greenberg sits in his hotel room, scanning baseball news, out of the game for weeks with a fractured wrist. He was suffered when Jake Powell, Washington Senator, crashed into him in a race for first base. By strange co-incidence Powell also put Manager-Catcher Cochrane out of Detroit's lineup, fouling a ball off to the catcher's instep, crippling him. Now experts are wondering if the injury jinx, absent from Tigers' rooms for two years, has come to roost.

JUMPER GIVEN AWAY

London, May 6 (UP)—Jock Whitney's great jumper, "Thomond 2nd, veteran of the Grand National steeplechase classic, ended his racing career today when he became a bonne for Lady Ursula Pilmey Sanker, eldest daughter of the Duke of Westminster.

Whitney gave Thomond 2nd to Lady Sanker, figuring that time had caught up with "the little horse had caught up with "the little horse had taught up with" and knowing with the big heart" and knowing that in the Sanker stables Thomond would have the best of care during his life of comparative ease.

Thomond 2nd placed third in the Grand National in 1934—his closest bid for victory.

TONY CANZONERI NEVER K. O'D. IN LONG RING CAREER

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, May 6 (AP)—At the risk of confusing a boxing match which has the fans so steamed up they'll probably bust out all the seats in Madison Square Garden by Friday with the current crop of political orations, let us compare the records of Jimmy McLarnin and Tony Canzoneri.

They are due to fight 10 rounds or less, with no title but a lot of prestige at stake. An advance sale of more than $20,000 and the fluctuating but always close betting odds attest the public interest in this first meeting between two of the best little fighters in the game.

McLarnin, figuring a boxer is just so many good fights in his system and that there's no use wasting what there's no big money rolling in, has fought 74 times. He's won 62 decisions, scored 12 knockouts, drawn three times been knocked out once and lost nine times.

Canzoneri has had 138 in all. His record shows 94 knockouts plus 11 decisions on the credit side. 11 draws and a no decision bout against 14 defeats. He's never been put down for the count in all that long career.

McLarnin hasn't fought since the second time he lost the title and the possibility of his having to come ring-rusty in a year of inaction ranks along with Dempsey's great poundage as a talking point in the discussions of the scrap. Canzoneri went only once back to win the lightweight title again by beating Jimmy Ambers but he's already had five fights this year, wing four by knockouts.

The fans as well as many opinions as there are fans have been recorded. The odds favoring McLarnin are about 7 to 5 and indications are they will be 2 to 1 and take your pick before they enter the ring.

FINISHING THE SWING HARVEY EXERCISE #8

Sth

A sure way to spoil any shot is to close the clubface before impact. If you feel that you are into your downswing, but generally it closes in the earlier stages of your swing. In fact, movies of your swing would show that it closes as you start the club back from the ball.

This closing may be caused by one of a hundred things, all of which result in the club face taking the angle of the swing. I've found that it isn't enough to tell a player to present the right side from downlasting and to keep the left side in control—he must be given something else which will enable the weaker side to dominate.

Here is a move that has proved very effective. As you start the club back, turn the ball, with the back of the clubhead along the turf. This tends to open the clubface; certainly it keeps it from going back closed. After you have practised this for a few times you'll notice more left hand in your swing with a general improvement that always accompanies left side domination.

WRESTLING TRUST FLOORED AGAIN AS TURK NAMED CHAMP

By DALE HARRISON

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, May 6 (AP)—Ali Baba, the Terrible Turk from the United States navy, is now the world's heavyweight wrestling champion, as those things go; and the "wrestling trust" can take it or leave it.

Ali Baba (born Arleen Ekinian) took Dr. Dick Shikat, the Terrible Teuton, in hand at Madison Square Garden last night and flung him hither and thither with gusto and abandon. After 83 minutes and 37 seconds of that sort of thing, Mr. Baba (205 pounds) got a crotch hold on Mr. Shikat (237) and heaved him heavily to the mat.

As Mr. Shikat lay there trying to remember if he had left the light on in the bathroom at home, Mr. Baba leaped upon him with a body press, and this new wrestling match of the century was over.

Grunting About Even.

All may be slowing up, because it took him only 46 minutes and 40 seconds to destroy Shikat's faith in human nature at their former meeting, in Detroit April 25.

Two or three times during the rough-house last night Mr. Baba appeared to be in agony, but the grunting was about even. Shikat groaned loudest, but the Kurd put more feeling in it.

Mr. Joe Humphreys, the world famous announcer, introduced Ali Baba as a "Son of the Hype of Turk", thereby frightening a couple of customers into a sound sleep.

After it was all over, Ali Baba consented to have his arm held aloft while he was proclaimed "champion of the world", and he waved like an ambassador. There was none of that ribald stuff like "Hello, mom, hello, pop". He is the dignified type.

Dream Didn't Count.

All the time Ali Baba was boxing, Shikat was rolling around on the floor groaning like nobody's business; but the bout was over, and the groans didn't count.

The printed program stated that "no wrestler appearing on this card is under the control of the wrestling trust." This was true, and he won't believe anything. Even when they see it in black and white.

When Ali Baba took off his fez his head was found to be clipped to the quick, either by accident, design or distrust. He has also often been spoken of as a bullet head; and his handlebar mustachios are something to behold.

Mustache Fascinates Shikat.

Mr. Ali Baba's mustachios fascinated Herr Shikat, and on two occasions he reached out and yanked them with great glee. Such tactics are reviewed upon by lovers of good clean sport, and the referee reprimanded Mr. Shikat severely.

Mr. Shikat was by long the most courteous of the two behemaths of brawl, for every time he happened to sock Mr. Shikat in the nose he said forth his right hand, indicating he was ready and willing to forget his mistake.

Shikat had no time to be shaking hands, most of his minutes being occupied with figuring out ways and means of keeping from being pinned to the mat, which is the object of the game.

ONE WAY STREET

by JOSEPH McCORD

Sturges gave her a quick glance. The expression of her face had changed. It was alive, eager.

"I fancy you're rather loyal to your friends," he remarked slowly. Then, before she could answer: "Everything moving along all right on the job?"

"Oh, yes."

"Miss Gamble seems to think you're overdoing a bit."

Jean laughed. "She was making fun of me."

"I feel relieved then. Miss Sawyer——"

"Yes?"

"Did you mean what you said about being in a hurry to get home tonight? Thought perhaps you'd go for a little drive and see how this bus performs."

"Thank you, I'd love it. But I must go home."

"Sorry. Are we headed in the right direction? I forgot to ask."

"It's the second street after this next one."

Mark lapsed into silence. He had wanted to have a talk with the girl, but he had the uncomfortable impression she was holding him at a distance. Why, he wondered? His reflections were interrupted by a light touch on his arm.

"Please let me out at this corner, Mr. Sturges. It's very kind of——"

"Oh it is. Never mind. We'll drive around the square."

"Please don't. It's only a few steps for me." Jean had her hand on the door latch as she spoke, so Sturges swung his car over to the curb and halted it. She was out of the machine before he could leave his seat. "Thank you very much for bringing me home."

"Not at all. Miss Sawyer, may I ask you about your father?"

"Of course."

"I was wondering if he had been able to establish any connection yet. Perhaps he hasn't tried."

"I'm afraid he hasn't." The brown eyes clouded a trifle.

"I'm rather a stranger here. But I have some acquaintance, of course. If there is anything I could do for Mr. Sawyer——"

"Daddy will appreciate your asking. So do I. Good night." She gave him a quick smile and hurried away, leaving him looking after her retreating figure. He believed he understood.

A glance about the nearest house strengthened his impression. Miss Sawyer had been sensitive over the discovery of her home surroundings.

As if that made any difference.

Sturges glanced up with a frown as his telephone sounded its subdued bass. He placed the instrument to his ear, his hand going out for a pencil at the same time.

"Sturges speaking. Who's that, you take it? Very well.....there you are." The operator's voice came through in answer to his brief "All right."

"Hello," a voice drawled over the wire. "You sounded terrifically sure of them. You know who this is, don't you?"

"Of course. How are you, Miss Cannon?"

"All right, I'm also.....Blythe Try it again."

Mark's brows lifted. His mouth relaxed in a half smile. Rather absurd.....Operator listening. In most likely.

"How are you, Blythe?"

"That's much nicer. I hate to disturb you during hours, but I thought you'd better know you were coming over luncheon night for your lesson."

"Lesson?" he echoed. "In what?"

"Contract, of course. The Bob Ridgways are going to drop around. Suzanne is rather an expert.....in more ways than one. She's thrilled over meeting you. Be careful."

"That certainly is kind of you I'm not quite sure——"

"You can find your way over, can't you?"

"Of course."

"I hear you have a new car, so I suppose you'll be driving. See you at eight, 'Bye."

There was a click. Silence. Mark sat without moving until a discreet inquiry from the operator recalled him. Suspiciously polite.

Never mind," he said shortly. He placed the instrument on its stand with more force than was necessary.

His first impulse was to get the number back and plead a previous engagement, until he remembered with anything he might offer in the way of an excuse would sound unsatisfactory. Never say Blythe Cannon had of taking acceptances in her own hand. He might as well go through with it.....get it done with.

He had not heard from Blythe nor seen her since the occasion of his visit to Arden Terrace. He hoped that she had forgotten that oddly personal conversation after dinner, that her seeming interest was nothing more than a passing whim. For some reason, the thought of renewing the contact made him slightly uncomfortable.

One thing was certain. If Miss Cannon held the idea that he was about to embark upon an active social cruise in Corham.....Well she was mistaken. He must be careful not to affront his employer's family. But, outside of the store, he proposed to live his own life.

Nevertheless, he was glad the following evening proved to be unusually warm for the season of the year. White flannels and blue coat would take care of the formalities this time.

To add to his relief, the other guests had arrived when the maid ushered him into the drawing room at Arden Terrace.

Robert Ridgway proved to be a thick-jowled and somewhat sullen individual, shaved to the pink, and immaculate in white linen. The successful businessman type who would be inclined to arrogance when freed from the immediate atmosphere of his statuesque wife, as Mark concluded promptly. Desultory conversation prior to the appearance of the card-table revealed that Mr. Ridgway managed the Gorham agency of a large life insurance company.

Suzanne Ridgway was a tall blonde, brittle and cool-eyed. Sturges repressed a smile when he recalled Blythe's warning. Difficult to imagine Mrs. Ridgway's being "thrilled" over any prospect whatever. If she were a bridge expert there was little likelihood that she looked forward to wasting her talents upon a novice. This became rudely apparent when Mark found himself seated across the table from her.

His lessons with becoming interest to a terse description of what the contract player should know and should do. A technical discourse interrupted by sager and unsolicited interpolations from Blythe Bob Ridgway lay back in his chair and watched the session from under his heavy-lidded eyes, chewing the end of a dead cigar. He was patently bored by the entire proceeding. Any stranger, however, was a prospect.

Thanks to long experience with other forms of the pastime and an aptness for cards, the pupil was able to make a creditable showing—so much so that his mentor threw in cheerfully after a few hands.

The first lesson concluded to her evident satisfaction, Suzanne summoned Mark to a place beside her on a settee and proceeded to monopolize him the remainder of the evening, to their hostess' unconcealed resentment.

INSTALMENT 14.

"It has been such a pleasure to meet you, Mr. Sturges," Mrs. Ridgway assured him, holding his hand in hers while her husband urged their departure. "Don't forget you are coming to see us very soon. We'll make it dinner. You will hear from me shortly."

"Thank you." Mark replied gallantly, "I shall be delighted."

"You don't have to rush away," Blythe remarked petulantly when she turned from the departing Ridgways and found her remaining guest contriving an unobtrusive glance at his watch. "I haven't had a chance to talk with you all evening. Come out to the library."

"I must be running along shortly," he suggested as he followed her.

"What do you think of Suzanne?" Blythe queried abruptly. As on the occasion of his last visit, she curled up in a corner of the big couch and motioned Mark to a place at her side.

"I think she's charming."

"It seemed mutual." Blythe reached for a cigarette and inclined her dark head towards the lighter, that Mark extended. "Suzanne's a sweet girl," she observed

"But she is inclined to be a bit careless where other women's husbands are concerned."

"Which would seem to make me immune," was the light rejoinder.

"Perhaps," Blythe returned enigmatically.

"Then I may hope my efforts at contract did not prove embarrassing? Mark decided a change of topic was in order.

"I should rather think not! I'm inclined to believe you were not exactly truthful when you said you never had played."

"My word of honor."

"Then it's merely another tribute to your ability. Are you a judge of beefsteak as well?"

"Not in the least. I thought them perfect."

"Well?" she questioned, with an amused smile. "What are you so serious about?"

"I was just thinking," he answered slowly, "that you seem to get everything you want."

"I told you that." was the calm retort. "I'm glad you're finding it out. It saves a great deal of trouble."

"I suppose it must." Mark agreed vaguely.

Speaking about the store.....Blythe extinguished her cigarette deliberately against the ash tray "How is your little friend, Miss Sawyer, getting along?"

"Very well, as far as I know."

If Blythe expected him to pursue the topic she was disappointed. He gave ourselves a good many out and look on for a time. We'll have lunch at the store and let Henri drive us. The parking's always a nuisance."

"I fear you'll have to excuse me as I see I'm very much interested in a survey of our Saturday trade..... plotting a set of comparative charts to see what it looks like. Of course I have the regular reports but I'm supplementing them with first-hand observations."

"That's really too bad. You'll have to go. If Dad hasn't spoken about it to you, he will. He expects you to represent him. We rather weird the way he's depending on you these days. Suppose I pick you up for lunch about one-thirty. That will give us all the time we need."

Mark sat looking at her in silence city like here," she remarked, "but Gorham is a small place, Mark. You'd never suspect how small. I hope you don't mind my telling you that."

"Meaning," he countered coolly "that I met Miss Sawyer and a friend in a restaurant the other evening and drove them to their homes. I fancy that calls for no particular explanation."

"Of course not." Blythe agreed quickly. "But some people are so quick to comment. That Gambl, woman is a character, isn't she? The best beautician in town, but.....queer. Didn't you think so?"

THE TARZAN TWINS

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

The frightful roar of the lion reminded the boys, that even if they escaped from the cannibals, death would stalk them in the jungle. "I don't think we have much chance getting out of this," Dick said, "but I'd rather try than sit here and wait to be eaten, like Bulala and Ukundo are doing."

"According to what I can understand of Bulala's gibberish," Doc answered; "they're probably saving us for a big feast." The boys would have been horrified had they known the big feast was planned to celebrate the expected success of the witch-doctor's scheme to lead Tarzan to his death!

Amazing how diverse conversation could become in this girl's hands. Rather difficult to keep one's self from floundering.

"You'll have a chance to see some live specimens Saturday afternoon. We put on a very decent apring exhibition out at Silver Farms."

"We?" Mark questioned curiously For the moment he wondered if one of The Iron Blonde's activities had been kept from him.

"It's the Breeders' Association But Silver Farms belong to us and Dad's a heavy contributor."

"Are you showing any horses of your own?"

"Not this year. Dad's stuffy about my appearing in the ring. I'd grown a bit tired of taking ribbons anyway. But we'll be obliged to go

Soon the boys began to move about to warm themselves, but they succeeded only in awakening the two blacks, who laughed when Dick and Doc complained of the cold. Bulala assured them that one was always cold at night; and as he and Ukundo were almost naked, the twins were ashamed of their grumbling.

"The tropical sun rose at last, bringing warmth and new vitality. The boys were so hungry they could have eaten anything, but nothing was brought to them. At noon two warriors came and gruffly ordered all four of them out of the hut. "Big chief want see us," quavered Bulala; "very bad!"

J. F. HILL, M.P.P. Criticizes Government's Action in Last Session

"The fate of the Conservative party in this country must in future depend upon firm policies and the ability to meet squarely each pressing problems face to face. The day of pussyfooting and weak kneedness has long since passed. When our very principles are threatened, then it's time to do something," declared Mr. William J. Stewart, C. B. E., ex-Mayor of the City of Toronto, and potential candidate for leadership of the Conservative Party in Ontario at the coming convention, before an appauding audience in the Conservative Club rooms, Front street, last evening.

"It is not enough for us to get up platforms and condemn Hepburn and his followers; they have been condemned. It is time up to us to get up and stand four square against their ideas and measures, which threaten to shake the very foundations of this province." impressed the guest speaker.

Youth, unemployment, mining development in the northern part of the province, Hydro, the liquor question, the School Bill, and marriages in Ontario are other developments were dealt with in rapid sequence by ex-Mayor Stewart.

Under Slight Handicap

Introduced by Dr. Jas. W. Kinnear, ex-Mayor Stewart faced his audience under a decided handicap, the effect of Laryngitis resulted in a decided lowering of the tone of the address, but in no way diminished the fervor and spirit with which it was delivered.

80 Degree Weather is General According to Reports

(By The Canadian Press)

The sun's rays danced over West-ern Ontario today as a summer-time trek to river and lake shore appeared, and temperatures soared to near-record figures. Warm clear weather greeted citizens in the early morning and promised a real summer day.

Summer's warmth prevailed in some parts of Eastern Ontario but it was mostly apparent in the western section, where cities and towns reported midsummer temperatures as the day progressed. Guelph citizens experienced the third day of a May heat wave that approached the memory of the oldest resident.

The mercury, which has reached as twice during the hot spell in Guelph was headed for the same figure, while a cloudless sky promised no relief to residents of Guelph Collegiate. Kitchener's high mark so far was 84, 1-3 and at 8.30 o'clock this morning the reading was 72 1-2.

Toronto district was masked in a varying cool that shot temperatures to 89.8 yesterday and threatened to equal this performance today. Early this morning the mercury rested at 74 and was pointing upwards. Record statistics list the 89.8 mark for April 23, 1902, and also found the end of May in 1911 when the reading was only four degrees above this mark.

Other reports showed Woodstock's thermometers hit 84. Thursday's reached 86 yesterday and started today at 75. The heat wave continued at Galt with new record threatened as the mercury hopped to 80 at nine o'clock this morning. Yesterday's high was 86. St. Catharines high mark for the last 24 hours was 87 while Niagara Falls prepared for a hot day, the mercury standing at 82 at 8 a.m.

Along the border area heat waves also appeared to present Windsor this morning with 80-degree weather.

In Eastern Ontario Peterborough reported yesterday's high at 89 with another hot day in prospect.

In the north Sault Ste. Marie enjoyed a warm day with the thermometer at 78, four below yesterday.

Conklin Shows Pay Tribute to Trouper

Kitchener, Ont., May 9.—(CP)—More than 200 "show folks" will attend funeral services here today for 35-year-old Sue Alric, the Midget aerialist who fell 80 feet to her death here late Thursday night. Services are to be held in St. Mary's Church with the entire cast of the Conklin midway in attendance, and the body will be taken to Toronto for cremation. The ashes will be sent to her family in Los Angeles.

At the request of the police, the dead girl's three companions did not go on with their trapeze act last night. A large crowd was on hand but Police Chief William Hodgson asked that the act be deleted.

As a tribute to the dead trouper, all lights were extinguished on the midway grounds for a few minutes, while a search light played over the trapeze tower from which Miss Alric had fallen.

Sews Goldfish With Thread As Spine Alone Unsevered

Plain Stitches 'as in Sewing Pants' Save Aquatic Life

AQUARIUM CRASH

Washington, May 9 (CP)—Mrs. Wallace Powell, a capital housewife, received neighborly commendation today for saving the life of a goldfish with needle and thread.

It happened like this:

Swimming serenely in his glass bowl, the fish suddenly dumped on the floor when a member of the aquarium family disturbed the equilibrium.

The bowl broke and a piece of the splintered glass cut the goldfish in two. He was hanging together only by his spine, Mrs. Powell said.

Thinking quickly, she raced across the room, procured her sewing basket, whipped out a needle and a thin piece of white thread.

Returning to the dying fish she proceeded to sew him up.

"I just took plain stitches," she explained, "just as if I were mending a pair of pants."

The operation took five minutes and she deposited the mended pet in another receptacle and waited.

"He sort of lay on his side for a while," she said, "and then he began to show life."

The fish is swimming about as usual now.

Lakehurst, N.J., May 6—(AP) — The Hindenburg, newest and largest of the zeppelins, completed its first voyage across the North Atlantic today in record time for lighter-than-air craft.

Following the shipping lane across the North Atlantic, the Hindenburg did not pass over North American land until it skirted Long Island, followed Ambrose Channel into New York harbor and cruised over New York City.

'Ginger' and Husband Plan to Live Apart

Hollywood, Calif., May 9 (AP)—Ginger Rogers, dancing actress, and her husband, Lew Ayres, actor-producer, today announced they decided to live amicably apart, but that no divorce was contemplated immediately.

A joint statement issued by the couple through a studio said:

"Ginger Rogers and Lew Ayres have mutually decided that they will draw up articles of separation.

"This decision is most amicable. In the future, the two will maintain separate residences. Miss Rogers will live with her mother, Mrs. Lela Rogers.

"No divorce is contemplated at the present time."

The film colony is puzzled over the significance of the last announcement, but Miss Rogers and Ayres refused to amplify it. Ayres took the petite actress for his bride November 14, 1934.

Ethiopian Gov't is Set Up In 'New Secret Capital'

Paris, May 9—(AP)—Wolde Mariam announced today, under instructions from the Ethiopian government's "new secret capital," that he would go to Geneva Monday with an appeal for "justice against Italy."

The Ethiopian Minister to Paris and delegate to the League of Nations declined to disclose where the government was set up since that would be "bad military tactics, laying it open to attack".

"It is true the government in some respects is disorganized, but it is nevertheless functioning," he said.

"The Paris legation is receiving orders from a new capital where a large part of the cabinet and numerous functionaries are carrying on."

Mariam, as "official spokesman for the government, declared Ethiopia's military resistance to the Italians would continue even though the Fascist forces have occupied Addis Ababa and declared their war concluded successfully.

"We will not surrender as long as a single inch of land is in the hands of Ethiopians, whence they can attack the invaders," Mariam said.

"I shall tell the League the Ethiopian government is intact and functioning. It is in direct communication with what remains of the army, the legations throughout the world and all parts of Ethiopia not occupied by the Italians.

"The Italians really occupy only a minute part of the Empire."

HOFFMAN SAYS KIDNAP UNSOLVED

Defends Himself in Two Addresses at Newark, N. J.

Newark, N.J., May 9 (AP)—Governor Harold O. Hoffman, who is still convinced the Lindbergh baby kidnapping is unsolved, believes New Jersey prosecuting and police officials should "devote their energies to his investigation instead of "so deeply concerning themselves with the abuse of (Paul H.) Wendel."

In two addresses last night the governor defended his own activities in reopening the investigation of the Lindbergh case, and assumed responsibility for any acts of Ellis H. Parker, Sr., Burlington County detective, and his son, Ellis, Jr., of which he had knowledge.

He repeated charges of Franklin W. Fort, his opponent for delegate-at-large to the Republican National Convention, that he had dragged Jersey justice "in the mire" by interfering in the case after Bruno Richard Hauptmann had been convicted and condemned to die for the slaying of the baby.

Young Parker has been indicted in Brooklyn in connection with Wendel's charges he was abducted there and tortured into falsely admitting he kidnaped the Lindbergh child. He has not been apprehended.

Hoffman said that on the basis of information he would not permit extradition of young Parker, or his father, should the question arise.

HAILE PLANS LONDON VOYAGE

Is Now in Jerusalem With Empress And Family

Jerusalem, May 9 (AP)—Haile Selassie, self-exiled Emperor of Ethiopia, intends to go to London in three or four days, one of the imperial party said today.

Empress Menen, who arrived here yesterday with the Negus, their children and closest friends, will remain in the Holy Land while the Emperor proceeds to Europe.

Selassie, who fled the capital just a week ago before the Italian advance and came to Palestine aboard the British cruiser Enterprise, arose at dawn today and visited the holy places, accompanied by his ministers.

He visited the Jaffa Gate first and then went to the Holy Sepulchre, kneeling and kissing the stone of unction before entering the tomb for a day for several minutes.

Later, he participated in Communion at the Ethiopian convent outside the walls of the old city and addressed 200 members of the Ethiopian community, many of whom wept as their king of Kings advised them to "have courage and hope".

Mohammed Ali And His Retainers Account For 50 Looters

With the Italian Army in Addis Ababa, May 9 (AP)—Marshal Pietro Badoglio was understood today to have been selected for the post of viceroy of Ethiopia—first viceroy in Italian history.

A proclamation of his appointment was expected to be issued soon in Rome. The marshal could turn to the task of governing Ethiopia in the name of King Victor Emmanuel since the military campaign, in which he was commander-in-chief, has virtually ceased to exist.

Last evidence of war was a bandit attack on an ambulance outside Addis Ababa and the departure by train yesterday of native Eritrean Askari for a probably unopposed occupation of Diredawa.

Italian troops, after occupying the former imperial capital last Tuesday and restoring order to the pillaged town, are penetrating peacefully the country around tomb-like Addis Ababa in widening circles, eliminating native banditry.

WESTERN BISHOPS URGE INCREASE MISSION GIVINGS

Bishops Wells And Burgett Address Deaneries Here

WEST SITUATION

At a well attended meeting in St. Thomas' Parish House, Friday evening with the Rt. Rev. John Lyons, Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, presiding, the great missionary work under which the missionary clergy of the Church of England in Western Canada are laboring, was told to the gathering of clergy, provincial addresses by the Rt. Rev. G. H. Wells, C.M.G., D.D., Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Caribou, Kaio loops, B.C., and the Rt. Rev. A. S. Burgett, D.D., Lord Bishop of the Diocese or Edmonton, who resides at Edmonton.

Drought, crop failures and the general depression have brought about circumstances which have had a most depressing effect upon the carrying on satisfactorily of the work of the church in that part of the Dominion. The great distances which the clergy have to cover in order to minister to their people and the inadequate financial support they receive upon which to live and pay travelling expenses were graphically described by the Bishops.

Support which had been received for years from the Missionary Society of the Church in Canada has been reduced more than half owing to the fact that the giving in missions by the members of the

BRITAIN SPLITS UPON SANCTIONS

London, May 9 (AP)—The breach in British opinion over sanctions against Italy widened today.

Winston Churchill, influential elder statesman, swung to the side of the anti-sanctions group, describing the result of imposition of penalties on Italy for its warfare on Ethiopia as "ludicrous if not tragic."

A mass meeting of 6,000 persons, under the auspices of the League of Nations Union, however, approved a resolution demanding continuance of sanctions until Italy concludes a peace satisfactory to the League.

Churchill, speaking at Plymouth, Essex, last night, said, "I am not prepared to support sanctions against Italy merely for the purpose of inflaming and weakening the Italian people."

The mass meeting which called for continuance of sanctions was addressed in London last night by C. R. Attlee, parliamentary leader of the Labor party, Sir Archibald Sinclair, leaders who pledged intensification of the sanctions campaign if necessary.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden was expected to go to Geneva for Monday's meeting of the League Council, however, with instructions to "co-operate with the other powers in the course they may propose."

Maguire said Pelton confessed both crimes.

The Pelosi girl's body was found Tuesday, assaulted and strangled. She was slain Sunday. The Knights girl was slain in nearby Fairfield seven months ago under similar circumstances.

Bachelor M.D.'s Like Blondes, Want Girls Who Can Eat, Talk

So Ontario Doctors Plan For Social Time at Annual Meeting

'NOT TOO TALL'

London, Ont., May 9—(CP)— Ontario's bachelor doctors are gentlemen. They prefer blondes, intelligent, not too tall, not too petite, they revealed today in answers to a questionnaire sent out by the Ontario Medical Association Program Committee arranging for the 93th annual meeting here May 26-28.

Former Prime Minister R. B. Bennett will be guest of honor at a swanky dinner dance May 27 and committee helpfully offered to arrange for partners for the visiting to meet all requirements.

doctors, and asked specifications. A survey of the answers showed the preference for blondes, but without the dark girls being neglected.

"The lady I want must be able to talk, but not be a bore nor uninteresting," wrote a Hamilton physician.

"I want a dinner partner who can talk about music," specified a Windsor delegate-to-be.

"I like a good looker, if like questions aren't a gag," wrote an skeptical general practitioner.

"A blind date's too dangerous," answered an Ottawa doctor.

Dr. C. C. Ross, general secretary, said the committee would do its best.

AUTHENTIC CALLS TOTAL FORTY-TWO

Five Arrests Result And Three Convictions Made

During the first 40 days of operation 42 authentic calls were recorded at police radio station CJR, Belleville Police, it was announced by Chief Constable Ponton today. A radio log must be kept by the operator of the station, according to instructions from the Canadian Radio Commission, and it is from this log that official calls are registered. Of course the above calls do not include the test calls made daily, when Police Car No. 1 (Motorcycle Patrol No. 2) are contacted for testing purposes.

Of the calls received during the first forty days of operation since inauguration on March 3rd last, there were five arrests made, resulting in three convictions. Since last year, the end of the thirty day period, however, other arrests have been made which are included in the period, Sergt. Boosh said.

Included in the authentic calls for police departments of other communities. Locally a radio call resulted in the speedy arrest of two hitch hikers in connection with a stolen bicycle and also a windowpeeper was apprehended; these three arrests resulted in successful court convictions. The remaining two calls that resulted in success were regarding two teen-aged boys who escaped from the local police station while being held for Toronto authorities. No charges were laid in these cases.

During the two months only two complaints of radio interference have been received, this trouble being rectified. Reports from larger centres show interference complaints at a much higher ratio.

Since the report was taken from the log book two other arrests have been made through the medium of the local radio; only last evening the police car was called out on call to investigate disturbances, the car being out on city patrol at the time.

CHILDREN'S BOOKS SUBJECT OF TALK

Miss K. Gallagher of Corby Public Library is Speaker

The regular monthly meeting of the King Georges Women's Auxiliary Club was held last evening in the Teachers' Room at the School. Mrs. D. W. Bankey presided and opened the meeting with the singing of "O Canada". Miss Smyth's room won the parents' attendance award.

Mrs. Russell Ashbury, delegate to the annual Convention of the Business and School Club Federation which convened in the Royal York Hotel on Easter week, gave a very splendid and comprehensive report on the convention. Grateful thanks were made to entertain the Picton Home and School Club at the June meeting.

Librarian is Speaker

The president introduced the guest-speaker, Miss Kathryn Gallagher, librarian of the boys' and girls' department at Corby Public Library, who gave a splendid address on children's books.

Miss Gallagher sketched the library as the universal continuation school. Nearly and high schoolers are inhaunted by old children and books are the happy medium of conveying these two natures. The speaker capably covered the historicity of literature in children's books and spoke of the profound influence of Hans Greusaway. Her designs of children's clothing are reflected in the dress of two centuries. Many of the early books in children's books were their first encounters with art and from these evolved a lasting appreciation and love of literature.

Encourage Children to Read

The speaker admonished parents to encourage the children to read them books were a legitimate means of economy.

On behalf of the Club Miss Mary Cook presented the speaker a vote of thanks to Miss Gallagher for her edifying address, which was seconded by Miss Irene Grills.

Mrs. W. H. Pinkie, president of the Picton Women's Home and School Club was called upon for a few remarks. Mrs. Pinkie thanked the Club for their invitation and wished them every success.

A pleasant innovation in the musical entertainment of the evening were the musical selections of the Hawaiian Serenaders. These were heartily encored. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

WESTERN BISHOPS

Church throughout Canada. Every parish in Canada is called upon to give a certain amount towards the maintenance of the Church as a whole in Canada, but owing to adverse conditions, many of the parishes have failed to raise their allotments and it is owing to this fact that the work of the Church in the West is handicapped as it is today. The Bishop earnestly appealed for a revival of giving in a generous way to the support of the missionary work of the Church as a whole.

The Church in Eastern Canada had been most generous in response to the call for Restoration Fund for the Diocese of Ruperts' Land, and this was most deeply appreciated by the church in the West. The regular and systematic giving to the missionary work within our own Dominion, was however, most urgently required and he (the Bishop) hoped that the members of the Church in Eastern Canada would rise to the aid of this great work of the church and to the support of the loyal and self-sacrificing clergy who are laboring in that vast field of the church's activities.

Friday afternoon the Bishops addressed the clergy of the Deaneries of Hastings and Prince Edward, Christ Church Parish Hall.

The Bishops of the Diocese in Western Canada are now visiting the church in the East as a result of an arrangement made at the meeting of the Board of the Provincial Synod which was held at Calgary last Fall.

POLICE BLOTTER

On two different occasions last evening local police were called to sections of the city where children were engaged in playing ball on the streets. Complaints were registered by nearby residents and when called, both cases the practice of ball-playing on local streets is deprecated. Motorists are frequently confronted with the sudden appearance of a group of children engaged in a ball game. This hazardous situation looms before car drivers and necessitates a make corner turns and find their vehicles in the midst of a group of children before the situation can be realized.

While patrolling local streets early last evening in his police car, P. C. Thomson received a call to an apartment at the upper end of Front Street. Investigation revealed a family quarrel in progress. The trouble was amicably settled upon the arrival of the officer.

While on duty later in the evening P.C. Evans arrested a transient, who gave his name as Roy Wilson, no address. Wilson was taken into custody on a charge of intoxication. The attention of the officer was drawn to Wilson when he was seen pan-handling on Front Street by the police car. The accused man appeared before Magistrate Baker this morning and was remanded in custody until Monday.

An even dozen transients received lodgings at the police station last night.

Today Thomas Thorne, local dog catcher, informed the police department he had already exterminated 40 dogs, all of which had been found wandering about minus the customary dog tag. "In some of the cases I successfully contacted the owners of the dogs, but these owners refused to purchase dog licenses, which made it necessary to destroy them," commented Mr. Thorne. Less than 220 dog licenses have been sold in Belleville thus far this season, this being one-half of the total number purchased in 1935.

FISHERMEN OPINE CATCHES WILL BE GOOD

The coming summer will be one marked by plenty of bass and good fishing in the Bay of Quinte and surrounding waters, in the opinion of commercial fishermen here, this city. Not in years have bass been in such numbers as they are this year for spawning and propagating, it was reported.

A year of high water, this season bass shoals, which lay dry and bare last year above the water are now covered with sufficient depth to make spawning easy and certain. The same depth of water has also covered the marshes, creating easy feeding conditions for the fish, and shelter for the young. "Bass spawn above the water and better fishing this year and next year than we have had for a long time," commented one well known fisherman.

Mercury Climbs to 81.3 Deg. Youths Bathe at Victoria Park

First Family Picnic is Held on Warmest Day of 1936

1930 RECORD STANDS

A searing heat wave which for the first time this season burned asphalt pavements soft in the city and threatened tender crops in moisture soaked fields in the district gave the section its first taste of mid-August weather on Friday. Only the saving grace of cool west winds during the day brought relief from a hot sun which boosted temperatures to a high point of 81.3 during the afternoon. It was one of the earliest, hottest May days on record for Belleville, the high of 1930 temperature reached 86, and on May 4, 1934 it was 84. These are the warmest days on record in recent years.

Escaping the heat, dozens of youths donned bathing suits and spent the afternoon in the water of the bathing beach at Victoria Park. The careful test of the water with a thermometer showed it to be at almost summer temperatures, averaging 68 degrees. As if to bring a further illusion of summer to the weather, several children were invaded the park and spread a lunch on the soft grass where they began to picnic.

Ice Cream in Demand

Ice cream and soft drink counters reported the first of the season's business, with more customers than could be conveniently handled owing to the inadequate facilities. Confectionery shops and departmental stores, in the hopes that the warm spell would continue lastly re-decorated windows with more summery attire. But straw hats were not seen in plenty, on the city's main thoroughfares. Three were particularly frequented on Friday afternoon, "in the length of one block, Dundas Street between Bridge and Front, I had beaten the warm weather to the "gun", one self conscious individual stalked along the city of the mass section, completely attired in a summery Palm Beach suit.

Tree branches on residential streets, already noticeably budded, took on a greenish tinge and leafing out almost visibly owing to the sudden heat and the moisture which fell on Thursday. But in the rural sections fear was expressed that the tender shoots of young trees and other fall grains would be "cooked" by the blistering sun which was shining on the soaked soil.

Sunbeams Shaded

In the city the trees were shaded against the direct rays of the sun and the sunbeams filtered through, threatened to wilt growing stuff within, while both green and dry lawns were given the usual welcome breezes.

Merchants along Front Street again adopted the old, time-honored expedient of sprinkling floors within and sidewalks without, to bring a measure of comfort to customers. Although the effect of the prodigious consumption of extra water was reported at the city pumping station during the hours of the hot day, by mid afternoon consumption had fallen to its normal rate.

The hottest week wave again threatened droughts of cool lakes and summer cottages, and by evening the begin of citizens in cars, heading for quieter resorts and shaded groves, and haven't been able to get a chance to change them."

Ice men of the city reported the usual rush of orders, while coal salesmen quietly thumbed over their accounts of a good season's business, now believed behind.

A.J. Whalen is Named Assistant Inspector

The many friends of Mr. A. J. (Judd) Whalen, who was for a number of years superintendent of local branches of the Standard Bank of Canada and later the Bank of Commerce, will be delighted to hear of his recent appointment as Assistant Inspector of the latter institution. Mr. Whalen went from Belleville to manage the Bowmanville Branch of the Bank of Commerce and made such a good job of it that he has now received further recognition. His new appointment will involve living in Toronto and it is his intention to move his family to Toronto during the present month.

FOOTBRIDGE READY TO OPEN MAY 24TH

With the steel work now all assembled and placed, construction on the new foot bridge is expected to proceed more rapidly, according to Walter Patterson, president of the Patterson Construction Company of Belleville, contractors awarded the job this city, contracting for the erection of the bridge. The old wooden one washed down by the spring's flood.

"Although we can't name the exact date, the bridge should be ready for traffic within the next two weeks, that is unless we run into conditions that might hold us up. I guess we're safe in saying by Saturday, May 23, it will be opened by May 24, the date first mentioned," stated Mr. Patterson.

The HEALTH SHOE for summer

WILL REMODEL LARGE BLOCK

Extensive Alterations And Improvements Planned in Business Block

Belleville's growing time, interrupted for a time, by unfavorable business conditions of an unfavorable nature, has been renewed—there are signs everywhere of a brisk building era. Carpenters, bricklayers, painters and builders in every department of the building trades are looking forward to a very general recovery in the time and more so in busy summer for Belleville. One of the building projects under way at present is the remodelling of the block which houses the Chamber of Commerce and the insurance and brokerage business of Jamieson Bros., together with the former business premises of National Grocery, the entire block being owned by Jamieson Bros.

Improvements to the extent of several thousand dollars are under way. Contracts for the work have been passed by Mr. Bone to the Ontario Government for a beer distribution warehouse and considerable alterations have been made to accommodate the new business facilities for rapid delivery, including a handsome entrance from Front street.

The upper floor of the premises outside of offices are being arranged with hardwood floors, large windows and the very latest in everything. Part of the upper flat has already been rented and will be occupied by a well known business firm when completed.

Other alterations are under way in the north section, occupied by the Jamieson Bros.' insurance and brokerage business.

A central heating system for the entire structure is being installed, the very latest in heating, with hot water and steam being utilized. A brick extension has been erected at the rear and a large boiler installed of the latest type, capable of driving the entire heating system.

Contractors for heating are John Lewis Company, with M. R. Doyle in charge.

William Harris is carrying out the contract for the carpenter, painting, etc., with an efficient staff.

Obituary

JOSEPH H. FREEMAN

Announcement of the very sudden death of Joseph Henry Freeman, which occurred at the family residence, 96 Cedar Street, Friday afternoon, was a great shock to his many friends here and throughout Belleville and elsewhere in this district. Deceased was well known in connection with his work in the operating department of the Consumers' Gas Company, Toronto. Friday noon he returned home from Toronto apparently in his usual health and engaged in work for the Hydro and Telephone. Before leaving for work in the afternoon while sitting on his verandah he was stricken. Medical aid was summoned but he passed away just as the physician arrived at the house.

The late Mr. Freeman was born in Belleville, the son of Henry and the late Mr. and Mrs. William John Freeman. All his life was passed in this city and by all who knew him he was highly esteemed. In his younger days he was a faithful member of St. Michael's Church.

Besides his wife, deceased leaves to mourn his loss and to whom the sympathy of many friends will be extended are his wife, formerly Miss Annie La Palm; one son, Mr. Vincent Freeman of the Belle Theatre staff; two grandaughters, Ann and Verna Freeman of Belleville; one sister, Mrs. John Barrett of Belleville and one brother, Mr. James V. Freeman, of Belleville.

The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this paper.

WM. J. STEWART GIVES VIEWS ON SCHOOL QUESTION

had gained in being returned again and again to the office of chief magistrate of the City of Toronto. "This is Dad's second term, and the worth and ability of our guest," it was added.

Mr.-Mayor Stewart referred to his previous visits to Belleville on several occasions, and expressed his appreciation for the cordial reception that he had always received. The Hon. Earl Rowe, who had addressed a previous gathering in the same hall some few months ago, described by the speaker as "an able and fine fellow."

Declaring himself now politically unemployed, ex-Mayor Stewart in a brief aside discussed some of the earlier life in the City of Toronto, where he was born, and had made his own way since the age of twelve. His university had been one of public life. It was added by the

Describing the Liberal Party as one which has always been noted for its policy of laissez-faire, and which would adopt destructionist tactics, when in office, and a party noted for its extreme "radicalism", the speaker contrasted the attitude with the sane and more common sense government, offered by the Conservative party.

"I don't believe in oppositional policies. If the Liberals would only stand as they should stand—common people—then the Liberals would not remain in power, they would not be in a position to dictate these policies, which policies, when they are carried out only after lengthy and public debates, and publicity given in public meetings, are only imposed to a low degree.

Just Surrendered

"The Liberals didn't defeat us, rather we surrendered, that the people or this Province are only awaiting the word of command before they take over the reins of power and join us. Just now thousands of Liberals are ranged and willing to fight shoulder to shoulder with us against the common enemy, Communism through-out the country are also ready and willing for us to again take over the reins of government.

Bills were passed in the House at the last session which were of extremely foreign nature to even the Liberals, who voted on and passed them, described by speaker, "Some of if they didn't know then what they were, they will later on," it was added significantly.

"It's not enough for us to get up on platforms and belittle the present government, or condemn it; it is not understandeasonable enough. Condemn right now is not enough. Hepburn is a pestilence. He is immune to the Ottawa. He is not to be given or recognize. The government is one that could be the people's friend and for the people, and when it fails it can be removed by the people," (applause).

Youth Problem Urgent

In tackling the question of present day youth, ex-Mayor Stewart referred to the thousands of out of-work university and college graduates, that left school each spring, looking vainly for any kind of work to do. That was only one of the matters, that demanded attention.

"Something's got to be done for this rising generation. We've got now try to do our little bit in government in the province of Ontario for here. Yet, what concerted action or action of any kind has been taken for this? Years lost in the grooves; things are getting out of control. The great problem of government is mounting and assuming formidable proportions. We can't face anywhere back to prosperity. The answer lies in development. Like in our gold fields and mineral country of the north. Instead of saying "Go back to the land," we should say go north, young man; and mines and mines and more mines, that gold and silver in sufficient quantities to make good the national debt, increase the country's assets and make her independent. We can do it, and we can reach it.

The problem for the older people put out of employment, depending upon municipal charities could also be lightened by the establishment of farms, which would be managed and directed by the government, and upon which families could be made self sustaining, declared Mr. Stewart.

Mortgaged Future Claims

Canada, he declared, in turning briefly to the financial aspect of the country, has mortgaged much of the future. "In 1929 we spent money we hadn't earned, buying things we didn't need to impress people we didn't like. All that's gone now and we have repudiation. We're beginning to run a sixteen cylinder auto with a four cylinder unit and steadily the debt has been increasing. One manner in which municipalities could be assisted in this matter of finances would be the establishment of non partisan loan boards, which would investigate the need for loans applied for, merely as a protection for the investor.

The time must come when the municipalities of the province, where Hydro is owned will be represented on the Ontario Hydro Board, challenged Mr. Stewart, describing this move as a necessary one in which some two hundred and eighty-five municipalities would be represented for the common good. "At the present time we in Ontario are held at arm's length in the control of our own property. Why wasn't the whole story of Hydro contracts told to the whole House? Were contracts here at times purchased cheaper than they were," he questioned.

"On our trust Government sales promotion in this matter of the power question, or do you want government control?" asked the speaker. Mayor is referring briefly to this question. "What the people of Ontario should have is a Hydro that is run by trust, a continuance of the present policy in regard to power."

Warning to his subject Mr. Stewart referred to the Separate School bill recently passed in the House by the Provincial Government.

In opening the meeting, Chairman Harry Rollins, president of the local organization, thanked his supporters for the excellent turnout.

"I can only hope that our numbers will continue to grow until even these club rooms will be too small to hold us," he added.

Mr. J. F. Hill, M.P.P., for East Hastings also extended his congratulations to the club and to Frederick Rollins.

J. F. HILL, M.P.P.

Conservatives, declared Mr. Hill, must now are adding to their number all the time. "We have doubled the ranks at the last election are now returning to the fold, it was said. "All those who left us too hard on them. They were lured away by false and glowing promises that could not be kept. Promises to be kept. Now they, as well as very many Liberals, are ready to come to the fold," declared Mr. Hill.

Speaking briefly on the Provincial Government was in the happy position of having an excellent financial surplus, and declared the province was getting out of debt. Taxes were being reduced, expenses, at least in the form of pay roll cuts, were being cut, he charged by Mr. Hill, enumerating the revenue from tourists, the gas tax, motor licenses, and other revenues in support.

Mr. A. R. Gilbert was described by Mr. Hill as a man who, previous to election, offered himself as a candidate, and declared he considered himself willing to work for nothing for the constituency.

"Yet, since he has been in he has been drawing $75.00 a day over and above his honorarium from the T. N. and O. Railway, he is also on the Liquor Board, which is up to $4,000 a year," claimed the speaker.

Referring to the record of the Ontario House when in session, Mr. Hill observed that "you might as well be in the Marconi Building around that place."

Mr. Hill-Hepburn gat really he'd let us go home. He'd wait until the last minute and then bring in some important bill and rush them through, even though his own followers didn't understand them.

The Conservative party has never been guilty nor could it be accused of "log rolling" or political coercion, declared the speaker. Rather, he claimed, the shoe was on the other foot. "We were confident in the Ontario Hydro Separate School Bill came up that even the thinking Liberals would not be stampeded or be rubber stamps and signing this without question, and that is why no more than two Liberals voted in the matter. However, it was pushed through before we really could say anything about it, and it is the duty of the work gerrymandering this Government has done, and in the end one, will do all I can in the future to protect the interests of the public of Canada, in Ontario," pledged Mr. Hill.

Plea For Organization

A plea to organize to keep working and to leave nothing undone in preparation for a coming election was voiced by Mr. Hill. "Because we don't like it is no excuse. Important and far reaching elections this province has ever seen," he declared.

During the evening, assisted by Mrs. Fred Rollins, a delightful musical selections were rendered by Mr. Roderick Mitchell, who also took part in community singing led by Mr. Jack Andrews.

A vote of thanks for his excellent address was tendered ex-Mayor Stewart by Mr. C. A. Payne, K.C., this order of things is changed, that all the efforts of those who assisted in the entertainment program. The vote was ably seconded by Mrs. Harry Rollins.

A note of regret at his inability to attend owing to the death of his brother-in-law, Mr. Gordon Mayor Harry Hill, while a second note of thanks to Mr. W. Fenton also received.

61 HOURS AND 53 MINUTES

It was sighted over New York at 8 a.m., just as dawn was lighting the sky, Thousands of early risers cheered, and also the ship's whistles.

After cruising over Manhattan for 12 minutes, the 900-foot ship circled south directly for Lakehurst.

The red and black of a large Nazi flag-swastika was visible on the vertical fin aft.

A dozen or more airplanes circled the above. As the nose of the ship pain dipped for the ground, the moon was still in the sky and a brilliant red sun was just coming up on the eastern horizon.

Touched Soil at 6.26 E.D.T.

At 6:18 a.m. the Hindenburg for the first time touched soil in the United States—on the first of its 11 scheduled round trip commercial voyages from Germany during the summer.

A landing crew of trained sailors from the United States navy, aided by about 50 civilians, brought the ship safely to land. The civilians were pressed into service because there have been grave doubts that the Dix were not on hand, when she arrived.

The Hindenburg circled over the air station before it lowered to the earth, dumping 2,000 gallons and threw out its ropes. The speed was no greater than a walk as it slowly turned about the field it looked as if it were standing still. With all its 16 motors roaring, it came close to the ground men, the Hindenburg's nose was made fast to the mobile mooring mast at 6:23 a.m.

The ship, carrying 21 passengers and a crew of 61, then moved forward into the hangar.

To make room for the Hindenburg naval officials removed from the hangar last night the old naval dirigible Los Angeles, veteran of 10 years' service. It was flown to Camden, Ohio, where it will be dismantled.

Landing Difficult

The landing was more difficult than had been expected, although with the adequate preparations, it was still handled with ease.

Just before the Hindenburg reached the Lakehurst field, the wind veered from northwest to southeast, necessitating expert maneuvering to land the ship.

As soon as the ship was made fast to the mooring mast, Dr. Hugo Eckener, the famous dirigible designer, leaned out of the control cabin, the famous goatee and skullcap fame and he waved a greeting to the throng of 4,000 people.

As soon as the ship was made fast to the mooring mast customs and immigration officers lost as if it were a big liner at quarantine in New York Bay, and a hasty check was made the routine inspection.

A special customs officer was on hand to care for the largest mail load ever transported by air across the North Atlantic Ocean.

Loaves on Mondays

Next Monday midnight the Hindenburg will leave for Friedrichshafen, again with a full complement of passengers. Although the speed of the Hindenburg in the last few hours over the Atlantic was stepped considerably by adverse winds, the average speed for the trip was 78 miles per hour. The maximum speed attained on the voyage was 85 miles per hour.

The Hindenburg was first sighted coming up Jamaica Bay, marked by the lightship. Its huge hulk was easily distinguished.

The din of the welcome awakened many residents who hurriedly popped their heads out of their apartment house windows to catch a glimpse as it cruised over the Narrows, at the lower up of Manhattan Island and headed north over the city.

Fellow Passengers

Broadway was the course which guided the zeppelin on its first trip over Manhattan. At the Battery, where many passengers disembarked, the Hindenburg circled over Central Park to 110th Street.

After circling over the city the Hindenburg headed southward over the Jersey Coast, and cut inland to Lakehurst. After it was moored at the naval base, it took on a payload and two minutes before the zeppelin was safely berthed in the hangar.

EXPENDITURES FOR QUEBEC OPPOSED

One Item of $1,694,000 For Harbor Work Refused

OTTAWA, May 9.—(CP)—Large expenditures on harbor and river improvements, particularly in the Province of Quebec, drew opposition in the House of Commons last night and Conservative Leader Bennett urged the government to reconsider whether it was "fair to Canada at this time" to lay out money in this way.

Hon. J. A. Cardin, Minister of Public Works, said the money was to go for useful works and would provide employment. It was true some of the expenditure might be referred but if no more money would be required for relief and the like.

The Conservatives, however, refused to allow the item of $1,694,000 for harbor and river work in Quebec in the special supplementary estimates to pass and Mr. Bennett urged Mr. Cardin to reconsider the proposal of the project over the week-end.

The House made good progress in disposal of the special supplementaries, which contain the outlays proposed for relief, rural mail and railway deficits. The large item of $20,000,000 for the railway deficit, Canadian National Railways was one of the principal items.

Chief complaints from the Opposition was that the arrangement of the supplementaries was "piecemeal."

Mr. Hugh Plaxton, former Minister of Public Works, said large sums were appropriated last year under the Public Works Construction Act were being revoted with a view to giving the impression that the government was spending a lot to provide employment, when in fact the money was to pay for work, which, he claimed, in the main would be done in the next month or so.

Mr. Bennett said the special supplementaries were being padded in the main because large items in the main estimates by keeping the total down. Thus, items such as repair of buildings and other necessary or routine items were not included but treated as special expenditures, when they should have been in the main estimates.

Hon. Harold Kelley, Liberal member for West Westminster, withdrew his Bill to prohibit pony races on fishing in the south of the Fraser River on an undertaking from Hon. J. E. Michaud, Liberal, Labrieville, to study the matter and consider revision in departmental regulations.

CAMILLIEN HOUDE PUTS FORTH CURE

Return to Rural Life Best For Present Day Ills

Sudbury, Ont., May 9—(CP)—National Leader Houde, in a rural life, replacement of women in industry by men and suggestion of relief were put forward here last night by Mayor Camillien Houde of Montreal as cures for present day ills.

Speaking to the Northern Ontario Municipal Convention, the Montreal Mayor said Canada was trying to do the impossible. "We have a population of 10,000,000 persons," he said. "We don't want immigration and yet we have a public debt of $3,000,000,000 or $300 per head of person. We cannot pay 100 cents on the $1.00 we owe to foreign people and we don't want immigrants."

Mr. Houde addressed the Convention banquet last night after speeches by Mayor J. Albert Smith of Kitchener, Dr. J. R. Hurdman, M.L.A., and Hon. Charles Conway.

"We all know that things are changes coming, but we don't know what they are," Mr. Houde said. "We don't know whether the world will be to the left or to the right. We don't know what way the changes until we know, what they are."

Montreal's relief problem seemed to be improving, he said. There were 40,000 heads of families on relief, involving 200,000 persons. "In 1934 there were 130,000 persons," he said.

Thirty years ago the population of Montreal was 250,000 and today it was 1,250,000. Thirty years ago it was 62 per cent rural and today it was 38 per cent. urban. What was needed was a well-organized, national back-to-the land movement.

FAMOUS MILLAIS SELLS AT $162

Paintings of Artist Fail to Attract Large Bids

(By Thomas T. Champlop)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, May 9.—(AP)—A famous Millais painting, "The Picture of Health", one of the artist's three pictures at the Royal Academy in 1874, has realized only 31 guineas ($162) at Christie's auction rooms here. It was a little girl (the artist's daughter, Alice), with a gigantic blue bow in her golden hair. She was one of Millais' great academy successes.

Once fabulous prices were paid for works by the artist, but today a far lower valuation is placed upon them. For instance, Millais' other picture "Peacemaker," which sold 30 years ago for £3,000, realized only £900 a fortnight ago.

Millais was one of five painters who lived to be knighted and died as £5,000 for their pictures. One of these masters at a time, he said, "I suppose I am too poor to buy my own pictures".

TRIPLETS AT FORT WILLIAM

Fort William, May 9—Triplets—all boys—made their appearance at the General Hospital here today. The mother, Mrs. Albert Morrow, and two of the babies were reported well. One child was dead.

Weights of the two babies were announced by Dr. R. A. Chisholm as 6 pounds 10 ounces and 6 pounds 7 ounces respectively. The third child was slightly smaller.

Mrs. Morrow and her husband, residents of West Murrillo, already have three other children, George, four years old, born since Mr. Birth of triplets is the first case on record in this district, medical men state.

Girl Missing 28 Years Reported As Alive

Winnipeg, May 9.—Search for Olive Durpaw, who disappeared from a train journey between Fort William to Kenora, Ont., 28 years ago is under way again. Royal Canadian Mounted Police have officials announce receipt of a letter from an Alberta farmer who claimed the girl, who now would be a woman of 36, was alive.

Olive was her sister, Sybil, attested school at St. Pierre, near Lakehead home on June 18, 1908, ever, they had resumed the search.

VICTOR EMMANUEL AS EMPEROR

King Victor Emmanuel of Italy is today to be proclaimed Emperor of Ethiopia. Students who greeted the Italian King from the street before the Quirinal Palace in Rome on the fall of Addis Ababa as "Imperatore" were not far wrong.

That means empire, though Ethiopia is far less important than the land of which he is now king.

The new title is based on the Latin words "imperium" and "imperator" which came into real prominence in the days of the Emperor Augustus in ancient Rome and which have given the words 'emperor' and "empire" world recognition in many languages ever since, even in this age to the ruler of Japan, just as the name of the man Caesar who has given the fillip to all the modern Italian display of imperialism, gave the name which finally became the titles of Kaiser and Czar.

The modern Italians will feel a much more important people than they did without an empire.

THE LITTLE NATIONS

Italy unless it is blinded by the glory of the nation's campaign in Ethiopia against nations whose only guards were wild rugged mountains, unfordable streams, heat, cold and rainfall, knows what the little nations are thinking in their hearts just now. But if the Italians know only by reason it is probably not realized by them in such a way as to make them feel with the small nations in their anxiety.

To these little nations, the only thought is, "What will save us from aggression whenever it wishes to show its head?"

At the moment it looks as if the little folks among the nations must get together to protect themselves. These are the nations which gave unstintedly of their support to the League and saw it let Ethiopia down. Hearts are sad in the little nations, sad because their ideals which they thought would guarantee them protection, against aggression and for peace, really may not count at all.

What will the little nations now do? What will the Great Powers do? What will Italy do?

GIRDLE EARTH AT EQUATOR

Intrepid Amy Mollison makes a new record, cutting the record which had fallen to Tommy Johnson. Her time was over eleven hours faster than his from London to Cape Town.

Now her husband James Mollison says that they will make an equator trip. That will seem difficult to most persons, even to aviators for no one has ever attempted it before. It will take them over vast stretches of ocean. Indeed their trip will be largely over water.

The record of James and Amy Mollison is however guarantee that they will make a bona fide attempt to do the trip. "We should not attempt it, if we did not think we could do it", Mollison remarks.

Aviators find new voyages of discovery to make, opening up new world routes.

WHEN THEY MARRY

The preferred marrying age for men in Ontario according to the 1926 census is 24 years with 23, 25, 26, and then 22 years in this order. But the favorite age for brides is 21, with 20 and 19 next.

The difference of three years in the popular age is 'ideal' and has been for ages. It follows the maxim of the poet "Let still the woman take an elder than herself. To grows she to him."

The marriage age for young men does seem about normal, but really it seems lower than might be expected in view of the financial position in which many are placed. Many persons have said the young folk to see that it is love that matters, not wealth and hence they marry in the hope and faith that love will find a way and the belief that delay is a mistake.

But it even looks as if the depression has hastened some marriages for there are young men marrying under 18, no less than 39 of them though this is a small number considering the total of the 25,874 total of men who become benedicts in that year. Girls as usual went to the altar or minister's house, 372 of them at the age of 16 and 106 below 16 years. The discrepancy in figures for men and girls is natural in the light of the financial obligations which the man assumes.

In the upper brackets of marriage ages there were still a large number who acquire mates. There were 96 men between seventy and seventy-four years of age who become benedicts, these besides being largely in the upper years, though one man married a woman of 24, and two others, girls of 32 and 33.

In this same age bracket 70-74 there were 36 brides.

Six men eighty or over married two women in the 85-89 class and four in the 75-79 bracket. There were seven marriages of women eighty and over.

SPRING

There's something about the springtime
Somehow seems to touch the soul
Balmy breezes from the southland
Streaks of green across the knoll,
Yonder crow that signals loudly
From his perch on tallest pine
Makes you stop and wonder sometimes
Of the things that are divine.

Robins singing in the treetops
Gladly welcome back the spring
From the lowlands come the echo
Vibrant notes that loudly ring.
Violets over on the hillside
Lilies robed by hands divine
Waters trickling over ledges
Life in every tree and vine.

Makes me thing of over yonder
Where the springtime e'er abides
Flowers bloom in rare profusion
Over Jordan's swelling tide
Naught of care can e'er assail us
Birds sing there their sweetest lay
Where the springtime ever lingers
Through the years of endless day.

YANKEES VISITING CANADA HAVE HAD THE PRIVILEGE for some time of taking back their country one hundred dollars worth of Canadian goods without paying duty. Now the same privilege has been extended Canadians visiting the United States. One hundred dollars the Yankee goods can be purchased and brought back, with certain limitations. Only certain specified quantities of cigarettes, tobacco, wine or liquor included in the one hundred dollars worth of goods exempt from duty. The Canadian must spend at least forty-eight hours in the United States to be eligible for the concession and can use the privilege only four times a year.

INGENIOUS LOTTERY RACKET HAS BEEN UNCOVERED IN NEW YORK CITY. Tickets and all the paraphernalia have been seized in connection with a lottery racket called the Post Graduate Hospital Sweepstakes of Montreal. There is no such institution, and the astute promoters of the fake lottery have picked their own winners, and to make sure that the winners would collect, the names were taken from tombstones in New England, and the winners had to be dead long enough to preclude any comeback.

PROSPERITY IS RETURNING TO NORTHERN ONTARIO where the mines and the bush have hitherto provided most of the work for the people. But while the mines have kept up wonderfully and continued to pour their golden wealth in ever-increasing quantities, but bush work for some years has been more at a standstill. Saw mills, which are numerous in the north country, have been idle because of the lack of demand for lumber, and this condition has continued to curtail employment, for to many in Northern Ontario the bush in winter, the drive in spring, and the sawmill in summer were depended upon to provide the living livelihood. Bush work was better last winter and the lumber mills are awaking to life again. Sawmill at Cache Bay of the George Gordon Lumber Co. started operation last Saturday with 180 men who will be kept busy during the summer months on a cut of 20,000,000 board feet of lumber. More than 600 men were employed by this company on bush operations during the winter and the drive is now descending the Sturgeon and Temagami rivers. Seventy-five per cent of the lumber cut will be for domestic use, the balance for export. All of the sawmill employees are residents of Cache Bay.

1936 Success Story

He had tried hard several times but failed. There had always been some excuse— his youth, appearance, financial status. This time he was determined. There would be no more nonsense.

Brushing he elbowed his way through dozens of applicants, past private desks, directly into the office of the chief executive.

"Now, look here—" he began. He spoke forcefully, brushing aside all protests.

Ten minutes later, smiling scornfully at the waiting mob, he marched out. At last he was on relief.

Parliament Hill Hears

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Every year thousands of tourists from all parts of Canada, the United States and elsewhere visit the Parliament Buildings. They flock to the great Centre Block with its Peace Tower and its stately library. They are conducted through the buildings by guides shown the Commons Chamber and the Senate and the Memorial Chamber. Most of them want to see the carillon also, and view the environs of Ottawa from the Gallery which runs around the big clock.

M. F. Gonder, Mining engineer of the department of mines, has collected a wealth of interesting facts about the stones and other materials of which the buildings are constructed. He gives an illustrated lecture on the subject which draws crowded audiences. The following information is largely drawn from some notes Mr. Gonder was kind enough to let me have.

• • • • •

The original buildings of which only the Library is left were erected in 1859-66 at a cost of over $5,000,000 and won the praise of Anthony Trollope, who said: "I know no modern Gothic piece of its kind or less sullied with fictitious ornament. I know no site for such a set of buildings as happy as regards both beauty and grandeur."

In the construction of the new buildings which began in 1916, after the disastrous fire of February 3rd, 1916, four varieties of building stone and 38 varieties of marble and decorative stone are used. Some of these are from Canadian quarries; others were selected from world famous quarries in other lands.

The white marble cornerstone of the original buildings was laid on September 1, 1860, by King Edward the Seventh, then Prince of Wales. It was recovered, undamaged, after the fire, and was raised in the present building by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught on September 1st, 1916. The cornerstone of the Peace Tower was laid by the present King (then Prince of Wales) on September 1st, 1918.

• • • • •

The main material of the walls and tower is sandstone, which comes from three widely separated quarries. The cream-colored, rough-surfaced stone forming what is called the 'field' of the building is Nepean sandstone obtained close to Ottawa. The smoothly finished grey sandstone around the doors and windows comes from Wallace, Cumberland county, Nova Scotia; part from Cleveland, Ohio.

The limestone for the carving presents a profusion of notable and decorative stone which harmonizes in a great variety of golden buff, grey, rose and green, set off by narrow bands of black marble.

The walls and pillars of the entrance hall — The Hall of Fame — as well as the central supporting column, are of polished Tyndall lapsedry limestone from Tyndall, near Winnipeg. This beautiful limestone with its interesting fossil devil fish and corals is also used on the walls of the main corridors, the Commons Chamber, the entrance halls to the Commons and Commons Chambers, and back of the Throne in the Senate," says Mr. Gondge in his notes.

Mainland marble from grey marble obtained from Pittsburg, Quebec, forms the floors of corridors, entrance halls and stairs. A dark green border on the floor of Hall of Fame is Verde Antique marble from Roxbury, Vermont.

Every tourist has pointed out to him the pillar that symbolizes Canada. This has a most remarkable history, being made from a single block of Tiree. Arcade columns in the Senate entrance hall and in the Senate Chamber are Rose Persona marble from Quebec. Buff Indiana limestone forms the carved walls of the Senate chamber.

• • • • •

The railway committee room — which is rapidly acquiring a history of its own, contains some notable stone, Mr. Goudge says. 'The golden Tavernelle marble from the Pyrenees Mountains, Italy, is the stone of which has been quarried since the Roman domination of Britain. This stone is found in English architecture, having been used in many of the great cathedrals of England as well as in Westminster Abbey, Buckingham Palace and other notable buildings.

• • • • •

"Rose Tavernelle, a cream-and-rose colored marble from Italy, forms the balustrade of the Senate gallery and also takes the place of wood over the radiators in the Corridors," Mr. Goudge explains. "Elsewhere on the ground floor are found the marbles of snowy Ontario, black and Gold, and yellow Sienna marbles from the famed quarries of Italy."

On the upper floors the corridor walls and floor borders are of Light Cloud and Dark Cloud marble from Bancroft, Ontario. These particular marbles represent the oldest known rocks of the world."

"A beautiful red-veined marble from the French Pyrenees is used for the columns and pilasters at the entrance to the parliamentary restaurant. Deposits of this marble, known as Great Antique de Pyrenees, were discovered and quarried by the Romans, but since the fall of the Roman empire the location of the quarries remained unknown until rediscovered in the 18th century they were rediscovered and operated once more."

Mr. Goudge's researches enrich the associations of the buildings immensely. Of the Memorial Chamber, which contains the Books of Remembrance in which is recorded the name of every Canadian who gave his life in the war."

ROME IN FRENZY AS VICTORY IS ANNOUNCED

Mussolini made his dramatic announcement to hundreds of thousands of cheering Fascists gathered at the Joined Piazza Venezia in Rome. It Duce is seen from the little balcony at RIGHT.

Are Trout Color Blind? Anglers Bitterly Argue

'Sure, Fish Can Tell Colors' Says 'One; 'Tush', Another

EXPERTS' VIEWS-

Are trout color blind? Can fish distinguish between colors?

That's the latest discussion jarring the ranks of local anglers and contested almost bitterly by adherents of rod and line.

"Sure fish can see, can distinguish good color. What do you think we carry all these colored flies around with us for if they don't. How do you think they can tell the certain insects which are more to their liking if they can't tell the difference in color," strenuously argue devotees of the fly rod.

"Tush, Tush, Bosh" or words to that effect, return the stiff fisherman. "There's as soon have a nice juicy gobble of worms any day as those fancy flies of yours. Color doesn't mean anything there."

For between the fly fisherman and the patient and less colorful fishermen of the earthworm specie there has existed that fine lack of distinction and caste since the first fly man donned his waders and strolled the water for the angler on the banks. And never have their discussions been argued in a successful finish at meetings which have been held since time immemorial.

According to the printed statements of experts of the piscatorial science, fish are color blind notwithstanding. Color makes no difference to a fish. To a fish everything appears grey. He's as soon bite on a bunch of red feathers as he would on a bunch of black ones". It has repeatedly been asserted.

"Try that on a trout stream. Get a good stream where the trout are rising to one particular fly. Try a bunch of black feathers when the flies they are feeding on are gray or whitish ones." Invite the local fishermen to the home many fish you'll get if you don't change your fly. Why?" again they ask, "do we fill the bands of our old fishing hats with all sorts of flies if those of one color will do."

To all of which there seems to be no answer.

Well known as one of the older and more experienced fishermen and taxidermists of the city, Mr. Ralph Weese pondered the question but briefly.

"Well, if they couldn't tell the difference between color, a lot of paint and colored feathers have been wasted. In my opinion they do see, and see well. You fish with one fly or a certain color and have no luck. You change that to another color, and first cast of the line you strike. Find out what color the flies of the certain stream you are on are and the trout prefer and you have a fair chance of getting your fish."

Which may or may not prove that fish can tell black from white.

Mother's Day

14th Annual Letter by W. H. Maybee

Of all the things God ever made,
I think these are the best:
Dear arms in which we first were laid,
That held us first in rest;
Dear feet that tire not day or night
While waiting, duty's way;
Dear eyes with dauntless love alight
For us through every day;
Dear lips that are so quick to droop
When we are hurt or sad,
And feel as quick with smiles to loop
Our woes
Wherever we are glad:
Dear hearts and souls which gave us birth,
For mothers, God's best gift to earth.

—By Ethel Lee Grossman.

Maternal Affection is the grace of humanity and the bond of the creature; it is that by which we are all guarded when we most require protection. The mother is the martyr in many instances, yet the last to admit it, and to make merit of her unselfish sacrifice is but to seek denial. Where you find good mothers you will find a good man-hood and hence a good nation, people or commonwealth of men. A good nation is a good motive in every life a motive that puts value into conduct and makes existence worth while. Well, the renown artist, said of a mother: "That kiss made me a painter."

Therefore, singer
Happy be with such a mother,
Faith in womankind
Beats in his blood, and trust in all things high.
Comes easy to him, and, though he trip and fall
He shall not blind his soul with clay.

We cannot explain the mysteries of motherhood, but we can experience them in our happier and holier moments, and happy indeed is the man who can feel the sacred affection within him, as descended through or inherited by the beautiful medium of a generous parent. The man who has no affection for his mother can be but little fit or specially suited for anything exalting; it is the first instinctive, moral or spiritual call upon his nature. A good mother may be dressed in rags, but her truest garment is her children, as to her the richest of God-treasures is her babe, whatever her character, her heart, yea her very life, while in them she commands their most faithful service and supreme sacrifice.

The word "Mother" is the most beautiful in our language, so full of the kindliest thoughts, the choicest words of memory. Th one of us the hand that led is the hand that fed us, and the voice that soothed is the voice that warned.

Give up mother-love and we will stand as a nation whatever comes or passes over our heads. The wisest men have almost invariably had the greatest mothers, and the noblest people have ever honored their mothers with the highest respect. And it is a duty and joy to the child to carry out, but for the mother companionship with the mother's eye enters the soul of her child and imparts a power of understood by anything purely intellectual or moral. It is almost impossible to exaggerate it, nor can it easily be tainted, while most of our virtues, particularly of a social character, take the rise here; in fact the mother, as such, is the great programme a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Miss Aileen Young people for their splendid program and refreshments were served to all by the ladies of the W.M.S.

The Women's Institute held their April meeting and election of officers at the home of Mrs. Ethel Reid on Thursday afternoon with a very large attendance. Interesting reports for the district annual meeting of the Women's Institute to be held at Morven on May the 19th.

Mrs. Roy Badgley spent a few days in Belleville last week with her mother, Mrs. Robinson who is taking up residence in Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Davis entertained company on Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Hill, Belleville were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Hopkins.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Fazo entertained Rev. Mr. Clarke at the noon hour on Sunday.

Mrs. O. A. Knapp of Napanee is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. R. Badgley.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Bennett, Miss M. McLean and Mr. and Mrs. Mallett gan were among those from here who motored to Belleville on Wednesday evening to hear Dr. Ragsdale, crowned with wisdom and adorned with the jewels of patience and perseverance. How dearly we revere the memory of all good mothers of the past. We have now gone to their home above. When we in earlier days had tired and sought a vision of their Godly lives as we talk together by the fireside. How much better we would feel after being in their company. While we honor the lives of so many dear mothers that have gone from this earth to reap their reward. It is to the mothers who are living today that I have given my time to the writing of this letter. I believe there is an army of good mothers of today who are holding up the standard of noble womanhood, who are endeavoring through their life's work to make the world better for the ascending of future generations to come. May their prayers be answered.

—Belleville, Ont., 18 Frank St.

P.S.—There are many I believe who have made a practice of reading my letters each year. I would be pleased if every mother, son or daughter, also fathers, who have been helped benefited by these letters would kindly write to me a letter of acknowledgment. I would feel well repaid for all my years of labor.

Melrose, May 9—The W.M.S. held their May meeting at the home of Mrs. Ethel Reid on Wednesday afternoon with a good attendance.

The Young People's Union entertained the Union at the church hall on Friday evening. There was a fair attendance and the programme presented by Ashern was very much enjoyed by all present. The president of the meeting opened with communion service singing of hymn 414, Ayres and Miss R. Robinson at the piano. Some interesting on the pro-gram were duet by the Misses B. "Business is definitely good in my line—overalls. Sales are up twelve cents that they were last year and are expected to get better from now on...Although I don't get the overall business started at 1937 Christmas calendars for a month or more yet, I've booked a few orders already. Merchants can begin to look for my samples for the Christmas trade and hint that buying volume this year will be bigger than last."

Andy L. Murphy, Queensboro—

"This voter wrickin' business is the bunk. Last year we needed voter pretty bad out here. Some old fellow came out with his wife to bring votes. I find that voter—we pay. He trumped all over the place. He painted out several locations where, according to him, a regular river was running through the place just under the surface. He'll still be voting.

"My business we dug and bored and sweated all over the farm, and all we got was a pain in the back."

Mrs. E. Bourne, Dundas Street—

"Isn't there some kind of a law which compels owners and drivers of heavy trucks to stop during midnight thunder wagons with sufficient? Or do the sufferers just naturally fall off from the pressure after the first roar, or is 'em?

The noise they make is getting worse all the time. It used to be that only the well-to-do folks' homes were rattled. Now all the monotony in the province is left to when one of those freight trains roars by."

Joseph Hinne, Mohawk Reserve, Axe Handle Maker—

"There aren't any elm trees any more, and hickory resembleest trees seem to be disappointing lately fast. Two of the hardest woods there are to work by hand, but I can hardly get enough of the right kind to keep me going for a week."

L. F. Meyers, Illumination Expert, Toronto—

"We're just half way around the corner from scientifically applied light in every home. The present form of electric light bulbs, or globe,is just a wasteful hang over from the days of the kerosene lamp. Like the buttons on a man's coat sleeve, they follow an ancient and useless form. Why light up the whole bed room when you want to read in bed? Why is they soft glow focussed directly on the spot, and using only enough its power of one bulb, will do? The new lights are small tubes set flush with the panel of the bed stead. In the modern home even the hallways and flights of stairs are lighted in this manner. For interior room lighting the source is almost invisible. Ten years from now present forms of lighting will be museum exhibits."

Charles Hardwick, Burton Street—

"For the past several years we have tried to have a garden, but each year we always end up by give it up as a bad job. If it isn't dirty chickens, it's dirty dogs. Each spring we dig the sod ground, dig rumble into the sod and pow, and bark at us when we dig. We chase the try to chase the chickens out of the garden about twenty times a day, but all they do is run around the corner of the fence, sit there and watch us till we get back into the house again and then make another run. The seeds that have been planted. And even after the dogs don't bother us they're in there slipping off the heads as fast as it grows. It's my idea that anyone who wants to keep chickens in the city should keep them penned up, at least during gardening time, and the same thing applies for dogs. Later in the season it isn't so bad."

Harold Warner, City—

"People farm up their money at cost, yet cake, when properly cooked and prepared are just about as nice a dish as any one could find or want. The trouble is very few know how to go about cooking cake. First get a medium sized one. Have it skinned and cleaned and then soak it in salt water for half a day or so. If you intend to fry it, parboil it first. Then when you do fry it, don't use any grease but use just a piece at a time across in the pan to keep it off the bottom. A few chips of wood will do just as well. Salted eel, as well as pickled eel, is looked upon as a delicacy in many countries."

Clifford Wallace, Packers—

"I'm a factory fiend about three months from winter of any kind. I picked up a large eel last year, very much alive and wriggling. Tell me how he got there."

MASSEY HONORED FOR HIS 'BEAUTY'

Toronto M. P. Received Congratulations of Committee

Ottawa, May 9 (Canadian Press)—Denton Massey, Toronto Greenwood Conservative, today accepted gracefully congratulations of the House of Commons Radio Committee on having headed Miss Agnes Macphail's list of handsome House members.

As the committee met Patsi Mar-in (Lib., Essex East) moved it congratulate Mr. Massey, absent yesterday when the list of handsome members appeared in the Grey-Bruce woman member and that of "attractive-looking" members selected by Mrs. George Black approved by morning papers.

W. M. Ryan (Lib, Saint John-Albert) seconded the resolution and chairman Arthur Beaubien (Lib., Provencher) remarked he had been asked to make a selection and had unhesitatingly named Mr. Massey.

"Then I urge you be removed as chairman," Mr. Martin declared.

While 245 members of the House of Commons have been debating legislation in long hours of argument, the two women members have had ample opportunity to consider their masculine confreres from the standpoint of gratitude. They disclosed their preferences.

Gentle, white-haired Mrs. George Black (Cons., Yukon) concluded there is not a really "handsome" man in the House while aggressive, stalwart Agnes Macphail (U.F.O.-Labor, Grey-Bruce) listed ten men Saint Rowe (Cons., Dufferin-Simcoe); James J. McCann (Lib., Renfrew South), and mayo Liout.-Col. Thomas Vien (Lib., Montreal-Ostiremont).

Miss Macphail drew a line between "good-looking" and "distinguished", considering them.

Mrs. Black gave as reasons for not listing any members as "handsome" that "too many have eyes too close together, ears that stick out, crooked noses, weak chins, avoirdupois and bad carriage."

Cowan, minister of mines and Immigration; Hon. J. E. Michaud, minister of national defence; Geo. Pearkes (Lib, Kamsack), grey-haired, intellectual French-Canadian; Grant MacNeil (C.C.F., Vancouver North); Gladstone Hon. Earl Lawson (Cons, York South); Hon. Miss Macphail drew a line between "good-looking" and "distinguished", considering them.

Mrs. Black gave as reasons for not listing any members as "handsome" that "too many have eyes too close together, ears that stick out, crooked noses, weak chins, avoirdupois and bad carriage."

Child in Slough Saved

Led by the family dog, Rex, large collie, who bounded ahead of the party of relatives and friends attempting fo locate Gordon Pearsall, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Pearsall, Wellington, Prince Edward, searchers came upon the child in a slough hole of a swamp near his home yesterday afternoon buried almost in the mire up his chin. Minute Interviews

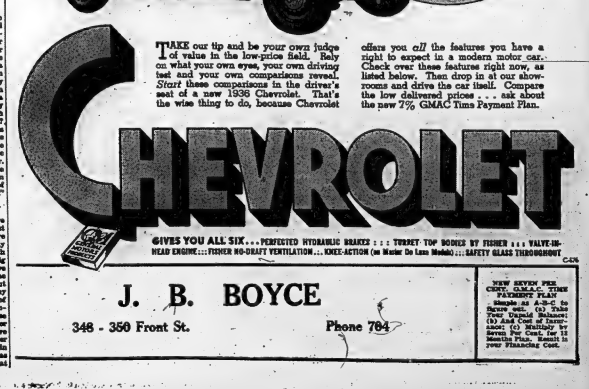
Alderman Thos. Cooking, Ward 4—

"Until we realize the need for conservation, more determination and the knowledge that if we start anything we'll have to go after it, then Belleville's conservation will remain just where it is. We need more initiative, improvements which will make the place more attractive to outsiders, and better for the residents. To do this we might have to spend a dollar, but if we save two dollars back it's still good business. Lack of vision is the past has resulted in us defacing our own ends and bringing the city almost to a standstill."

Mrs. W. Stockley, Tyendinaga, Farmer—

"The government has been leading big space advertisements in the papers asking farmers to co-operate in relieving unemployment by taking on as many help as soon as we can. We're certainly willing to help in this respect even if only to help us out for the busy season. We can't seem to work. That is for the wages we are able to pay. With eggs at ten and twelve cents per dozen, beef at twenty-two and twenty-five cents a pound, milk cheap enough to feed to the hogs and other things in like proportion, as well as the farm and stock to keep up, how is the farmer going to pay the $8.00 a month and board for a man when he's hardly making that much himself?"



R. D. Nelson, Commercial Traveller, Hamilton—

Tells me how he got there."

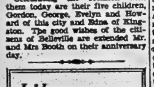
SILVER WEDDING IS CELEBRATED

Mr. And Mrs. Arthur Booth Congratulated By Friends

Today Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Booth, 47 Yeomans street, are receiving congratulations on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding. The silver jubilee will be marked by a dinner party this evening at which twenty-five guests will be present.



Mr. and Mrs. Booth, residents of this city for the past fifteen years, were married in Hamilton by the Rev. Mr. Wilson, Presbyterian minister, but lived in Western Canada for a number of years. Mrs. Booth was formerly Miss Alice Hall, daughter of Mr. Thomas Hall, and the late Mrs. Hall, of Hull, England. The family moved to Edmonton after coming to this country and Mr. Hall is now living in Vancouver. Mr. Booth was born in Michigan but his early home was at Thrasher's Corners. His mother, Mrs. Fred Pope, lives in Belleville, at 27 Johnston street.

Since coming to this city, Mr. and Mrs. Booth have made a wide circle of friends. Mr. Booth has been a popular member of the Belleville Police Force, to which he was appointed in December 1931 and on which he has served with much distinction. For several months in 1926 Mr. Booth and his family resided in Florida. A year after his return he was promoted to the position of sergeant in the police force. A keen student of radio mechanics, Mr. Booth has won well-merited commendation on the success of the local police broadcasting unit, which he built and installed.

Celebrating the occasion with them today are their five children, Gordon, George, Evelyn and Howard of this city and Edna of Kingston. The good wishes of the children of Belleville are extended Mr. and Mrs Booth on their anniversary day.

DUKE AND DUCHESS AT SISTER'S WEDDING

One of the most brilliant society weddings in London took place at St. Margaret's, Westminster, when Lady Angela Scott, sister of the Duchess of Gloucester, was married to Lieutenant-Commander Peter Kenyon-Slaney. Among the hundreds of guests received by the bride were Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester leaving after the ceremony.

BRILLIANT SOCIETY WEDDING IN LONDON

At the fashionable St. Margaret's wedding of Lady Angela Scott, sister of the Duchess of Gloucester, and Lt.-Commander Peter Kenyon, R.N., the Duchess of Gloucester, with her husband, the Duke of Gloucester, were present. The bride received four royal gifts, including a blue enamel and silver gilt dressing from the Queen. Photo shows Lt.-Commander Kenyon-Slaney and his charming bride leaving the church, St. Margaret's, Westminster, after the wedding.

THE LADIES OF THE HOUSE FINALY COMMITTED THEMSELVES

There are only two women in the Houses of Commons at Ottawa; both are astute politicians, but they have been "put on the spot," as it were, by yielding to the persuasive pens of the press gallery to pick out the most handsome and distinguished gentleman among the 262 others who make up the House. Miss Agnes Macphail (TOP CENTRE) selected Denton Massey (Conservative) and Mr. Hugh Plaxton, (Liberal) as her choices as the most handsome, and chose Opposition Leader R. B. Bennett as the most distinguished. Mrs. George Black was not so easy. She said there were no really handsome men in the House, though she thought Mr. Massey was "attractive looking." A Conservative member, she nevertheless selected Premier King as the most distinguished gentleman. Mr. Massey is shown UPPER LEFT, and Mr. Plaxton, UPPER RIGHT. The LOWER ROW shows Premier King, Mrs. George Black and R. B. Bennett.

REGINA'S FLYING "QUINTUPLETS" BLAZING AIR TRAILS

Meet Regina, Sask.'s "quintuplets." These five girls are taking lessons at the Regina Flying club, the largest single group of girls in any western club's history. The Misses Lillian McNeil, EXTREME RIGHT, and Alice Blake next, have already obtained their pilot certificates, and are out to get a commercial ticket. Just in the learning stage are Miss Enid Spencer, EXTREME LEFT, federal public works department stenographer; Miss Joyce Bond, next, and 17-year-old Doris Davis, high school student, who wants to be a transport pilot. The quints are known to club members as the "Quintuplets."

MOTHERHOOD HAS NOT DIMMED THESE FILM STARS

The old-fashioned idea that motherhood ages a woman and spoils her beauty has been definitely disproved by Hollywood. At least that is the opinion of Max Factor, Hollywood cosmetic manufacturer, who contends that "the most beautiful girls on the screen are the youthful mothers." Some of the Hollywood mothers listed by Factor as 'outstanding' screen beauties, are shown above. Most of them realized their greatest success after motherhood.

Jack Arthur's Prize-Winning Canadian Amateurs Here Friday

Someone has said that the road to success is strewn with obstacles placed by a perverse Fate, but sometimes it happens that the way is made easier by a kindly minded person or group of interests. In such a category falls Major Bowes of the United States while in the Canadian field of entertainment Famous Players has done much through its provincial-wide search for talent, in bringing many out of obscurity into the brighter sun of affluence and celebrity.

The citizens of Belleville will be given the opportunity of seeing and encouraging a group of fine youngsters, who have been heard on broadcasts from the stage of Shea's Theatre, Toronto, when Jack Arthur's "Prize Winning Canadian Amateurs on Parade" appear in person on the stage at the Bell Theatre on Friday and Saturday, May 15 and 16, for both matinee and evening performances.

This group of amateurs who aspire to fame in the entertainment circuit present a program on the stage of wide variety. Molly Valerie McHale is a bloody singer of inimitable charm which she has won thus far; Jack Oldfield was a part time soda fountain clerk until Jack Arthur saw his undoubted talent as a ventriloquist; Jerry Gelmon is said to make his future living mixing concoctions rather than the drinks; Andre Bourque is a stupendancer and accordionist of exceptional ability; fifteen year old Betty Robertson does character songs and now through intricate tap dancing Jim Roblin, imitator, wowed them on Ray Perkins' Amateur broadcast in New York but decided to throw in his lot with the Canadian Amateurs; Mrs. Stella Wilson, soprano, has delighted in many cities in Ontario with her church and concert solo work and now leads her fine voice to this strictly Canadian troupe. Incidentally she is the chaperone of the party, Alfred Begond, born in Geneva, Switzerland, emigrated to Canada fifteen years ago, mastered English and then turned his attention to the peculiar noises or everyday life. His gift of imitation is remarkable. Then there are the Four Ragamuffins ranging from nineteen to twenty-two years, who, after only two months practice together, were good enough to bring down the house at Shea's and take the first prize money of $50 with their fine harmony singing and instrumental accompaniment.

Truly, the program is a splendid one which it would be inadvisable to those appreciative of such programs to miss. On the screen a fast moving romance "12 Hours by Air" features Joan Bennett, Fred MacMurray and Zasu Pitts.

AT THE BELLE

Mowawk Branch W.I.

The annual meeting of the Mowawk Branch of the Women's Institute was held in the Orange Hall on Monday, May 5th with twenty-one members present. Roll Call was answered by payment of fees. Annual reports were presented the treasurer's showing a substantial bank balance.

A motion was given by Mrs. R. H. Hill "Jemima's Courtship". Each member at this meeting were Mrs. Gilroy, District Director and Mrs. Murphy Federated member for the district.

The following officers were re-elected—President Mrs. H. J. Eade, 1st Vice President, Mrs. R. H. Hill 2nd Vice President, Mrs. H. Claus; Secretary, Miss M. Bell; Treasurer, Mrs. C. Marsele; District Director Mrs. E. Anderson.

The meeting closed by singing The National Anthem after which a dainty luncheon was served.

AT THE CAPITOL

Today—Major Bowes' Amateurs In Person

Major Bowes' Amateurs on the stage in person! All right, right, the wheel of Fortune spins around and where it stops nobody knows. So at last the day is here when Belleville can see the finest in amateurs that is being shown, on any stage and for that matter as good if not better, than professional shows being played in either Canada or the United States. The lifting of the amateurs is taken with great care so as to insure the paying public of the best and are recruited from every city in our fair country to the South. Come out and see these young amateurs and give them a hearty welcome and wish them success on their way along the road of prosperity. There are ten big acts, each of varied and delightful entertainment. On the screen the suave and polished actor William Powell, in one of his best roles, "Lawyer Man," with Joan Blondell.

On Monday—"Cappy Ricks Returns"

Cappy Ricks, the irrepressible buccaneer of the San Francisco waterfront, will be the chief attraction at the Capitol Theatre on Monday at the showing of "Cappy Ricks Returns."

The new Republic photoplay, based on a recent Peter B. Kyne story, features Robert McWade in the title role. McWade actually seems to live the role, and gives a most convincing portrayal as he outwits his unscrupulous rivals in a picture that is fraught with suspense and action.

Playing the romantic leads are dashing Ray Walker and pretty Florine McKinney. Walker is cast in the type of role which has raised him to screen fame—that of a dashing sales manager, while the pretty stenographer, who in this case happens to be the daughter of his chief opponent, is ably enacted by Miss McKinney. The supporting cast is of uniform excellence, and includes such well-known troupers as Oscar Apfel, Lois Wilson and Kenneth Harlan.

The plot concerns the efforts of Cappy Ricks' patent roofing business rivals to secure passage of a law which will prohibit the use of wooden shingles as roofing material. Cappy comes out of retirement to fight the bill on behalf of the lumber operators.

Kenneth Sakas Returns After Successful Audition at Metropolitan

Kenneth Sakas has returned from New York in order to take part in the rehearsals now being held for the Opera Guild's two performances of "Pagliacci" at the Royal Alexander this month. His many friends and admirers will be glad to learn that he had a very successful audition" (the words are those of Gennaro Papi) at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, and that both Manager Edward Johnson and Conductor Papi were much interested in his Toronto operatic engagement, and asked him to report to them at the Metropolitan as soon as possible thereafter, namely on Monday morning, May 18. The urgent call to New York may prevent Mr. Sakas from accepting Raheen Urban's invitation to appear as guest artist in the forthcoming production by the Canadian Grand Opera Association.—Toronto Globe.

WHEAT ACREAGE DOWN 10 PERCENT

Seeding General in West And is Rapidly Advancing

Winnipeg, May 8.—Weather has been cool with occasional showers over all the grain growing areas of western Canada. Good progress has been made with farmwork and the cool weather has permitted horses to work longer hours. Seeding is general and is being rapidly advanced. There will be a tendency to reduce the acre sown to wheat by about ten per cent. while the amount of land being reserved for summer fallowing and the production of oats and barley will be slightly increased, further work is fully one week later than in an average year. Prospects for grasshopper infestation are slight, but every precaution is being taken and control measures are being carried out. Surface and sub soil moisture is more plentiful than for several years.

Some districts report a scarcity of horses while others indicate they are in rather poor shape for spring work. Practically all points report sufficient feed available to insure completion of seeding according to the first weekly crop report of the Department of Agriculture of the Canadian National Railways. In southern and south-central Manitoba, cool wet weather prevails. Seeding is about one week later than a year ago, but it is expected that all wheat will reach the ground about May 18 in northern Manitoba, in the Dauphin-Swan River territories there will be some decrease in wheat acreage, although a few districts anticipate an increase.

Along the Lewvan, Lampman, Avonlea, Cravelbourg, Central Butte, Ben Gough, Riverhurst subdivisions in Saskatchewan, wheat acreage will be about the same as in previous years.

Six And Five Year Terms Handed Out at Owen Sound

Owen Sound, Ont., May 9 (CP)—Edmund Scarr was sentenced to six years in the Kingston penitentiary and Floyd Holmes five years by Magistrate F. W. Walter at Wiarton in connection with the robbery of the jewelry store of George McMillan, Wiarton, a week ago. Both pleaded guilty. Scarr and Holmes received the same term on the burglary charge, but Scarr got an extra year on the charge of robbery while armed. Both have police records. All the jewelry has been recovered by the police. The men were arrested in Owen Sound.

British Admiral Says Home Fleet Invincible

Valetta, Malta, May 9 (AP)—Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Backhouse declared last night that Great Britain's navy, "whatever the Italian command may think to the contrary, is still invincible and is ready and willing to tackle any force which dares to challenge it, whatever its armament."

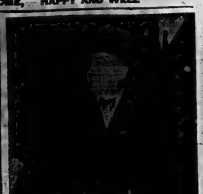
The Admiral made his statement as a dinner for 400 war veterans and their wives who are making a pilgrimage to Gallipoli and Malta, ended.

Sir Roger of the British navy still maintains the freedom of the seas and that Malta would remain Great Britain's naval base in the Mediterranean "in spite of any number of threats".

Alleged Confession Closely Scrutinized

Toronto, May 8—(CP)—Attorney General Arthur Roebuck today received copies of hand writing tests to determine the bona fides of the alleged "confession" in the Ambrose J. Small disappearance case and they were turned over to inspector E. D. L. Hammond of the Criminal Investigation Department and Detective Sergeant James McIrain of Toronto police.

The two officers have been directed by the Attorney General to renew inquiries into Small's disappearance in 1919 following filing of affidavits, including that of the "confession." It is understood the officers will call a handwriting expert, when the hearing into the affidavits to stay proceedings of Mrs. Harold Isaacs and wife is resumed.



Investigation also is being made to the writer of the "confession" and the typewriter, which produced it. The writer of the "confession" has reported holdingup in Buffalo but has not been located.

Mr. H. J. Parliament celebrated his 82nd. birthday on Thursday, May 7th. Mr. Parliament's health is remarkable. He prepares his own meals and enjoys them. Very few people are able to rake the yard on their 82nd birthday. Mr. Parliament was recipient of a beautiful bouquet from the neighbors, boxes of candies and a number of beautiful cards. Friends with Mr. Parliament continued good health and another mile stone in his long life.

"My advice to speckled trout"

"I advise the speckled trout to stay home and pray tomorrow", said Mr. Picobac, pocketing one dozen long-shanked snell hooks, size number 6; one box of split shot, size B.B.; three "SEAL-TIGHT" pouches of Picobac Tobacco; and the change from a two dollar bill. "It won't be safe for them to roam abroad to prey—if you get what I mean. The 'cricks' will be full of fish hooks."

"How would you like it if the trout all took your advice?" asked his friend, the drug store man, from whom all Essex Centre buys its fishing tackle.

"Don't Worry. They won't. Anyway I've got my pipe, haven't I? I've got three Seal-Tight pouches of Picobac Tobacco — all water-proof in case I fall into the 'crick.' I'm all set if I get any fish or not. I'll have a day in May—a day with the birds, the bugs and the beetles—and plenty of time for a long, steady, mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke."

Vancouver Church Destroyed by Fire

Vancouver, May 9 (CP)—Fire yesterday swept through Chown Unitied Church in the Fairview district completely destroying the 30-year-old frame structure with an estimated loss of $50,000.

Believed to have started in the basement the flames swept through the timber dry buildings rapidly and threatened adjoining residences and an apartment block before being brought under control.

THE ROME OF OLD AND OF TODAY

The map of Europe and part of Africa—makes an interesting comparison of the old Roman empire and the Italy of today. While the Romans' empire extended over heavily-populated sections of Europe Italy today has only relatively unimportant possessions in Africa. A few of the Italian holdings in Africa have been purchased or taken since 1900.

ROTARY CIRCUS — SOMETHING DIFFERENT — JUNE 17, 18, 19.

Durable Hurlers Who Can Start And Finish a Game Scarce Around Maj. League This Year

In National Only 61 Times in 168 Starts Has Pitcher Finished

CARDS USE NINE

Worst Record in This Respect is Shown by Boston Bees

Pitchers, durable pitchers who can start a game and finish it, are scarce around the major leagues these days.

The heavy hat-wielders are making life miserable for the men who toe the rubber, especially in the National circuit, and there have been some lengthy mound parades in the season's commencement so far.

Out of eight pitchers who started in four games yesterday only one was on deck when the game was over. Charlie Ruffing went the distance for the Yankees in their win over the Athletics. Nine pitchers are scheduled to start today's games with the Cubs 11-9; five went to the hill as the Pirates beat the Reds 9-8, and Ted Lyons turns in the box as the Senators downed the Red Sox 12-6.

The totals show that out of 168 starts thus far in the National League season, only 61 times have the twirlers gone the distance.

The worst record is shown by the Boston Bees who in 30 games have seen their pitcher complete his chore only three times. Giants pitchers have completed six of their 19 starts. Pitchers have fallen by the wayside in 20 out of 28 games. The Cards have the best record with 14 of their 19 starting hurlers seeing the job through.

The lowly St. Louis Browns have the worst record in the American circuit with only three of the starters in 21 games staying the distance while the Red Sox top the league with 13 out of 25 games worked by one pitcher. Lefty Grove having completed five. Pitchers have gone the route 77 times in 170 starts in this circuit.

"Y" NOTES

Two more contestants in the singles handball elimination tournament entered the second round of play. C. Barber won from G. Scott in two straight games and Ken Johnson stepped up in the second round when his opponent, R. Surtey was forced to default. Sorry to see Hertie drop out so early in the contest as he would have gone along nicely in this series. Quite a number of games are on the board now and before the day afternoon or evening so that the first round of this series should be about completed by Monday of next week.

R.I.P. Softball.

Five additional teams have applied for entry since our last announcement re this league. The entries standing now are: Bantam, midget 7, juvenile 4. A couple more juvenile teams are being pushed and a much better schedule for this division. Any event additional to those named thinking of entering in any of the three series are requested to do so at once so that the schedule may be drawn and the games begun before the end of next week. From Pete Beach of Albert College comes the assurance of assistance from a number of the students in umpiring games in this loop. A few more such offers will do much to overcome the problem of securing efficient umpiring staff.

Juniors to Tackle Long Hike.

The junior school group in the "Y" membership are ambitious hikers and at their afternoon session yesterday, they turned down the suggestion that Cak Lake was a little too distant for a hike. At 7.45 next Saturday morning fifteen to twenty boys will gather at the "Y" to start out on their long tramp. Cars will bring the boys back to town later in the day but on the way out the hikers will accept no lifts being determined to cover the ground on their own.

LIGHT HEAVIES TO PUT ON CARD

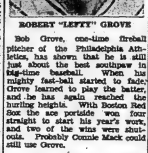
New Policy Being Inaugurated For District Wrestling Fans

By popular request a change in the weekly wrestling program at the Belleville Arena will be inaugurated next Tuesday night. Every other week the more agile light heavyweight wrestlers will be presented while the heavyweights, under the promotorship of Matchmaker Jack Corcoran will alternate week about.

Commencing Tuesday night at the arena the light-hearies will make their official bow before the local fans. In past years light-heavyweight wrestling has met with favor in Belleville and their return will be welcomed with open arms by many fans. The first heavyweight show will be featured by the appearance of Danny MacDonald, the light heavyweight professional wrestling champion of Canada, who meets Lefty Priestley of Toronto. Priestley said is a speedy ringman and has gained a world of wrestling knowledge since winning the Dominion title some years ago, but he meets a worthy opponent in Priestly, an ex-Olympic star.

CHIEF LYNX

The semi-final bout should prove "oops" in Belleville as it brings together two well-known and hefty boys in Nick Mercuric, the pugnacious and furious-fisted Italian, against Chief Lynx, sometimes known as Buffalo Joe. Although the Indian was defeated by Al Dunlop in a local ring last week, he will have the advantage of some ten or fifteen pounds over Mercuric, which should prove sufficient to force the peppery Italian to the limit. Mike Anderio, another siren of energy from the land of Mussolini, will open the show versus an opponent yet to be signed for a splendid three card wrestling show.



Frankie Frisch's "gas house gang" moved into first place in the National League yesterday as Dizzy Dean was rushed to the hilltop to complete a game that St. Louis won 11 to 9 over the Cubs.

GROVE GOING WELL

ROBERT "LEFTY" GROVE

Bob Grove, one-time fireball pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, has shown that he is the best about the best southpaw in big-time baseball. When his mighty fast-ball started to fade, Grove learned to play the batter, and he has again reached the hurling heights. With Boston Red Sox the ace portside won four straight to start his year's work, and two of the wins were shutouts. Probably Connie Mack could still use Grove.

STILL PLAYING BALL FOR "SHAG'S" MONTREAL ROYALS

Three Montreal Royal baseballers, holdovers from the fighting team which last year won the International League pennant, are pictured here. The trio are still doing their disputed chore for Frankie "Shag" Shaughnessy's crew, and doing them well. Top pic is Harry Smythe, until recently the only southpaw on the hurling staff; below him is Benny Sukeforth, aggressive and peppery shortstop. At the right is Benny Tate, catcher, ready to swallow another pennant in the depths of his capacious mitt.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

It seems a shame that rumors should get about town regarding local sports, especially of a derogatory nature. Of course numerous false reports have been repulsed on the streets relative to certain local players not turning out with the Belleville C.O.B.R. team. Here and now we wish to contradict any such statements as Belleville is to have a "home town" team composed practically one hundred per cent. of local talent. Any player in Belleville who desires to try out with the squad has a free hand to do so and will be received with open arms. We made a canvass of the city and found the athletes, business men and manufacturing plant managers behind the team to a man and willing to assist in the sponsoring of a team under the present set-up of a Belleville baseball team for Bellevillians," stated secretary-treasurer Lorne McDougall today.

Another angle that needs clarification is the matter of who's eligible and what players may be expected to turn out with the local team this evening. As we have tried to explain for the past few weeks, the baseball season is now in town are endeavoring to assist in the finance problem that annually confronts the directorate. The team is to be purely one of service" At present the team is only one player we know of who is receiving a little for his work and does not reside in Belleville and that player is Nelson "Rod" Hipp who is with Trenton but who has been a resident of Belleville since last fall while we were informed today that neither Trenton nor Belleville C.O.B.R. players recently referred is would be available as they are being held in reserve until further notice. Of course when the term "home town" team is used it is intended to say player residing within the jurisdiction of a senior team in Belleville.

This idea of a purely home town team is meeting with favor throughout the community, especially as the fans today is not "how's our team going to make out this year but rather let's get in and boost our own home talent and give them a chance to show their wares. For instance we were hailed by an old timer and proven baseball fan the other day, that champion of past years, "Dudley" Carson. Now Carson was one of the staunchest supporters of ball ever to trod the asphalt in Belleville for many a year. Tell-tale, they tell me we're going to have a home town team this year and the local boys are to get a whack at it. That's the best news I've heard in years. There's a gang of youngsters in town and some of them should be good ball players and they'll get support. You know I'm no millionaire, but I'll kick in to help give the local kids a chance," asserted Dudley. This is not an isolated case, we can cite others who feel the same as Mr. Carson, so with the foundation now laid for a ten-for ball team to be made up of local players now left, let's all do as "Dud" says—"give the local kids a chance."

To date manager Weir knows of four available hurlers, all of whom have been there before, namely the pest. There's St. Louis, Brain Heath, Reid Wilkins and Johnnie Bowden. The two latter were a part of the local hurling staff in 1934 when Bill Weir was handling pitcher. In past years Belleville has been able to field only a part-time affair of some importance and usually proved an asset to the manager, but it looks as though they will have to struggle along without a "crutch" and make this year. Practice will be held on the right field park at the Fair Grounds and all aspiring players are urged to be on hand at the above time. There will be no pre-season work-outs in golfing shoes, and the team will start before opening day, as there is no time to lose.

Senior baseball is far from "out of the woods" in Kingston as we see Daley is believed to be behind the scenes in the Limestone City, but the players are still in the dark about the season's baseball call. The Limestone City news reveals that Daley's ire, instead of glancing under their own table for the dirt, came out with the crack that players up from Peterborough and Belleville will "formally notify each other" next week. Actually it smells like sour grapes because Daley's All Star League champions. It took the Limestone City Senior A.B.C.A.U.C.H.L. players recently referred is would be available as they are being held in reserve until further notice. Of course when the term "home town team" is used it is intended to say player residing within the jurisdiction of a senior team in Belleville.

This idea of a purely home town team is meeting with favor throughout the community, especially as the fans today is not "how's our team going to make out this year but rather let's get in and boost our own home talent and give them a chance to show their wares. JIMMY McLARNIN LOSES DECISION WITH CANZONERI

Good Little Man Defeats Good Big Man in Torrid Bout

McLARNIN MAY QUIT

Timing Was Bad But Canzoneri Hurt at Times

New York, May 9 (AP)—So a good little man has no chance against a good big man? How little Tony Canzoneri must have bowled at that one!

More than 16,000 fans of the stocky king of the lightweights explode the age-old theory in Madison Square Garden last night.

Rallying after a first round banishment that all but blasted him into the flatic boneyard, Canzoneri, 5 ft 5 underdog in the betting, came back to give Jimmy McLarnin, once ruler of the welters, one of the worst defeats in the Vancouver Irishman's twelve years of brilliant ring campaigning.

After that hectic first round, in which McLarnin seemed headed for an early knockout, it was mostly Canzoneri. Spotting the Celt six and one half pounds, Canzoneri won seven of the remaining nine rounds. He punished McLarnin with a terrific attack to capture the second, third, fifth, sixth and seventh and all but had the game but tired Vancouver battler out on his feet in the ninth and tenth.

McLarnin took only the first, fourth and eighth.

Large Gate.

The gate was $83,763.50 and except for the Joe Louis-Paulino Uzcudun fight last December, was the largest the Garden has drawn in more than four years.

After the bruising, speedy thrilling ten round display of glove swinging, the game but crushed McLarnin added it probably was the end of the trail for him.

"He's a grand fighter, that Tony," said Jimmy, as attendants massaged his badly swollen face. "I guess I ought to quit, at that. Fighting once a year is tough going."

Kid Pop Foster, chucking about the battered Irishman like a mother hen, was even more emphatic.

"He should quit for good," said Pop. "I was against this fight from the start. Jimmy should have hung up the gloves after his last fight with Barney Ross."

Canzoneri, who escaped with nothing more serious than a bloody nose said: he was willing to tackle Lou Ambers for the lightweight championship as soon as promoters can bring them together.

"Jimmy hit me hard and hurt me a lot in the first round," he said. "But when I saw I could take that I knew I would win. I knew I had Jimmy all he could."

Tony, one of the grandest little fighters in modern ring history, has failed to fight McLarnin for five years... But like Pop Foster, McLarnin's manager Sammy Goldstein, has always opposed the match.

McLarnin, who hadn't fought since he lost the welterweight title to Barney Ross last May, clearly showed the effects of his long lay-off.

His timing was terrible. He tried early and Canzoneri's masterful work and boxing skill, made the Irishman miss repeatedly with Sunday punches that fought to "put a special disaster for Canzoneri—had they landed.

WEILAND WINS 5 OUT OF 8 GAMES FOR ROCHESTER

Veteran Southpaw Only Consistent Hurler on Staff

TORONTO LEAFS WIN

Jack Mooty Runs String of Scoreless Innings to 17

One reason why the fortunes of the Rochester Red Wings have begun to perk up after their mess a disastrous start in the current International League season is to be found in the hurling of Bob Weiland, veteran southpaw, who was second in the circuit in the earned run standings last season.

The only consistent flinger on the staff, Weiland has won five of Rochester's eight games and only lost once. In his three complete games he has held the opposition to five hits on two occasions and two hits on the other. He finished for Les Sweetland in another winning encounter during the Red Wings' streak, which has carried them up to the .500 mark, only a half game behind the fourth-place Baltimore Orioles.

Weiland turned in his second five-hitter yesterday against the second-place Newark Bears, winning 6 to 1. One of the blows was somewhat scratchy while two of the others were poled in the second for Newark's lone run. Meanwhile the Wings drove Red LaRamore to cover in the fourth and continued swatting against Bob Miller to score four runs and clinch their first victory of the season over the Bears.

Jack Mooty Tosses Goin.

Newark's defeat enabled the league leading Montreal Royals and the third-place Toronto Maple Leafs to gain a full game each on the Bears. Montreal trimmed Baltimore 6 to 3 while a nervewracking Jake Mooty pitched four hit ball to give the Leafs a 7-0 decision over Syracuse. The Albany-Buffalo game was postponed to form part of a Sunday double-header.

Mooty, running his string of scoreless innings to 17, had strong support from Tom Oliver, who made three hits and led a 15-hit attack on Byron Humphreys and Matty Holmes. A three-run outburst against Cliff Melton in the sixth gave Montreal the lead but the Royals were hard pressed to hold it as Henry Johnson weakened and had to be relieved by Phil Hensler and Harry Smythe. Johnny Thomson, Montreal captain, and Oscar Rousseau of the Orioles made three hits apiece.

WORLD'S C[illegible] DEFEATED

San Francisco, Calif., May 9 (AP) —Fred Apostoli, former San Francisco bellhop, moved into the front ranks of challengers for the middleweight boxing title last night when he scored a comparatively easy 10-round decision over Eddie (Babe) Risko, world's champion for the middle title bout.

Risko weighed 162; Apostoli 161.

Forcing the bout all the way, Apostoli won eight of the ten rounds.

CHAPTER I.

LANYARD found his lost youth again that June, but not before he had fondly bade it a last farewell. At pause by the port rail while watching the gray cliffs of Belle Ysoon of France and saw the small ashes of longshore lights wane out under; and lifting a hand in salute to the ne'er complete that already was all silvered. "Faye de ma jeunesse perdue," the man said in a muted voice; "land of my lost youth—adieu!" As if by describing this sentimental gesture he had discharged a duty of the soul, he turned to go below to his cabin.

The due to the smoking-room was the nearest. Most of the congregation in there and comfortably off to a fast start in their race against time—with only five days to go ere the breath of their native desert would dry up the last drop of moisture from man to tarry till his eye fighted haphazard on another figure.

This was one who sat by himself, in a corner, sipping his pipe, and, to all appearance, nothing else but his thoughts: a long lean body, bone-jointed, with a long brown mask and almost the complexion of the shorthaired Spaniard, but the cut of the Anglo-Saxon stock gone native white from Hudson Bay to the Midlands turn out in greater numbers every generation.

Coming to a halt before him Lanyard politely remarked: "Mr. Crane, I believe, sir, from Paris?" "Both quarters, New York, and who knows?—perhaps Heaven."

The man with the pipe lifted a cool gray stare, scrutinizing his onetime querist.

"I don't believe it," he declared with a drawl that suggested a change of muscular expression whatever: "Ain't you Lanyard?—the Lone Wolf shed his felonious hide and showed himself up for nothing but a dumb cluck—and very white at that. Well, I'm damned. You don't exist."

A rare bored look at the same time shot out and nipped Lanyard's wrist.

"Maybe I'm wrong at that; you feel like flesh and blood, all right. Sit down, brother, and tell me about it. If you do, I'll tell the Captain on you. Maybe I ought to, at that, instead of acting as a host or citizen."

"Who am I to oppose you?" The shoot of a smile, while quite the Crane's humour, was touched by some real feeling for the first time. "Old friend, I am about finishing the voyage in mine. Set under the circumstances of a ghost's refusing spirituous consolation."

A steward hovered to serve their pleasure.

"But you, my friend, you have not changed. I mean, of course, outwardly. One can tell that the years have not been unkind to you. How many is it? No matter! I'm sadly darkened Lanyard's game—I have too good reason to remember."

"Well, if you will," Crane head-lessly rejoined, "you don't show a farther bit the worse for the wear. It isn't every day a former holy terror has a chance to see how he's come back looking like you do. How come?"

"Quite simple. You view in me the result of a change of methods rather than a change of heart. Let her, you know—"

"Oh-huh," the other grunted; "I know all about that. You just couldn't stick to the straight and narrow, so you took to the second-story work. How tell me about it?"

"But ask any of my clients. I am sure every one will tell you Michael Lanyard, impersonator of outlaws and objets d'art, is a robber still. You may recall, by the way, that my wife was but newly married—"

"Why, I haven't forgotten—see how I envied you."

"Figure to yourself, one could not consent to do nothing with one's life but be the idle husband of a lady of means. One turned one's modest talents to account, then, by forming as a colleague with Bellamy and Twof Paris—and prospered to such effect that one is today a partner in the business."

"Bellhes!" Crane opened his eyes. The name Lanyard was to be seen on Fifth avenue near Fifty-seventh?"

"The same. It is to take over control of the American branch that I am now proceeding for the first time in twelve years.

"Good heavens! And bringing Mrs. Lanyard, I hope, with you?"

"Poor old boy!" Lanyard's accents of consolation answered from a face for the moment averted. "I'm no more."

"Thank you, my friend. That is quite its answer for profit by the opportunity, when it presented itself, to send my dear spouse Bellamy and come to be a land of memories too poignant.

"You don't intend to return?"

"Never of my own will. It is only just now that I watched the land of my lost youth vanish, and bade it good-bye."

"Morbid, I call it—man in his prime, with his best still before him, mourning his lost youth!"

"Who leaves France," Lanyard quoted—"You remember Mary Stu—then sang on the night-swept deck, art? Farewell!—Who leaves France, dies . . . What is life but a prelude to death? Is it worth a second look to live for?"

"No blood kin anywhere?" Crane wondered uncomfortably.

"None. The youngest who forsook me at Paris, an infant to live or die as God willed, I never knew. Even that wretched—forgive me—legally adopted me, Madame the protector of the mean-bodied in which I was abandoned, and made a very slave of me, kept under the whip and kick of waiters and scullions — she too is dead these many years."

"Hello!" Glints kindled in the gray eyes with the hoodlike lids. "That how you look for a life of crime, eh? Or often enough to—well, that's got the stuff in him you have."

"But figure to yourself, my friend, what chance I had, with such a background, to be other than the backstairs life of a third-rate hotel, the companionship of servants reduced to the level of menials and my rare hours off—riff-raff of the streets. Apaches and worse. There were the tutors who taught me my first lessons in crime, the ill-assorted young blackguard with the moral sense of a hyena and every instinct of the gutter-snipe—a master of crime at twenty."

"Going on all that time, you, that's no idle tale. What beats me is how you ever came to snap out of it."

"Two things were my salvation: the intelligence of my unknown parents endowed me with and—Lanyard's eyes flashed with a smile—my dear wife."

"Yet it was the same intelligence that made you a master of crime, the Lone Wolf—for I perceived from the first that that child was a foe who had allies or confidants to betray him—which told me the jig was up when I fell in love with the girl."

"It didn't last?"

"We were very happy." Lanyard repeated with eyes suddenly fearful for the faded years. "We left France to escape the memories that would have made our home — under another name, for the sake of our children—in Belgium."

"Children, eh? But I thought you—"

"There were two, a boy who was seven years old when I married, and when they perished with their mother in the wreck of the Lusitania, it happened that I was in Paris when War was declared. When all Europe changed to battle-ground for the lines, I even had trouble finding a machine to take me to the front. Then I was wounded, and find myself invalided home, a hero for the moment, with—"

"The time that happens, I'll tell you."

CHAPTER II.

BUT about Lanyard, please! I have often thought of you, who have a soft side for a sportsman. But it's been getting hard of late, my mind to any time when the Lone Wolf added odds of one to the long list of his victims."

"For all that, there were occasions when I would have been put to it to remain a sportsman, if you can't seem to it—how do you say it?—that I am not."

"No more than I'd've done for any friend," Crane said, with a touch of embarrassment.

"Which has never been more thought you were just a genius, and too good-hearted, to round out your career with a touch of villainy, I'm afraid with his glass and laughed as he waved it: "If it's a fair question—"

"I've been out of the F. D. a good many years now," Crane confessed, somewhat relieved. "Retired, from choice, if you must know. It used to be the consensus of my mugs higher up that a dick who became famous in giving a crook a run for his deceitfulness. He knows more about levels and palmings than any living detective, and he's got a touch of himself a simple tradesman'!"

"Tradesman!" Lanyard's time-lively warning." Penno Crozier replied with characteristic irony. "And you, Lanyard all the attention of grey-haired sweet eyes. "I'm very fortunate, my dear boy, indeed."

"Blessed, indeed—or my eyes need attention. Who is this woman who has come to me? No girls have, nowadays. Though I think I should have been on my guard this time against a word from Fay, I have heard so much, such curious tales of Lanyard's prowess—"

"I am sure," Lanyard assented with a bit a trace of patience.

"Forgive me. But—"

"But forgive me. To be personal is beauty's privilege. I will confess, Lanyard, I am a little bored with seeing pretty eyes light up solely with interest in viewing the monstrosities of a bad lot."

"And not, you feel sure, with interest in finding you have made of them? A figure of international curiosity?"

"Sure of nothing, mademoiselle, except that I'm no match for you."

"Mother was right," the girl announced with a thoughtful air. "I might have been taken in by your subtlety, but tell me: are you always so sensitive to teasing?"

"Mademoiselle, to-night, I'm afraid, because I have just had a disturbing experience. So you be charitable. I never did till I saw one."

"You surely you're going to tell me?"

"I don't think to draw all my secrets at once with those interested eyes. Some day, perhaps, when I've got used to them."

"If you don't, I shall never forgive you."

"What have you two found to talk about so earnestly?" Penno's mother saw one."

"Secrets. Thus far, however, they remain locked up in mysterious boxes. Maybe you'll have more success with the key, but I'm afraid not."

"Mademoiselle's daughter?" Penno Crozier asked.

"Yes." Caught, on her left, claimed Penno's attention.

"Well?" Fay Crozier archly queried.

But Lanyard made believe to misunderstand and secret interrogation. "She is exquisite."

"Pennot." Of course she is. Don't you wonder how I, with my roughhouse background, made out to give my daughter the right training?"

"In a word—no. And what might that be?" Lanyard politely inquired.

"Don't be a fraud. You know perfectly well that Fay Crozier and Lanyard the Lone Wolf had been adept and was hardly to be dumfounded by one which he had known from a child. Nevertheless, he was recoil from a violent psychological shock when Fay, all aglow with discovered eye questioning the portrait of a lady in the period costume which the glass above his cabin washstand pictured. All a-tremble, with those questions, she turned her keen in secret bosom.

"Well, I'm sorry for a space his lot to look upon himself in the pride of his youth, upon a revenant of the past, a figure from the days of that stand still unparalleled in criminal annals.

As if in entering that passage, they've had some sort of a look into hidden threshold and in the mad perspectives of a realm where time stood still had met the eyes of their youth again.

The daring that searched and searched again the lineaments of that mirrored face, and found in everyone, a prototype of the younger Lanyard. Lanyard questioned whether any thought to bring to memories would see the resemblance that he had in his own face. For both had the same firm yet mobile mouth, his chin, the same cast of natural while the other's was generous still and gay; if both could boast the same dark eyes, the expression of pair was a little weary, the other alive with expectancy, ready to meet up with every other fearless-his hair was the same dark brown and the other's lush and darkly lustrous, his face graven with deep lines, its gaze lacking attentiveness, dulled by set and innocent of crow's-feet. . . .

Had he, indeed, been Lanyard's a younger brother—or, possibly, some forgotten of a former incarnation? Folly? Or might the likeness by any chance conceivable be owing to a passing fancy?

It demanded an effort of will to bring his attention back to deal with his dressing. It was a shaken Lanyard who at last turned from the unably older who hardly presented himself in the dining-saloon to Penno's mother and daughter, and fin dit between two ladies, one of whom, Penno's mother, he had marked her at sight as the most beautiful woman he had ever seen, anone, and one with hair of ashen gold and sedate brown eyes who was the power to make him forget the winsome of her generation.

"Mademoiselle Penno," the first —Mrs. Innes Crozier of New Hampshire, upon Lanyard promptly kindled with the deadliest interest.

"How perfectly splendid! And you've been sitting all over the flesh, monsieur, for fear you'd turn out to be a bounder who'd come to my business or some old dodo bird winging back to his roost in a Fifth avenue club. Now, if you don't save us!—what have you?"

"Nothing so dramatic as that," Penno's mother interposed, with a simple tradesman better company," with dignity. "Indeed, I'm quite sure Lanyard will be glad to help you."

"Hark to that man!" Penno Crozier dimpled on him and wagged her fine while head over the hypocrite. "As if you hadn't simply fallen for the weight of your expert knowledge before I landed! Perhaps you've had a place in the last few years—and weren't vain as Lucifer about it! Anyway, you're my meat. I look forward to look past Lanyard. "This is a real adventure, monsieur. Since you have heard me abuse behind his back, you will be glad to help me in his deceitfulness. He knows more about jewels and paintings than any living person, and he's got a touch of himself a simple tradesman'!"

"Penno!" Mrs. Crozier said time-lily warning." Penno Crozier replied with charming naïveté. "Mother and I gave Lanyard all the attention of grey-sweet eyes. "I'm very fortunate, my dear boy, indeed."

"How interesting!" The famous Crozier eyes ran with excitement. "Why, then you could easily identify the emeralds?"

"But surely. They are unique: seven, mounted to a line in size and to the last shade of color and cut as to be matched only by the seven stones—with, I mean, more than the same chance of finding with such imagination as is never spent except on a labor of love. But I forget—I'm not to tell you what I always am sensitive to teasing?"

"In this direction, I don't doubt, he was not at."

"Not at me, if that's what you mean. I was downright brazen, the way I angled for his eye, but he seems to have given it credit."

"He is no son of mine, then."

A speech of lasting gallantry, conceived in idleness of mind, but no sooner spoken than repented for the sake of her heart fled to her tongue in it and betray him to him. Lanyard, for his part, suppressed the promptings he had till then willingly indulged to speak.

But if he stared aghast into the features of the woman confronted to pose him with, he knew at the same time a hot throb of pride in the well-hated and making its inexorable demands upon him, and he mastered his voice and himself tied down to life by living needs.

And with all this, he had himself so well in hand that he was quiet to be proud when, in response of remotely amused unconcern, even Penno Crozier's mother finally to flair: "Are you sure, monsieur?—was able to lift one corner of his lip, chipped his cigarette and find a dry voice for his reply:

"Alas, I am afflicted by half, mademoiselle. I shall have to speak to you your account about."

"That would be dear of you," Penno Crozier said, with a touch of genuine charity. "Fay would be so grateful for an excuse to give me a piece of her mind. She's never at round with us, you know, as a rule; but I'm afraid she's rather fond of people whose holier feelings she has stepped on—especially by father's friends. I'm not sure but she vows not to do it again. But I'm afraid she'll be socially ostracized later, monsieur; the poor dear has been brought up to be a spoiled beauty and is wildly trying to signal me she needs air."

The adventure might have been a set signal for the others of the party to follow suit, but Penno Crozier lingered on to business. It was none of his, to be sure, but he took the liberty to make it his business. He didn't give a great deal of credit to Lanyard's reformation, but rendered of his present fortunes. Men of his gifts and native aversion to the commonplace were apt to have a thin time of it, with the best will in the world to find employment barred to them. To be of use to Lanyard, to offer protection from crooks, a detective needed to keep a finger constantly on the pulse of the underworld but he couldn't do that very well if he refused to consort with crooks or with the powers that preyed on them. The commonplace was a man in Crane's plight was the national secret service; but the only thing he could be sure of was that whereas Crane might be telling the truth about his having left the world in his own line, if he were in fact engaged in some sort of work his last breath to cover the truth.

CHAPTER IV.

WHO is that nice boy, monsieur" Penno Crozier inquired, having trated this light preoccupation—who thinks you are so fascinating?"

"Nice boy?"

"Over there, at the other end of the deck, sitting by himself. Don't look, unless you don't care, for he's looking this way, and I'm sure he'll ever since you came in. . . . Wait a minute, and you may look—he's on his way out."

Lanyard, following her nod, saw the slight figure of a boy in white and the sight of whom up on A Deck as he left the deck-house, a shadow out of an hour.

"Handsome youngster?"

"He is what he!"

"I'm glad you think so, because he started—I mean, I'm glad you don't know long ago and was very fond of him."

"That's funny, because he reminds me, too, of somebody. . . . Who is your friend?"

Penno delayed impishly and Lanyard, with a faint misgiving, replied with entire composure, lamented the boy's name was Rumbold, that he'd his now perceived, at the risk of his secret. Penno's mother, however, was in with this girl's wits would more wisely pause and think twice about what she was doing. Lanyard, who wanted was to have anybody pry into his affairs, encouraged Penno's hallucination which had visited him in sequel to the boy's appearance. His hallucination was what he now reckoned it safest to call it.

Penno, a spoiled beauty, monopolizer, he makes me think of your-self, Lanyard. Rumbold, I mean. Heaven's name!" he expostulated, with a show of irritation. "Monsieur! "But how?"

"It was a physical resemblance, of course," the girl began with a crimp of uncertainty in her voice, "but I'm afraid it was more than that, too. Oh, but there is! I can imagine Mr. Rumbold still the more like you when he's a bit older. But I'm afraid I'm boring you. I'm not so much as his guide. You know what I mean: the impression one gets of a personality interesting—one doesn't need even to know the name. Monsieur Rumbold."

"Quite so. And what, may one ask, is this young man's guide, as you take it?"

"The same as yours, monsieur, only more so—more, much more."

"I wonder," Lanyard observed softly, with a slight, ironic inflection, deepened the corners of that pretty mouth and frowned.

"I never laid eyes on him till tonight."

"Seriously? But why did he keep staring—

"Madame underestimates the fe-licity they know who are fortunate enough to please her. But you can be sure that she has forgiven the Navarre has other attractions than pointe."

MOLE-HOLE DUG BY DRAEGERMEN HAS BEEN SEALED

Re-opening of Mine Depends on Permission of N.S. Gov't.

MANAGER HOPEFUL

Henderson Believes He Can Open up Safe Channel

Halifax, May 9 (CP)—The mole-hole dug by Draegermen in Moose River mine to save the lives of two men trapped for ten days at the foot there has been sealed over.

By order of the Nova Scotia Mines Office no one may attempt an entrance to the gold-studded grimy caverns from which fortunes have been taken—and where smaller fortunes have been lost in efforts to obtain gold.

"Let's blow the mine to hell!"

That was the cry that rang through the bunk house that re-echoed around the Reynolds "suicide shaft" a few hours after Dr. D. R. Robertson and Alfred Stanley were rescued by a crew of 300 Nova Scotia miners. The cry mostly from the lips of men from the province's coal fields. Men who had risked their lives in the dangerous, man-made tunnel of escape.

Mountain Is Closed.

The men were celebrating their victory over death that night. Everyone else is going to get trapped down there—let's blow the mine to hell!

But cautious Frank Threlfall, Mounted Police officers carefully guarded dynamite and the gold miners turned away to a keg of flowing beer.

Whether or not Moose River Mines will again be opened up to give employment to the hundreds of miners who live in the tiny village has not yet been determined by government mining officials.

Mine manager Felix Henderson is satisfied he can open up a safe channel through one of the many disused shafts in the gold-bearing territory. He hopes to proceed with work—the first he must do before application telling just exactly what course he will pursue.

Whether or not Moose River Mines will again be opened up to give employment to the hundreds of miners who live in the tiny village has not yet been determined by government mining officials.

Mine manager Felix Henderson is satisfied he can open up a safe channel through one of the many disused shafts in the gold-bearing territory. He hopes to proceed with work—the first he must do before application telling just exactly what course he will pursue.

Whether or not the Nova Scotia government has appointed a commission to investigate the Moose River mine collapse.

As the head of it is Mr. Justice W. F. Carroll of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia. The commission has full power to examine into all circumstances surrounding the 50-year-old mine which became the tomb of Herman Magill, Toronto barrister, who gave up law to search for gold.

Why Did Mine Collapse?

Why did the mine collapse? That question may be answered by the commission.

Mining engineers say that in the boom days of the past the underworkings were weakened by greed. Pillars were always at a minimum. There were cavities in the walls of excess huts." When the mine was developed last January, it was in its most weakened condition.

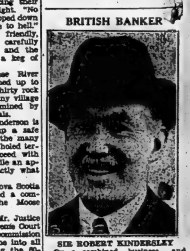
Since 1877 men had dug crosscuts and stopes underneath and sunk new shafts. The ground was undermined. It was done by "tributers"—lessees, who work portions of the mine and pay a portion of their findings for the concession. It was not to their advantage to fill in weakened sections from which ore tonnage had been gouged out. Thus it went down through the years until Dr. Robertson and Herman Magill took possession of the mine.

No Plans of Workings

There were no plans to the underground chambers. There was only valuable hours slipped by as mining engineer and engineers groped in the dark. For days the experts were baffled in their attempts to open up the old Meagher shaft, which led to the 141-foot level, even before attempts were sought through the dangerous Reynolds shaft.

Far more than half a century men had riddled the ground. The collapse was inevitable by the law of gravity. Jurymen sitting at the inquest into the death of Herman Magill, said: "We would strongly recommend that mine owners, manager and mining authorities use all vigilance in future and see to it that before anyone is permitted to enter any gold mine shaft, that it is reasonably and practically safe as far as human knowledge and ability can judge."

WALING PIPES RETURN WITH HEAT



Ottawa, May 9. — The sudden spurt of warm weather will cause a wailing ghost to stroll again in Lovers' Walk, the slope beside the Parliament Buildings. Then Reed (Lib., New Westminster), known as "The Piper on the Hill" with practices on his bagpipes in his room every night after supper, will again take to the great outdoors and play in the moonlight.

Recently his bagpipes almost became the matter of a minor political scandal, when it was found his used New Orleans molasses to keep the leather bag soft and not that from the West Indies.

Tom, who is a Scot by birth and speaks with Scotch burr, was questioned whether he used molasses or honey. "Molasses," said he; "it's cheaper." "And what particular brand do you use?" he was asked. A'm no particular," he langs it's cheap stuech," he answered, adding: "New Orleans is the cheapest."

In 1931 Tom Reid took a walk with his bagpipes in the moonlight after the Royal Canadian Mounted Police guardian of Parliament Hill had sent all the strolling lovers out from the walk. As he walked and played, the policeman came charging down armed with a revolver. "Hey!" he called "you can't play that here." "But A' dae'n' it," answered Tom.

ONE WAY STREET

by JOSEPH McCOLD

"You are encouraging, Mr. Sturges, if you willing to accept anything that is respectable.....anything that will give me a start again."

"You'll find it respectable. And who is this?"

Peggy Sawyer stood in the dining room doorway, eyes downcast and visibly embarrassed. Clinging to her sister's skirts was Madge, peering at the visitor in wide-eyed curiosity. Sturges left his chair immediately and approached the newcomers.

"I'll bet Miss Jean sent you in to meet the company, didn't she? She's told you who I am, and now I'm going to tell you who you are, fine if I can't guess. This young lady is Miss Peggy. And the little girl with the doll is.....Madge?" He seated himself on the couch and patted its seat invitingly. "I should think you'd bring your baby over here and let me see her."

"She's a new one," Madge confided suddenly. She came over and laid the doll in Sturges' lap. "Daddy brought her to me."

"She's beautiful. What name have you given her?"

"Annette."

"Of course. It's a pretty name." He inspected the toy with interest, then looked over at the donor. "That's a clever bit of wood-carving. Your work?"

"A friend," John Sawyer explained briefly.

"I like her." Mark assured Madge. "But I think you'd better hold her for me. I'm not much used to babies.....I might drop her. That wouldn't do. Did you know I have two sisters? I have."

Peggy shyly helped herself to a seat at his side to listen.

"That names are Elizabeth and Mary Ellen. Both of them are older than I and they've bossed me terribly, ever since I can remember. Does your big sister boss you?" he asked of Peggy, lowering his voice.

"No.....no, sir. Not very much."

"Then you're lucky. I've always believed that's what big sisters were made for."

"Jean's always makin' me wash," Madge contributed hopefully.

"I know it. Behind your ears, I suspect."

"Ah-huh."

"I know all about that. For some reason, sisters think they must be fussy about necks and ears. Now mine.....We're talking about you," he broke off to tell Jean as she entered the room, flushed from her preparations in the kitchen.

"Mr. Sturges, I want you to meet my brother. This is John."

"And I am very glad to make your acquaintance," was the guest's cordial greeting. "This is the whole family, isn't it?"

"All but the most important member.....Mother," Jean suggested hastily in an endeavor to divert attention from John. Number who was regarding Sturges almost belligerently after a brief handshake. "Your support is ready," she added. "That is, all it is tonight."

INSTALMENT II.

If Sturges observed the frequent little flashes of defiance sent him by Jean's brown eyes during the course of the talk, he must have been fully repaid for his efforts to put the family group at its ease as far as his presence was concerned.

John Sawyer, ex-convict, might have been one of Gotham's leading citizens. His opinions on political and economic matters of the day were sought, carefully by the street and treated with deference. Little by little, Sturges drew him out until he was conversing freely as one man of affairs to another. Jean caught an entirely new note in her father's voice, an approach to the quiet assurance of other days.

Edgeáks and its shadows were forgotten for the hour. John Armstrong Sawyer presided at his own board once more.

For the benefit of the younger members, Sturges recalled various amusing incidents of his school days, whimsical anecdotes of summers on a ranch in which his father was interested. The latter accounts were a direct bid for the interest of young John who thawed perceptibly and gave almost eager attention for the moment.

As Sturges' dinner partner, Madge was given frequent notice, so much so that Jean was forced to place a gentle check upon her excited volubility. Even Peggy was moved to tell this fascinating stranger of her school and teachers, of the "awful" arithmetic examples that Jean set. And Jean had been clear through high school!

"That I'm sure I couldn't do them," Mark admitted confidentially, "but that's arithmetic when I went to school."

"Honestly?"

"You've no idea. But it's a good thing to learn numbers."

The meal finished, John Sawyer pushed back his chair and announced with visible finality: "Peggy and I will do the dishes, Madge, you and John can help carry out the things from the kitchen. Then you'll run along with your company."

Peggy blushed uncomfortably at her father's use of the word company, but Jean promptly came to her rescue.

"That wouldn't be fair," he insisted. "I've done nothing to earn my supper and I promised I would. Let me help."

"Not this time," his host said smilingly.

"Well.....if you insist," Sturges stood aside for Jean to precede him. Sawyer closed the door hastily on the pair, forestalling Madge's attempt to slip through after them. "You stay out of there," Jean heard her father command haughtily.

Sturges strolled to Jean's piano and seated himself on the stool. "Can you sing?" he inquired, running his fingers lightly over the keys.

"Please! I didn't know you played. I mean.....at all."

"I don't. Just amuse myself with trying to pick out things."

"That one is a favorite of mine."

"Then you do recognize it? Twinkle's a favorite of mine, too."

Jean was standing at the end of the piano, resting her arm on its top. Something in her pose reminded him for an instant of Blythe Cannon at the fireplace, long cigarette holder in hand. How sweet and unassuming this girl was in contrast! Mark felt that he was having his first real glimpse of her true self.....the thing he had wanted.

He had been strangely touched by his experience of the hour. The simple home atmosphere. Very unobtrusively he had studied Jean, on quickly alert to her responsibilities, gentle and tactful. Now, for the moment, he had her to himself.

"Talk to me," he demanded. "I can listen and play at the same time."

"I would rather hear the music," she smiled.

"Then I'll stop. Audiences fuss me."

"Please don't. Mr. Sturges.....is there is something I want to tell you before the others come in." She leaned a little nearer and lowered her voice.

"What is it?"

"Just to thank you so much for what you did tonight."

"What I did? You can't mean inviting myself....."

"It was what you did for Daddy and Jack. You've no idea what it is going to mean. It has changed him more than anything has since he came back. He's been so dreadfully depressed. He tries to hide it, but ....."

"I know. It's bound to be that way until he becomes adjusted to things."

"But you did help him to forget tonight."

"Forget it your own self." Then he added, with a slight frown, "I was afraid I was overplaying my hand."

"I don't understand."

"That I acted as if I were trying to make a hit.....that I talked too much, to be quite frank. You can't know what it means to me to see the inside of a real home like this. Mighty sweet kids, those little sisters of yours. I've decided already what your mother is like, but I still want to meet her. Perhaps you'll let me."

"Of course.....if you will."

"That's settled. What's the matter with that boy?" he inquired abruptly.

"John?"

"Yes." Sturges' hands dropped from the keyboard. He looked closely at Jean. "Out of a job and generally agin the government, isn't he?"

"I'm afraid so."

"Thought as much. Bad age to be foot-loose.....and bad times. He's in a more serious situation than your father. No steadying influence or responsibility. I know boys pretty well. You should do to look for him, if he's let you. And I imagine he won't."

"I do try. But he's pretty difficult."

"Of course. He would be. But don't worry. He'll get the jolt he needs one of these days. It's late to see if he won't allow me to become a little better acquainted with him. And now.....about you."

"About me?" she echoed, looking down at him in puzzled fashion.

"Exactly." He ran the fingers of his right hand over the keys in a tinkling melody. "I've taken a bold step tonight. I think I'll venture another." He regarded her whimsically. "This going to be too much for the.....iron Block?"

"I hope not."

"I told you that I am in the habit of choosing my friends. You see, I like you.....all of you. And I'm coming again. Have I your permission?"

"Yes."

"Then I'm glad if I've earned something."

"More than you know." There was a soft light in the brown eyes Mark never had seen there.

Whatever rejoinder he might have been tempted to make was interrupted by the opening of the living room door, and Peggy entered with his children at his heels.

Once more, Sturges became the centre of the little group. Even John Junior departed from his custom of leaving the house and settled himself in a chair near Mark's. The latter's fear that Jean was embarrassed by his presence was groundless. She was more at the talk light-heartedly. A very pleasant hour for them, followed by self. More attractive than ever.

For an hour Sturges gave himself up to the entertaining of chatting with these new friends. Then there came the sound of the door bell and Peggy hurried to answer it. She was back at once, followed by a tall blond youth.

The newcomer's free and easy greeting to the family at large told Sturges this young man was a familiar friend, even before Madge flung both small arms about his knees and clamored for a white parcel that was of tantalizing size out of reach.

"Mr. Sturges, this is Mr. Browne," Jean's friend. Her heightened color confirmed it. Mark decided that, even as he found himself approving the boy's frank smile of greeting and firm handclasp.

"Don is with The Gotham Times," he heard Sawyer explaining.

"Yes? What do you do on the paper, Mr. Browne?"

"Cover headquarters mostly. Beat it, you!" This last to Madge who had made a furtive pounce on the parcel. Don laughed at her and stepped it behind his back for safety. He pulled the child between his knees and held her captive.

"That interests me," Sturges remarked. "I held a job once as police reporter for almost three weeks. I was fired bodily."

"It still happens," Browne observed cheerfully. "I've been lucky so far."

After a few minutes, Mark rose and made his excuses. Some work awaited him at his room he explained.

"We're very glad to have had you here," Sawyer asserted warmly. "I hope you will come again....."

"Soon."

"I shall. May I, Madge?"

"Ah-huh." She smiled a farewell from her enjoyable prison.

In the dimly lighted hall, Mark paused for a moment with his hand on the street door. "I hope you didn't mind if I thank.....you once more," he told Jean. "This is the most enjoyable time I have had since I came to Gotham. I mean that."

"I'm glad," she said simply. "And thank you. Good night."

"Good night." His clasp on her small fingers tightened. "Until the next time."

Jean closed the door and stood for an instant with her back against it, conscious of an odd throbbing of her heart, it was not unlike a sensation of fear..... a vague premonition.

Don's ringing laugh in the next room.

INSTALMENT 12.

"Making a play for your boss?"

Don asked the question of Jean with a mischievous grin when he found himself alone with her. The two younger girls had been banished with bribes of candy and a promise of more in the morning. John Junior had disappeared and Sawyer was reading by the table in the kitchen, awaiting the return of his wife.

"Why not?" Jean countered lightly. "Don't you think he's nice?"

"Fair enough." Mr. Browne was careful not to commit himself too much enthused.

"Had you seen him before?"

"Sure. I know all the 'celebrities by sight. I had several good looks at Blythe and the other day."

"He wasn't arrested, was he?"

"Nah. It was at the horse fair. I was all set for a quiet Saturday afternoon when Parker tells me I've got to pinch bit. My job was the winners and such junk.....covering the running story. Your boy friend drove in with that Cannon gal and her trick chauffeur."

"The sister takes quite an interest in the show," Jean observed.

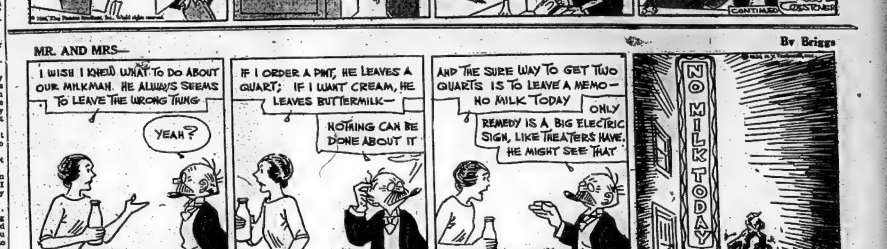
"Yeah? Well, Blythe was taking quite plenty interest in your boss, if you ask me. Went around hanging on his arm like she was afraid he'd get away. You can't blame him, neither."

Jean's first impulse was to remind Don that Sturges worked for Mr. Cannon, but she refrained it in time. There was no reason why Mr. Sturges shouldn't go places with Blythe Cannon. No need for her rushing to his defense. And yet.... Don's picture was vaguely distasteful.

She devoted herself instead to the candy box, experimenting with a chocolate-coated Brazil nut.

"Aren't you being rather extravagant?" she accused. "This isn't pay day."

"I was hoping you'd notice," Don admitted. He crossed to the couch where Jean sat and lounged comfortably at her side. "Did I ever come here before bearing gifts?" he demanded. "You had a narrow escape from an orchid, woman."



"Don! Have you had that raise?, "And how!"

"Tell me!" she begged excitedly. "Tell me!"

FAIR GETS THREE YEAR TERM

Hamilton, Ont., May 9 (CP)—Harold Hancock, 30, and Harry Davis, 21, were sentenced to three years in Kingston penitentiary yesterday when they pleaded guilty to the armed robbery of three Hamilton drug stores.

PLANTS, FLOWERS ADORN MARKET

Eggs And Butter Show No Change in The Prices

Symbols of the present growing season, today's Belleville farmers' market bloomed forth in all the variegated hues of plants and flowers, offered for sale somewhere for the first time. The red and pink of rhubarb contrasted with the deeper shades of cabbage, tomato and other plants.

Potatoes were scarce today, and yet plentiful on the market, with prices continuing to rise as the season advances. Little difference was noted between the prices asked by local seed and grain dealers and potatoes offered on the market, with the registered ninety-pound bags selling at from $3 for No. 3 grades to $3.25 for the extra large or No. 1 grades. Comparable varied prices were in use demand at from $1.80 to $2.00 the 80-pound bag.

Cabbage plants in little boxes sold at 15 cents the box of 25 while tomato plants commanding the same prices. Onion plants were 20 cents the basket, and geranium plants in boxes ranged from 15 cents to two for 25 cents. Lettuce seedlings and cauliflower plants were 15 cents the box.

In the line of finer table vegetables, rhubarb dominated at a price of 5 cents the bunch, with green onions, radishes, and lettuce also held at the same price. Asparagus was 15 cents the bunch.

Last of Syrup Offered

What is believed to be the last of this season's crop of maple syrup graduated from the gallon measure to the quart bottle today selling at 90 cents the quart. Only a limited amount was offered.

In the dairy market prices held their own. Butter was again quoted at 26 cents the pound, with two-pound rolls in some instances selling at 45 cents. Eggs remained stationary at from 15 to 18 cents. A few fowl, mostly chickens ranged from 90 cents to 90 according to weight of the bird, while plump pullets could be had for $1.50.

Lake perch, large and plump were offered in the fish stalls at 35 cents the pound or two pounds for 25 cents. One vendor stated, invited one vendor, "you might not have the change coming." It's the ends of the salmon and hoop nets have to be lifted from the water by the 10th of this month, he stated of the season. The season is later this year because the waters were given a fifteen day extension."

White fish which commanded as high a price as 30 cents the pound in outside markets at the beginning of the season this year ranged from 25 to 28 cents the pound, while lake trout were held at 20 cents. Red fin suckers were offered at 10 cents the single large fish.

At one corner of the market a small Persian kitten in a bird cage gazed appallingly through the wire bars of its new prison, "a present for one dollar" advised the owner.

GENERAL STORE

There are now 20,000 Italian troops here. The last 5,000 left with the great column which moved in from Dessye arrived yesterday, 1100 of them sick and wounded.

The little rains have settled down to earnest, carrying on for certain hours each afternoon.

Despite the discomfort of a dead rat opposite the front door, the general merchandise store of Mohammed Ali, Somali trader in Addis Ababa's business establishments was not looted, suffering only damage by fire.

Mohammed Ali and his retainers systematically moved down looters as they charged again and again during the rioting that followed Emperor Haile Selassie's flight last Saturday and preceded the entrance four days later of the Italian troops.

The fire which destroyed the store accounted for 50 of the bandits, who died, the total number of native deaths being estimated at more than at 200.

All has become quiet as the Italians clean up the town.

New York advices state that Canadian operators have been quite active recently both in their own as well as in American markets. This has been trading in Canada and the United States under favorable like Canadian Pacific, International Nickel and Canadian Ventures.

One reason why lack of support develops in many American stocks from time to time is that there is the required report of changes in security holdings to the SEC by directors and officers of companies. Support for some of these issues might have appeared on the buying side, but this rule has a number of individuals stopped. As one director said a few months ago: "It's my stock alright and it goes up, I have inside information and will be criticized if it goes down. I am lacking in judgment." Such is the inside story, for directors can and do buy stock through dummy accounts and can sell stock through same channels, but strike prevent much of the former trading and many of the latter policy if it involves large-scale buying.

With the warmer weather at hand, a large number of companies are in line for increased business. This applies particularly to the food and beverage companies, the oil companies, the building material concerns, the tire companies, and many others.

Despite the fact that prohibition has been repealed in the United States, it is nevertheless expected that Canada will be the export-area a large influx of tourists from across the border. The tourist trade is one of our best industries and should be encouraged not only by the government on the provincial and municipal, but by the citizens as well.

Gold Stock To the Fore Again.

There has been renewed interest in the gold stocks recently. It appears to be founded in the belief of inflation sentiment, states The Magazine of Wall Street. There have been many straws pointing in this direction. Perhaps the strongest is the fact that the prospective federal deficit for the current fiscal year will fall just short of the astounding $6,000,000,000 total, the indications being that the amount will be within the inflationary Frazier-Lemke Bill, and the growing new of huge devaluation. Then again, the rest of the market has been weak and it is characteristic that gold stocks usually are the greatest favorites in such situations. Unless there should occur some unexpected development as to a more nearly balanced federal budget, the gold stocks are likely to make further headway.

Commenting on the Future Price of Gold, Alexander Dana Noyes in their Mid-Week Review state that there are only three men in the world who really understand monetary systems, is an oft-repeated remark. Such a statement begs the obvious question.

The above opinion, combined with the Canadian Government's efforts to help the mining industry through stimulation of the search for new producers as well as assuring the industry of equitable and stabilized taxation, tend to explain why more attention is presently being given to mining securities.

Shareholders of the Canadian Pacific have been heartened by the remarks of their chairman and President at the Company's annual meeting on Wednesday of this week. Commenting on the question of dividends, Sir Edward W. Beatty stated: "It is hoped that, with general improvement in business conditions which now seems to be under way, and with a betterment in western agricultural conditions, a resumption of dividends at least in respect of the preference shares will be possible in the near future. Some preference shareholders have suggested as to whether the directors would await a return to conditions which would permit payment of a full 4 per cent on the preference shares before declaring any dividends. It will be the policy of the directors to re-establish a dividend on such stock in whole or in part at the earliest date consistent with prudent administration."

American market statistician have one eye on business and the other on results of primary voting in various parts of the United States. Politics, in fact, appears to be the main topic of interest in the financial district and business and foreign developments are rapidly being pushed into the background. Apparently there has been very little betting on the election yet for many are waiting to see and appraise the Republican candidate both odds on a New Deal victory have been shaded a bit in one banking-brokerage house where the present administration at one time was a heavy favorite.

Cheap Money

Today, there is another abundance of cheap money which goes begging in the private capital market and which, it is feared, may find its way into stock speculation, editorially comments The Canadian Bank of Commerce in their current monthly letter. In that event an undue inflation of security values might be followed by deflation with another period of severe loss to the public and general economic stress and strain. It should be noted at this point that the present condition of affairs is the result of government credit inflation in most major countries, coupled with a determined effort to depress interest rates, superimposed upon other monetary policies and trade restrictions which prevent a normal flow of capital for private enterprise. This pressure upon interest rates has been asserted in the belief that cheap money has a stimulating effect upon business and is therefore an effective cure for depression.

Under normal conditions, and particularly where long-range prospects of enterprise are involved, cheap money can assist in furthering the process of economic recovery. It will not long be available, however, to defaulters of obligations, cannot under compulsion, nor to inefficient businesses or individuals, if, indeed, it be available to such intending borrowers on any terms. Obviously, credit worthiness and the most effective use of credit are the best claims upon cheap money. Least of all will it be used extensively in a commercial way in an atmosphere of serious political, monetary instability. Undue State intervention in business and excessive trade restrictions, such as now hold the world in economic captivity. It is conceivable that nominal interest rates would deter borrowing. It would be lowest possible rate to chilut encourage business men to obligate themselves extensively for lengthy periods in investment undertakings, such as the world now so sorely needs to overcome its serious unemployment problem, while abnormal hazards exist.

ITALY'S ENVOY WALKS OUT OF LEAGUE COUNCIL

KASPAR FOUR TAKE TURN FOR WORSE BUT SOON REVIVE

Weaken Suddenly And Temperatures Drop Below Normal

HUMAN MILK GIVEN

Mother Progresses And Not Told Condition of Quadruplets

Passaic, N.J., May 11 (AP).—The Dionne quadruplets—Frances, Frank, Emily and Kasper—were brought to St. Mary's hospital staff worried for a time today when they took a sinking spell, but the tiny babies revived quickly and soon recovered their former encouraging condition.

As proof of their recovery from the spell, the infants had their first human milk since birth. Dr. Frank F. Jani, the physician who delivered the babies Saturday, issued the emergency call for the milk when they started to sink. Enough was obtained locally to serve immediate needs, and arrangements for a regular supply was made with a New York City dispensary.

Dr. Jani was pleased when he saw how his charges rallied after the short-lived relapse. Birth, he said, weakened suddenly during the forenoon and lost their healthy color. Hospital officials said, however, temperatures dropped below normal.

Dr. Frank F. Jani, who delivered the quadruplets Saturday issued a call for human milk. Following the declaration of Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, a ten ounce supply was rushed from a dairy farmer in this city and was being brewed here.

Condition Withheld.

Further details on the exact conditions of the babies were withheld at the hospital. The mother, Mrs. Emil Kasper, was reported recovering slowly and apparently was unaware of the change in the babies' conditions.

The sudden change upset expectations that the quadruplets had a brighter chance for life. Reports on the way they had been responding to treatment and gaining weights on identical dosages of milk.

Dr. Frank F. Jani, who delivered the babies Saturday, called the collective increase in weight "most unusual" as soon after birth. He expressed particular satisfaction that the last arrival, "not so strong" as the others, had reached the same weight while each of the others gained an ounce.

"Things look brighter," the doctor said. "We cannot overstress the importance of time in determining whether the normal, though tiny babies, weighing from 2 to 3 pounds and the weakest—weighs three and one-half pounds."

Father Real Sufferer

Emil Kasper is "the real sufferer," said Mayor Joseph Zabransky, of Little City, Monday, "for he's the whole house worker five. Zabransky and the father had to be on hand to help in case since the babies were born; people are trying to give him to every kind of a present."

Mayor Benjamin F. Turner of Passaic, where the babies were born, in Mercy Hospital, said he would go to Trenton to seek Governor Harold G. Hoffman's aid in obtaining additional help for the care of the children.

Mayor Turner also voiced the belief that the state should aid in bringing up the children.

The only girl among the quadruplets was named for Sister Frances, obstetrical supervisor at St. Mary's.

Sister Frances disclosed that the babies were premature by two months, having been expected the first week in July.

Failed to Impress With His Bad Leg

Welland, Ont., May 11.—(CP)—Alex Karoly's bad leg and his wife's tea-drinking abilities failed to impress Magistrate Maude today.

Alex told the Magistrate the three quarts of tea his wife drank in the premises were for his leg. He displayed a bare calf in court to prove he had a bad leg. He then said the tea he drank was used by people in the bedroom at his home were "not the right kind."

He was fined $100 and costs.

VICE-REGAL PARTY WILL VISIT NIAGARA AREA

Ottawa, May 11 (CP).—Just back from a trip to Windsor and Chicago, the Governor General and Lady Tweedsmuir who arrived in Ottawa May 8, now intend to leave May 13 on a tour of St. Catharines and Niagara Falls.

The mounties take a last ride! The Winnipeg detachment of the famous R.C.M.P. has been motorized and the stable call will sound no more for the rookies at the eerie hour of dawn. This picture shows a part of the Winnipeg detachment on its last ride before being unhorsed. It'll be good for the mounties, perhaps, but think of the poor novelists—and Hollywood!

BABY IS FOUND ABANDONED IN CAR

Note Attached to Attractive Child to Take Good Care Of It

Windsor, Ont., May 11—(CP)—A blue-eyed baby girl, two or three weeks old, was found abandoned early today in a car parked on the property of Rudolph Krall in suburban Ecorse.

Mrs. Krall found the infant in her husband's car at the side of their home, when she came out to get some wood for her stove. Neighbors saw a car stop near the Krall home at about 2 a.m. and it is believed that the baby was left in the car then.

Perfectly normal and exceptionally attractive, the babe weighs six or seven pounds. With her were found four little nightgowns, several tiny shirts, and a bottle partly filled with weak tea. She was wrapped in several yards of new flannelette.

The Krall home was occupied until two months ago by Alex Morrison, who now lives in Riverside. "With the baby was found a printed note, reading as follows: "Mrs. Morrison, take good care of this baby and say nothing and you will be well paid. Do not let her away as I will come for it."

Provincial police were notified and the child was turned over to the children's Aid Society, Authorities said they would have no trouble in finding a home for the baby if she is not claimed by her parents.

Cut Out Alphabet Letters To Save Paper, Lead and Ink

Italians Advised to Cut Out Silent 'P' And 'U' After 'Q'

TO FIGHT SANCTIONS

Rome, May 11 (AP)—Such things as shearing the silent "p" off "ptomaine" and cutting the letter "q" do without an assistant have been recommended by G. Bernard, Fascist grammarian, to force the Italian language into a militant combat against sanctions.

Bernard has asked Premier Mussolini and the Royal Academy to adopt an alphabet of his own reorganization and then watch it pass imports of paper, lead, ink and other writing and publishing accessories from 10 to 12 per cent.

His 25-letter alphabet is: A B C K D E F G H I J L M N O P Q R S T U V X Y Z.

"W," a useful gaily crafter in the Italian language, would be consigned to the scrap heap and Fascist could continue to say "Washington", as they invariably do, with pure contentment.

PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM

Drew, former Ontario Securities Commissioner, started before Mr. Justice Makins and a jury today. Col. Drew said he would conduct his own case while Dalton McCarthy, K.C., and Keller Hayden, K.C., acted for Mr. Walkinshaw.

Mr. McCarthy said the article complained of was written by Col. Drew and handed to the Toronto Globe for publication with the stipulation that no reply was to be published on the same date.

The article, he said in this article which I shall read to you is on the Attorney General, not on Mr. Walkinshaw," said Mr. McCarthy. "But if in the attack on the Attorney General he libels Mr. Walkinshaw, the latter has the right to reply and defend. We say the statements are false and defamatory and we are claiming our right to defend."

GATINEAU RIVER IN FLOOD STAGE

Residents Near River Receive Food by Boats

Gatineau Point, Que., May 11—(CP)—Flood waters of the Gatineau and Ottawa rivers today began to take their toll of a score of houses in this river town. In two sections men in rowboats delivered bread and milk to isolated families. A retaining wall on the Ottawa river front was two feet under water.

Many persons remained awake last night as the water continued to rise. They said most of it came from the Gatineau but the level of the Ottawa was abnormally high, flooding a large area of low-lying land on the Quebec side.

A truck-load of bear for a hotel fronting the Ottawa was delivered by boat and many inhabitants were using that mode of transportation to and from their homes.

Mayor Rodolphe Moreau posted a guard on a wooden bridge spanning a back-river and ordered all motorists and truckers warned they crossed at their own peril. Two feet of water covered some side-roads in the district but the highway into Hull was above the flood mark.

The Minister, in court, put in a good word for accused and referring to the bride who was also in court, convinced Magistrate Hawkins that she would have a good influence on her husband. The court suspended sentence.

7,000 TONS ROCK 'BLOWN' IN GORGE

Overhanging Mass of Rock Once Looked on Honeymoon Train

Niagara Fall, N.Y., May 11 (AP) —A thousand tons of rock were blown out of the Niagara Gorge bank a mile below the Falls today as engineers started clearing the place in the Gorge for the city's new sewage disposal plant. About 7,000 tons must be removed in all.

Because heavy explosions might cause rock slides in the Gorge, even from the face of the Falls, all blasts will be comparatively light.

First place blown into the river was cut from the rock wall about half-way up the 200-foot Gorge bank.

The "honeymoon special" of the now unused Niagara Gorge Railway used to run under this overhanging mass of rock. Builders of the railway plan feared it might crash and perhaps destroy the plant below.

Human Rib Becomes Ear, Plastic Surgeon Reveals

Synthetic Ear is Covered With Skin From Neck

DETOUR BY TEMPLE

Kansas City, May 11 (AP)—Taking part of a human rib to build a new and shapely ear by plastic surgery was demonstrated to the American Medical Association here today in the first public medical conference.

The technique, through which mismated ears can be matched, was explained by Dr. Vilray P. Blair, head of the School of Medicine. It was developed by Earl C. Padgett, M.D.

Blair said the rib from which the cartilages at the base of a rib forms the shell-shaped framework for the synthetic ear. The skin to cover this cartilage, and to line the cavity made "tires" constituting the ear's outer border, is taken from the neck.

Afterward the skin from neck to the neck is replaced by skin taken from the thigh. The ear's lobe then is apparent.

The skin from the neck upon which depends the final sightliness of the new ear is moved by detouring it first to the temple by the plastic method known as the pedicle flap, which is attached by one end to the temple area so that it gets its blood supply from that point of contact. It is ready to be draped down over the new ear structure and be moulded into place.

Presence of Ethiopian Unendurable to Aloisi; Ethiopia Bows to League

Withdrawal of Aloisi Does Not Mean Fascist State is Resigning From League, States Spokesman

ETHIOPIA TRUE, MARIAM DECLARES

Way is Left Open For Discussion of Ethiopia's Fate at Some Future Date, it is Reported

By JOSEPH E. SHARKEY,
Copyright 1936, The Associated Press

Geneva, May 11.—Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Italy's envoy to Geneva, walked out of the League of Nations private council session late today when the council took up the question of conquered Ethiopia.

It Duce's representative announced that Italy could not negotiate in the presence of the "so-called delegate from Ethiopia."

His dramatic exit followed a bitter protest from Haile Selassie himself against Mussolini's annexation of the African Kingdom, and Italian hints that Italy would bolt the League, rather than discuss Ethiopia in the presence of an agent of Selassie.

However, an Italian spokesman said Aloisi merely was leaving the council on this particular occasion, and that his action did not mean the Fascist State was resigning from the League.

The Baron departed with his entire delegation. One member of the delegation told the Associated Press:

"We have left because we cannot discuss this question with the Ethiopians. Moreover, as the Italo-Ethiopian question is liquidated, we do not wish to discuss the question at the council.

Selassie's representative, Wolde Mariam, has insisted upon being invited to every session of the council which discussed the Italo-Ethiopian question.

Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, presided at the council meeting.

Before he left the council session, Baron Aloisi told the assembled delegates:

"I have the honor to declare that the Italian delegation cannot attend, of the presence at the council table of the so-called Ethiopian delegate. Therefore, I request, no adoption of organization of the Ethiopian state. The only sovereignty existing in Ethiopia is that of Italy. All discussion on the subject of the Italo-Ethiopian difference would, consequently, have no object.

"Therefore, I find myself obliged to refrain from participating in the discussion.

Then he got up and walked away from the horseshoe table.

Wolde Mariam, told the council that Ethiopia had been faithful to the League treaties and had broken no law.

Then he added, left her case entirely in the hands of the council.

The council decided upon an immediate session.

The public meeting was brief and only questions of importance were touched upon before adjournment. Sean Lester presided at this.

Baron Aloisi was present. There was no mention of the Italo-Ethiopian War.

However, the council had now reached.

POLICE INVESTIGATE THEFT OF LANTERNS

Investigation of thefts of lighted red lanterns during the past several nights, taken from various excavations in the city where they had been placed for protection and being carried out this week by local police following complaints laid by officials of the waterworks department.

"Sheer, nonsensical destructiveness," one of the latest thefts on Sunday night was labelled today by manager E. T. Austin.

Driving his car whose number was not obtained by a resident of the street who saw the act on Sunday evening, an unknown man stopped the machine on Ann Street, stroke one of the lanterns from its standing above the excavation, swung the lantern around his head two or three times and then hurled it into the ditch. Entering his car he drove hastily away, No reason could be advanced today for the strange act.

Similar thefts of lanterns which grasp the lanterns from the hind seat of the machines as they pass through the streets, throwing them by the side of the road, are the cause of the latest pests with which the department has to contend it was reported. Close watch is now being kept.

POLICE STATION VERANDAH FIXED

New Posts Placed And Whole Given Coat of Paint

Presenting a neatly appearance the verandah skirting the south wall of the police station has been brightened considerably with a coat of yellow paint. New verandah posts were erected in place of the broken and decayed ones all of which adds to the general appearance of the local seat of justice.

It was without a doubt the quietest week-end we have had in years not a single arrest was necessary in Belleville since last week commenced Sergeant Arthur Harman prior to the opening of police court this morning. Only the general police routine and the reports of two bicycles being stolen interrupted the tranquil atmosphere in and around local police circles over the week-end.

Late Saturday afternoon Roland Allen, 39 Dufferin Road, reported the theft of his bicycle. Young Allen had parked his bike at the upper end of Front Street for a short period but upon his return the "bike" was missing. Later in the evening David Kidd, Bleecker Ave., reported a similar incident regarding his bicycle. Reports of the recovery of these bikes had been made in an early hour today.

The least number of transients of the season slumbered peacefully at the police station; when two low men signed the register before going to his cell block last night. On Saturday night, however, nine were afforded the same privileges. "With the weather becoming warmer naturally these men prefer to sleep outside, when it does not rain," added Chief Kidd today.

Although Motorcycle Patrolmen Sam Brown and W. R. Delaney, who patrol adjacent provincial highways, both reported a heavy increase in traffic on their respective beats, they were pleased to add that, "No accidents, not even a scratched fender," were in evidence over the week-end.

Shortly following reports regarding a tricycle being stolen, the same was recovered by the police this morning. Early today Robt. Guthrie, James St., informed the police regarding his son's small tricycle being stolen from the rear of his residence but the vehicle was found abandoned and returned to its owner by the police.

Citizens Seek Relief From Oppressive Heat On River and Road

While heat waves danced above streets and pavements residents of the city strolled hatless and coatless under the sun yesterday and on the hottest Sunday so far this year.

Scores of families found cooling comfort in the shaded woods and groves in the district, picnicking for the first time this year, while hundreds more also filled with and whose compatriots sought relief from the oppressive heat.

At Zwick's Dam dozens of bathers combatted the heat wave by splashing dips in the cool water, while off the ends of the docks south of the dam and in the harbor dozens of swimmers found temperatures of the water just right for a cool spell.

Numerous sailing boats also took the water, laden with sailors and sailorettes enjoying the fresh breezes in the open reaches of the bay.

DISMISS CHARGE OF THEFT AGAINST LOCAL CITIZEN

Lack of Evidence Frees Jas. Munroe in Tabernacle Church Theft Case

SECOND CHARGE

Judgment Reserved in Case Pertaining to Theft at St. Andrew's Church

Facing two charges of breaking, entering and theft from both St. Andrew's and the Tabernacle churches, James Munro, this city appeared in local police court today. Following the submission of the evidence in both cases, Magistrate Butler K.C., dismissed the charge of theft from the Tabernacle Church due to the lack of evidence, while judgment was reserved pertaining to the breaking, entering and theft at St. Andrew's Church which was reserved until Friday of this week. Munro, later was allowed his freedom upon providing his bail bond.

Munro elected summary trial before His Worship and pleaded not guilty to breaking and entering St. Andrew's Church. Morley Anderson, Belleville railway clerk a former member of St. Andrew's Church choir, was the first witness called. Witness told of finding a window broken in the choir dressing room at the rear of St. Andrew's church on the night of April 19th last. "After being informed of the trouble I remembered that Chief Kidd was in the congregation and upon learning that four women's purses were missing I ran out to notify Chief Kidd of the break-in. Later we ran around the south side of the church and found the accused walking across the lawn," stated Mr. Anderson.

Chief Constable Testifies

Chief Kidd told of investigating and also of questioning Munro relative to the matter. "Munro told me he was passing through the Collegiate grounds when he heard a crash. He said he ran over, and saw a man climbing backwards out of a window at the rear of the church property. Our investigations later disclosed that the purses stolen were found at the rear of the church. We found a stone inside of the choir dressing room, used to break the window," added Chief Kidd. Sergeant Harman told of a conversation between him and the accused at the police station when Munro told of meeting Archie Winters, John St., as approximately 7.45 p.m. Later Mr. Winters substantiated this statement, stating that he did not hear any noises or the sound of windows being broken.

Mr. R. D. Arnold, counsel for the accused, refused to call defence witnesses. "Your honor, there is only suspicion here in this case and I don't feel it necessary to call any evidence on behalf of the defendant. The onus is upon the Crown to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused is guilty. I submit there isn't enough evidence here today to put this man on his trial," stated Mr. Arnold as a request for a dismissal in the case.

Judgment reserved until Friday," replied His Worship.

Munro also pleaded not guilty to the charge of the theft of some 200 pieces of silverware, knives and forks, from the Tabernacle Church. Plainclothes Constable Fred Izard told of tracing the missing silver to Arden, where it had been sold to A. Somberg, local secondhand dealer. Somberg was then called and added that he had sold a quantity of silverware to a man named Gaylord at Arden, "Where did you get the silverware?" asked the Crown Attorney B.C. Donnan A.C.

"Oh, I bought it from a man I know to see. He stands about six foot two inches tall," added Somberg as he looked at Munro, who is five-foot, six inches in height.

"Well, he certainly takes what are we doing here if you can't identify the man who sold you the silverware," disgusted added Mr. Donnan as he sat down.

"Case dismissed. Next case," added His Worship.

Frank Driver Pleads Guilty

John Lacelle, R.C.A.F., motor transport driver, pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving, that resulted in the accident which occurred two weeks ago on Pinnacle St. A fine of $15.00 and costs totalling $31.50 was imposed by His Worship while the damage sustained by the other motor car implicated in the accident will be paid by the accused, it was intimated also .The accused man's driver's licence was cancelled for one year.

Charged With Theft of Clothing

William Clarke, Denbigh, was arrested by the R.C.M.P. on Saturday, charged with the theft of wearing apparel from the Dominion Government. Clarke was taken into custody and remanded until Tuesday for trial. The Federal authorities state that Clarke was employed at the Relief Project Camp No. 22 last winter, absconded with government clothes and left camp for his Denbigh home. His brother is also in custody and facing a similar charge.

Kidnappers Keep Car But Release Driver

Buffalo, N.Y., May 11—(AP) — Kidnapped by two men as he left an Erie, Pa. theatre last night, Jefferson F. Scholes, prominent attorney of Erie, was released unharmed here today.

The kidnappers kept his car, and made certain they had his operator's license and registration papers in the wallet they took from him. Buffalo police learned they wanted his car, and merely took him on the 90-mile ride from Erie so he could not report the theft immediately.

Sobel said they told him they were sorry to inconvenience him, "but are making it hot for us." In the belief they might be headed for Toronto, Ont., or Niagara Falls, Ont., police guarded border bridges.

Taxpayers Warned Not To Take Advantage of Loophole in the Act

Toronto, May 11 (CP)—Any taxpayer who might take advantage of a technical loophole in the Ontario Income Tax Act to escape payment of his tax will be prosecuted, it was stated today by Premier Mitchell Hepburn to expect retaliation.

It has been reported, that fatality drafting of one clause has made the Act ineffective, but the Premier and Attorney-General's department called the measure "unbeatable."

In any event, Premier Hepburn said, it would be possible at the next session to introduce retroactive amendments which would not only close the loophole but impose penalties on anyone, who took advantage of the error.

Youth is Questioned About Brutal Slaying

Chicago, May 11—(AP)—A young lumberjack, his right hand knuckles lacerated and some of his clothing flecked with blood, was questioned today by police investigating the brutal slaying of Mrs. Lillian Cofid, 38, accused connoisseur of colonial antiques.

Sergeant James Coleman said he was told by Joseph Ray, Sturtevant Park, 23, of Memphis, Tenn., Saturday morning at his room in the Y. M. C. A. Hotel—a block from the Y. W. C. A. Hotel, where Mrs. Cofid was found dead in death in a mysterious attack Saturday.

Sergeant Coleman reported Furr told him he scraped his hand in a fall and that the injury accounted for bloodstains found on his shirt, trousers and handkerchief in his room.

Isaac Roy Hess, 22, who gave his home as near Memphis, was also picked up at the Y.M.C.A. lodgings, Sergeant Coleman said both youths told him they had visited the apartment Saturday night but he said there were discrepancies in the times and events they mentioned. Both denied any knowledge of the Cofid slaying.

VOTE ON BUDGET MAY COME TUES.

ury Week of Committees Work is in The Offing

Ottawa, May 11.—(CP)—Parliament resumed today with the prospect shortest budget debate in recent years will conclude this week. A royal assent proclamation is week after former Premier Bennett opened the session.

Members face a busy week of committee and caucus for the Railway Committee no other seems in a position as yet to make a final report to parliament.

The sittings of the special Railway Committee may be prolonged beyond, as there is a possibility the railway legislation, designed to relieve the present Canadian National Board of Trustees with a Board of Directors, may be sent to this body. The railway legislation has yet to receive second reading.

Main work of the government outside the House of Commons during the week will be with respect to relief agreements with the Provinces under the new relief legislation.

Agreements with Ontario and Saskatchewan may be the first signed. Premier Bracken of Manitoba conferred with Labor Minister Rogers this week and Premier Hepburn of Ontario was here the previous week. The Ontario Premier may be back in the capital again this week.

The budget debate was the main item of importance in the Commons last week when all the party leaders spoke. The only amendment was offered by the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation.

It was to the effect that proposed policies should be changed to conform with the C.C.F. idea of using instruments of production for the benefits of the producers.

MAY HEAT WAVE IS ABOUT OVER

Not Spell Responsible For Two Deaths by Drowning

(By The Canadian Press)

May, a month of spring weather shock in the eastern and Central and Western Ontario after spotless and sizzling mid-April days for three days. The out-of-season hot spell was responsible for two deaths by drowning.

Thousands of persons escaped the heat during the week-end at beaches. Many hundreds of them spent in swimming, although the temperatures were scarcely in keeping with the 85-degree level of the thermometer reading.

Douglas Rodgers, 11, of Toronto, got beyond his depth, while swimming in the Don River Saturday afternoon and sank while several school boys swam nearby. The body was recovered 45 minutes later. And Noble, 31, of Toronto, drowned in Sturgeon Lake, near Gravenhurst, yesterday, when his outboard motor boat capsized. Two others in the boat were rescued.

Brief rains early last night brought the temperatures over much of the Province. Further showers were predicted today and the weather man assured Ontario it need not worry for a while about further summer-vacation weather.

Mrs. Marie Galbraith and E. Smithson rendered piano selections throughout the afternoon. Misses Mary E. Smithson, Hulda Hunter, Beverley Foster and Evelyn Mitton acted as hostesses for the home cooking and candy tables, Mrs. J. Reddick, Mrs. R. L. Fraser and Mrs. J. Reddick poured tea.

Trenton's Tax Rate Same as Last Year

At a recent meeting of the Trenton town council the tax rate for 1936 was struck and will remain the same as last year, 53 mills. Relief for during the past month dropped almost one half over the month previous, the month of April when the relief costs were $8,861.90 and the month of March, the highest cost the town of Trenton ever $17,000.00 the mill rate was struck as follows —Town Purposes, 36.6 mills; Direct Relief—8.3 mills; Separate Schools 11.6 mills; Public Schools, 11.6 mills; High Schools, 5.8 mills. Total 53.90 mills. Town expenditure for the month of April are listed as follows—Harbor and Public Works $163.00, Printing and By-Laws, $64.97; Direct Relief $6,981.90; Salaries $823.00. The large cut in the relief costs for the month of April was due to their wood supply being cut in half, that is where they were getting one cord of wood the amount was cut to one half a cord. Two hundred and ninety-five recipients were cut off in the past month and it is expected that more will also be taken off as soon as works open up. At present there are 334 families on relief. Councillor H. O'Rourke and H. Burns by a unanimous vote were appointed to purchase seeds and potatoes to distribute to the unemployed so that they may plant their gardens. A community garden will be obtained and that potatoes can be raised for the needy during the coming fall and also will be from eight to ten acres in size.

QUADRUPLETS TO SEE QUINTS TODAY

Girls From Oklahoma Enjoying Northern Climate

(By A. E. Fulford)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

North Bay, Ont., May 11.—(CP) Five pretty young girls—quadruplets jumbled off railway berths early today to find themselves far from their native Oklahoma and only a few miles away from Callander, where they will be guests during a visit to Premier Hepburn.

Mrs. Oliver Dionne, Roberta, Lock, Mona ang Mary, found Northern Ontario's early morning air exciting but postponed further comment on the land of the Quints until they had enjoyed a big plate of fish-fry trout at breakfast.

Mrs. Dionne and Ambassadors, the 20-year-old sisters will see the Quintuplets during their visit Lake Champlain camp near here this afternoon and return to Callander Town reserving for an appointment with Dr. Allan Roy Defoe. They have brought their own nurse and they will be guests of the Ontario Government.

A dozen reporters and photographers met the party at the railway station platform decided immediately they were not identical quadruplets. Two were much alike and the other pair are more inclined to buxomness.

Mrs. Dionne, in other words, but no one got them unscrambled enough to figure out which made up the pairs.

EMPEROR SUFFERS A HEART ATTACK

Selassie's Health Not Broken By Gas Attack Claimed

Jerusalem, May 11 (CP.-Havas) —Emperor Haile Selassie suffered a heart attack today.

Members of the Negus' entourage declared his condition "was satisfactory" at present.

They denied rumors current in the city that the Negus' health was broken by a gas attack suffered in the fighting in Ethiopia.

Haile Selassie persisted in hope of regaining full independence for his East African empire, even though his capital was captured by Italy.

The king of kings declaring further military resistance to the Italian invasion impossible and his own presence in Addis Ababa "a real menace," said he quit his capital to "pursue freely our efforts to safeguard the independence of Ethiopia."

"We should have remained in Ethiopia if it could have served the interests of our dear people, but neither our desire nor imprisonment would have attained this goal," he said.

A secretary to the Negus read his statement after Haile Selassie received correspondents yesterday at the hotel where he has lived with his family and fellowers since reaching Palestine Friday. The Emperor appeared and said weary.

ANNEXATION HARD NUT TO CRACK

British Ambassador to Ethiopia Will Continue Office

By GEORGE HAMMELTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

London, May 11 (C.P. Cable) — The great powers are grappling with the problem of Italian-annexed Ethiopia.

Two steps are probable:

1. Joint representations by the foreign legations at Addis Ababa to the Italian commander-in-chief, Marshal Badoglio, and through the League of Nations council, thus leaving all existing league sanctions in force.

The council is meeting today in Geneva.

Premier Mussolini's annexation of Ethiopia has left some hard nuts to crack. Informed British quarters point out that military occupation of part of the country does not constitute formal annexation of the whole of it. For the other powers, Ethiopia is still Ethiopia until they formally recognize the incorporation into the Italian empire. And the question of recognition has not arisen.

To Continue Office

Sir Sidney Barton will continue to represent Britain at Addis Ababa "for the present," the British withdrawal, it is added, would not imply recognition that Ethiopia as an Italian colony.

Mussolini has not so far indicated his intentions with respect to British economic rights in Ethiopia. These comprise the head-waters of the Blue Nile, which waters the Sudan and Egypt, and grazing rights along the frontier of British Somaliland.

In the receding background also lies the Treaty of 1906 under which Britain, Italy and France sought to divide Ethiopia into zones of economic influence while recognizing its political independence.

Marlene Dietrich The Best "Man"

Yuma, Ariz, May 11 (AP) —The best "man" among 200 sun-scorched studio workers, making a movie in the desert near here, is a mere woman, Marlene Dietrich. She has only collapsed once and had hysterics twice.

That's not much, considering two camels and a donkey died and 13 men required complete hospitalization in the past three weeks. They went down under the crushing heat, which sometimes soars up to 146 degrees.

The sun is ferocious. There are snakes in the sand dunes. The whole area is alive with scorpions, gad-flies and other creatures. Dysentery and typhoid have joined the unholy menagerie and done more damage than all the rest put together.

Through all this, Miss Dietrich moves, cool, serene, apparently untouched.

GLOOMY PHILOSOPHER PASSES

Oswald Spengler, German philosopher, is dead at Munich. He was known as the pessimist extraordinary of contemporary Germany and began life as an obscure teacher before he wrote his "Decline of the West" shortly before the Great War. In that book ready by 1914 but not published until 1918 he predicted the fall of the western civilization in 200 or 300 years, seeing danger in the proletarian revolution and the extermination of whites in a colored world revolution. He continued this gloomy work in "The World of Decision," which is more melancholy and black if possible.

He foresaw the fall of the west like that of Greece and Rome. "Germany has fallen but the course of our enemies is nearly run. The downfall of the Occident is approaching. Western Europe has passed its zenith and it must now look forward to a rapid decline. Our overpresumptious pride of intellect is the pride that comes before a fall."

Spengler who denounced all existing forms of government in the Western World, said that Asia had taken back Russia. He declared the World War was the defeat of the white races and the peace of 1918 the first triumph of the colored world,now entitled to sit in on conferences in disputes of the Western countries.

In his later days he expressed as much contempt for Nazi Germany and fascism as for democracy and he failed to attack the Jews."

He declared that the modern mechanical world could not but spell its own doom as the standard of modern technique required 100,000 highly-qualified human beings, which he doubted could existed.

It may be pointed out that this gloomy philosopher was a failure as a poet, whose art he attempted as a young man.

In some ways of the present Nazi, Spengler appeared to glorify force, calling man a carnivorous animal and therefore a beast of prey. His idea of the rise and fall of civilization, was not a new one, Neitzsche having some such idea, forty years ago. But Spengler brought an immense amount of illustration to his idea, citing parallels in his encyclopedic studies. A New York Times writer commends "Whether or not his theories corresopnded to reality, he painted a world panorama that, like a great play or a great symphony is its own justification for existence."

He predicted out of the modern situation the return of dictatorship to the world, before Mussolini or Hitler reached their stride.

MECHANICAL PERFECTION

These are days of new records, the Hindenburg floats across the sea from Friedrichshafen to Floyd Bennett Field in less than 62 hours and may make the return trip in 45 hours. The commodore Cape Town record was carried off last week by Amy Mollison. Almost every day science is breaking new ground with modern experiments. Indeed in science and mechanics one hand in hand.

And with modern intellect and mechanism the nations march too. Italy, modernized and mechanized to the hilt has smashed all things in Ethiopia, and war has lost some of its old flavor. Bravery is no longer given the slightest opportunity of reward except in confidence of a fight well fought. Time was when a good swordsman had a fighting chance, today a citizen or a soldier has none. Such will tempt some leaders, but it ought to frighten nations out of the war notion forever.

How far is this immense development due largely to mechanical perfection likely to go? Among nations will one nation go farther than another in this mechanical development? If it does there may be danger. Then again it seems such developments can go on just as long as nations can endure to pay the cost which amounts in the long run to this—that they must be profitable or something else must bear the cost of this development. Or will the present trend ultimately mean a war with the mechanical inventive genius paramount, a war without so much loss of life as of power to construct mechanism, though at present the chief fear is loss of civilians and soldiers as well.

How far will this mechanical progress go to create a conscieceless imperialism and how far will it tempt it in frustration of the common understandings of peoples? Is there such a thing possible that a nation once tasting conquest through scientific warfare may continue to be pricked on to further conquest and ultimate destruction of itself and of others?

MOTHER HONORED

Down to fundamentals the world went on Sunday as it placed motherhood in its proper place as the keystone of life. Upon parenthood is built all that is best in life, especially love and devotion. Children may forget but mothers do not forget their own.

It is well that the world should halt and meditate upon the finest things in life, all that is noble and all that is best. Such a day's observance may help to prevent boys and girls, young men and young women falling into wrong appraisal of life values, for it is human beings that are paramount, they should be the be-all and the end-all of life.

If there were in the relations of people to one another, in commerce, in work, in pleasures, something of the spirit of the relation of mother and family, the world would be living near the golden rule of life.

One thing is certain, he who does not devotedly love his mother and father, has missed everything of life, no matter whatever he achieves of worldly things or progress, while he who does love his parents with a true love, has a defence against allurements of the world and something that will plead mightily for him against shortcomings in other things.

RESURRECTION

The chill of March upon my heart,
And April tears in the eye,
And my wonting steps on the garden path
Where my friends are sleeping lie;
Your forms are hid but I feel you near
'Neath the oozy, wrinkled loam;
But other hands will greet you,
And lend you when you come.
God's voice doth call you from the gloom
Unto the perfect day;
Obedient to that voice I, too,
Must be upon my way.
I may not tarry, my garden;
The gate from the latch swings free,
The road winds out like a ribbon,
There's a call on the wind for me.
Oh! rather the ache of a burden,
And the gird of tired feet;
The heat and dust of the highway,
Than dreams in a garden sweet,
And it's over the Treasure just over the hill!
And it's ever the Soul-thirst quest—
And the rise and fall, 'till we rise no more,
And the shadows grow in the west.

SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO THE TIMES WAS BORN AT WATERTOWN, NEW YORK, and the babe has grown and waxed strong and influential in the affairs of the nation and in the hearts of the people. Recently The Times newspaper celebrated its seventy-fifth birthday by issuing a 75-page edition which was in all respects worthy of the occasion and the staff responsible for the daily appearance of this fine palladium of opinion and current news which serves Northern New York State so well. Watertown is a grand old town, or rather city, although the Public Square with its large grand old-time Woodruffe Hotel, reminiscent of the Southland, does lend an air of the old-fashioned country town. That and the narrow space which marks the exit to a narrow Court Street, leading to a thoroughfare called River Street, so-called, no doubt, because of the alcoholic current which flowed through it constantly—with high tide from dark to daylight, if we remember our topography, relieved somewhat by the Paddock Arcade which leads to another narrow street on which the Times building was located. The Times has always been the leading newspaper of Watertown, although The Standard made a big bid for leadership in the not distant past. Then a newspaper called the Daily News came into being and endured for a very popular support. It was published in the flat over Dave Elicher's saloon on that narrow side street which carried so much business. Dave's beer and hamburger certainly provided much inspiration for the editorial staff, while the printers can taste the hops in his most excellent brew yet—those who have any tastern left, that is—however, The News soon folded up leaving some mourners, but few regrets. The Watertown Times has passed through good and stormy times but it has retained its prestige and popularity and grown stronger in the hearts of the people as the years have marched by. That its next seventy-five years be its fairest and most pleasant is the wish of this Central Family Journal.

ROLLER SKATING IS COMING INTO POPULAR FAVOR SO FAST in Belleville that it will not be surprising to hear of roller skate parades, afternoon teas, and sich like. Perhaps special runways will be constructed on the golf links to permit golf on skates. That may be ninth hole blasphemy, to the old timers, but if it be treason make the most of it.

BETTER OFF DEAD SAYS SAD FATHER

Sees Son Advanced to be Known as "Public Enemy No. 1"

Nashville, Tenn., May 11—(AP)—A care-beni father saw the name of his boy advanced to the head of the United States list of "public enemies" today and sorrowfully expressed the belief the errant son probably would be better off dead.

"But I am still hopeful he is alive," quickly added gray haired Thomas H. Robinson, Sr., whose son has been hunted for more than a year and a half as the kidnapper of Mrs. Alfred Snell of Louisville, Ky.

The 26-year-old fugitive succeeded to the dubious position of the most hunted criminal following the capture this week of William Mahan, Wewerhaeuser kidnap suspect, in his latest thrust of the United States Government against criminals.

His 63-year-old father is one of three persons now whom the question "is Robinson dead or alive?" hangs constantly in the balance. The fugitive's wife, who has applied for a divorce.

The third person is the hunted man's six-year-old son, Jimmy. His mother said he was being brought up to believe his father is dead.

ECKENER CHATS IN NAVAL STATION

Says Story of Disfavor in Germany Misunderstanding

(By SAMUEL G. BLACKMAN
Associated Press Staff Writer)

Lakehurst, N. J., May 11—(AP)—Dr. Hugo Eckener, Commodore of the zeppelin fleet, and Captain Ernest Lehmann, skipper of the giant dirigible, Hindenburg, walked smilingly into the waiting rooms of the naval air station Saturday and said almost together:

"A very successful trip."

Dr. Eckener, grizzled veteran of the ocean air, surveyed the throng waiting his arrival, jand plainly showing his , enthusiasm - at the accomplishment of his latest flight.

"Well, very here. You already know as much about that as I do."

The trip seaward, Eckener said, should be easier and might be made in 48 or 48 hours.

"What is this about you being in disfavor in Germany?" some one shouted.

Dr. Eckener laughed.

"That was misunderstood," he said.

"While America is heralding this trip, the report here is that in Germany it is getting scant notice," another reporter told him. "How do you explain that?"

A smile left the face and he answered quickly:

"I don't believe it."

Dr. Eckener said the crossing from coast to coast — Southampton, England, to Montauk Point, Long Island—took only 53½ hours.

As he spoke, Captain Lehmann stood by his side on an elevated platform.

"Who's got a smoke," he said. "That's what I want now."

Malone, N.Y., May 9 (CP)—The motor went dead. The plane crashed. Clarence E. Durtwi, Malone aviator, and William F. Drachor, Potsdam policeman, clambered out of the wreckage last night with minor injuries. Then they shrugged up. Each insisted the other had filled the fuel tank. Neither had.

Old Time Hobo Goes Hungry New Type of Drifter is Cause

New Type of Aimless Wanderer, Crashes Front Entrance

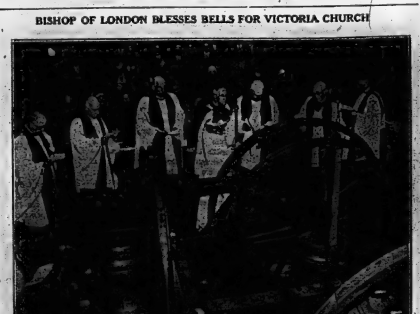
'TOUGH' ON OLD

The genuine down-at-the-heels and down-on-his-luck transient now is feeling the way on the roads and highways, calling at odd times at back doors for a hand-out which might ease the pangs of real hunger, is being seriously handicapped by a new type of aimless drifter, generally befuddled and stupefied by beverage concoctions they mix themselves.

This is the type who go, not to back doors, but to front doors of residences, demanding not food but cash, and become insulting and abusive when the request is not forthcoming, according to Rene Hamel, temporary visitor to the city today.

Seating his pack at the fire hall briefly before continuing on, Hamel bemoaned the lot of the weary traveller these trying times.

"Everybody's tough these days, housewives and policemen and even the dogs. And you can't blame them. A few are spoiling it for all. A year or two ago it wasn't so bad. Then you could at least get a sandwich or two, and welcome; now we get the door slammed in our face."



The country has a new problem, pointed out Hamel. Ever since a certain percentage of the travelling fraternity have learned how to get drunk and drunk quickly and completely and giddily on their own homemade recipes, the habit has spread and is growing. Those are the trouble makers, it was added.

"Go to a drug store, say store, and get some aspirin. Drop a couple into a glass of a certain soft drink or a glass of beer. Pfffft! Just like that. Also a bottle of paregoric is certain to produce results, and flavoring extracts and "rubbing" and cheap wine. They're all easy to buy and easier to use," declared the visitor.

The condition of complaints recently in this city of transients becoming abusive and threatening when refused cash or food is not peculiar to Belleville alone, declared Hamel. It is a recent development and is evident in Kingston, Napanee, Peterborough, London, Lindsay and other cities. Here as in Belleville the hoboes are leaving the rounds, courage and feelings fortified by their cheap beverage concoctions which if used to excess will make them dangerous characters.

Pilfering fires, odours of mulligan stews and other road chicken surreptitiously lifted from the roost in some farmer's hen house are not the rule and none in the jungles by the tracks in almost every town in the province at the present time. The call of the open road has resulted in a amazing migration of the wandering clan. Railway police have become more alert, scanning each incoming and outgoing freight for its quota of riders, and even inspecting the sings of the passenger cars where the more hardy and experienced travellers use the less popular "blind baggage" route in place to place.

Belleville, through the alertness and aggressiveness of railway and Provincial Police of the local office, has become a place of small welcome, insofar as the jungle is concerned. Formerly a steppingplace for the weary and known by the mysterious grape vine route as a good place to lay over, both jungles east and west of the city were well populated nights. The

FRONT ROAD LADIES' AID

The May meeting of Front Road Ladies Aid was held at the home of the president Mrs. T. J. Rowen on Thursday afternoon with an attendance of fifteen. Meeting opened by singing a hymn Mrs. M. Hall at the piano in the absence of the pianist.

The Lord's prayer was repeated in unison. Mrs. Doris Reid very kindly carried on the secretary's duties for the day as the secretary Mrs. R. Hall is at present ill in Belleville General Hospital and for whom all expressed hope for a speedy recovery. Minutes of last meeting were read and approved. A letter of thanks from Mr. Les Purdy was also read by the secretary for flowers sent by the Aid at the time of the death of Mrs. Purdy, one of the Aid's valued members whose death took place since the last meeting, and to whose relatives sincere and deepest sympathy is extended.

Mrs. R. Sadder then read the Scripture lesson John 14 verses 1-31. As there was no study book being done at this meeting most of the afternoon was spent in discussing business of the Aid. It was moved by Mrs. R. Sadder and seconded by Mrs. R. Sadder that 25 dollars be contributed to the Minister, Rev. Mr. Keough for his summer expenses. Delegates were appointed to attend the Ladies Aid Convention in Stirling on May 20th, namely, Mrs. T. J. Rowen, Mrs. G. Wilkinson, Mrs. R. Geddes and Miss Doris Reid.

Roll Call was answered by a verse of Scripture containing the word "love" and November was chosen as the keyword for the next meeting.

Members were very glad to welcome a newcomer in the meeting Mrs. T. Whittle who has recently moved into the community.

After the meeting closed with benediction and singing of grace, a dainty lunch was served by the lunch assistet by Mrs. N. Brown and Mrs. H. Crossrig.

Everybody Wave a $20

Before the Romans came, everybody wore a kind of kilt, says Pearson's Weekly. Many of the people were driven north, into the Highlands, and their descendants have worn kilts ever since. The people who remained in the conquered territory were also conquered by the Vikings, the Danes and so on. From these peoples confeathers copied the custom of wearing the coverings on the legs which, for reasons of time, have become trousers.

Guerrilla Warfare

Guerrilla warfare is a warfare carried on by small independent bands against larger bodies of troops, the fighting being done from ambush or by sudden raids. Much of the fighting of the Americans in the Revolution, especially in the South, might be called guerrilla warfare. The word is the Spanish diminutive of guerra, which means war.

Deals in Human Hearts at Red Cross Office

The Red Cross Social Service Secretary deals in human hearts as she sits in front of her desk at 18 Red Cross headquarters in Toronto.

Nearly every day of the year there are a number of men, veterans of the war, waiting to see her. Patiently she listens to their tales of hardship, of sickness and of suffering, investigates their stories, and if possible, where the need is worthy, gives them assistance. This assistance usually takes the form of surgical appliances, dentures, glasses, special nourishment, clothing, layettes for their new babies, medicines, etc.

"Not only veterans but others, too, come for help," she stated in a recent interview. "Some of the requests for help are rather unusual, and, while we cannot extend help to everyone as our funds are limited, we do try to lend a helping hand where the need is urgent.

"Yesterday, for instance," she said, "a young fellow of thirty odd, straight of carriage with clear blue eyes, came hurriedly into the Red Cross office. He took a telegram from his pocket, which unfolded a sad tale of an old mother dying in Kitchener and asking for her son. Many efforts had been made that morning by this ex-soldier to raise sufficient funds to enable him to be bedside of his mother, without success. I wondered . . . perhaps . . . could the Red Cross . . . ," he faltered. Upon investigation, the Red Cross did, and he sped on his way.

"Yes, ma'am, I am headed back to Saskatchewan," stated a man at her desk the other day. "I have enough to feed me — but nothing by foot from Montreal, my boots are done for. Some of the toes show my socks. My heart baby was coming and she had no clothes for it. Could the Red Cross . . . ." Of course they could. There are always kindly workers to clear the mother and clothe the little one where the need is apparent.

"My husband has been in bed for two years completely paralyzed," said a little lady one day. "The doctors think a back operation would make him more comfortable. Could the Red Cross . . . ."

And one day two little children were brought in with a nondescript looking pup — but, grimy, dishevelled and lost. Could the Red Cross take care of them and do something about finding their parents? Right hands bandaged aided little hands. Puppy was given a cool drink and, while arrangements were being made to locate their lonely home, ice cream cones were gleefully licked.

A world of humour, human interest and sad stories every day in the Red Cross headquarters in Toronto.

Nearly every day of the year answers to the constant question— "Could the Red Cross . . . ?"

This question is being answered in a kindly and intelligent way by local Red Cross Branches in many parts of Ontario.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma came in the living room carrying a new picture in a frame, pop saying, Yes gods what's that, if anything?

It's an original Zinker, if that means anything to you, and if it doesn't mean anything to you please allow me to inform you that Zinker stands number one in head and shoulders above all the young modernistic painters of the present day, ma said, and pop said, How young is he? If he's less than 8 I'd say it was a pritty promising piece of work, he said.

Dont make such a special point to show your ignorania, it speaks for itself, ma said. This is an ery Zinker, she said, and pop said, Well I guess so of cuet the werm, nothing ignored.

Imagine buying an original Zinker for 14 dollers, even in Hookinhers art department, ma said, and pop said, Imagine buying one of any price anywhere. What's the title of it, Skipping Rope? he said.

Why should it be Skipping Rope? does it really resemble a piece of rope thing? ma said, and pop said, Does it remotely resemble anything else?

Of course, ma said, and pop said, Well just what, if that's not prevaling the point too far?

It resembles Just what it's supposed to be, and if I could only remember the correct title you'd agree with me, ma said. Or else now what did this salesman say the name of it was? she said, and pop said, It mite be Coming Through the Rye, it looks like the work of somebody that just came through several bottles of rye. What does it look like to your fresh unbiased eyes, Benny? he said.

Like nothing, I said. Wich it did, and ma said, And that's the answer, because now I remember, it's called Civilization. I'm shure we could anything be nearer nothing than that?

You win, pop said, and ma hung it up, telling wich was the oop and by the wire on the back.

The church was beautifully decorated with white and red carnations sent as tributes by Mr. and Mrs. Newton Laughlin in memory of their mother, Mrs. Eliza Morton Laughlin and also with a beautiful vase of white carnations and red gladiolis sent by Mrs. L. Clement in memory of her mother, Mrs. W. F. Mahler.

Rev. I. R. Naylor took as his theme, "The Ideal Mother" as portrayed in the 31st Chapter of Proverbs. The hymns were with Mother in keeping with the day, and special music was rendered by the choir, under the direction of Mrs. W. F. Bradley.

A Mother's Day programme was presented by the Sunday School at the afternoon session. Addresses were given by two of the mothers, Mrs. Fisher and Mrs. Shorey. Recitations about Mother were given by Donaldine Kilpatrick, Alice Galpin and Hollis Hannah, Jean and Betty Shorey sang a duet, "Mother Machree." The orchestra furnished appropriate music.

Dared Death for Riches

When trade first began between Europe and the Orient, in the days of Columbus, the sea journey was as dangerous as men of that day could attempt. But it was not the dangers of life that tempted men but rather the luxuries which brought back to Europe, fetched overtimes in those hardy enough to venture.

QUADS TO PAY QUINTS A VISIT

The famous Keys quadruplets of Waco, Mona, Mary, Leota and Roberta (LEFT to RIGHT) were pictured as they boarded a train that will take them to Callander, Ont., where they will meet the Dionne quintuplets and invite them to visit Texas during the centennial year. All the girls are accomplished musicians, and they'll serenade the famous Canadian babies, if allowed to. They will visit Toronto on their way home.

CAPITOL

"Cappy Ricks Returns"

One of the leading contemporary authors provided the amusing plot of "Cappy Ricks Returns", Republic production which comes to the Capitol theatre for a run of two days, starting today.

The author is Peter B. Kyne, native of San Francisco, and his character, "Cappy Ricks", has become world famous since Kyne published his first book about him in 1916. Cappy Ricks was subsequently the hero of a famous series of Saturday Evening Post stories which ran for many years. These stories also appeared in the Cosmopolitan Magazine and were syndicated in the Hearst newspapers.

Kyne's most famous books have been "Three Godfathers," "The Long Chance", "Cappy Ricks", "The Valley of the Giants", "Kindred of the Dust", "Tide of Empire", "Pride of Palomar," "Never the Twain Shall Meet" and "Parson of Panamint".

His famous character, Cappy Ricks, was suggested by the career of the late Robert Dollar, for many years a leading figure in Pacific Coast lumber and shipping circles. Many other characters in "Cappy Ricks Returns" were also suggested by real life characters. Matt Peasley, who became Cappy Ricks' son-in-law, in the series of stories, was suggested by Captain Matt Peasely, who, at the present time, is master of a steamship in the Pacific Coast lumber trade.

"Cappy Ricks Returns" has all the charm and amusing complications of the original series. It deals with Cappy's efforts to outwit his patent roofing business rivals who are sponsoring a bill to make wood-en shingles illegal in the State of California. This, of course, would be a direct blow to Cappy's thriving lumber business and his subsidiary shipping interests.

The title role is played by Robert McWade, who was recently seen in "The Healer".

Members of the cast include Ray Walker and Florine McKinney, Oscar Apfel, Bradley Page, Lucien Littlefield, Lois Wilson, Mary Mason, Iain Dean and Kenneth Harlan.

Free to the ladies on Monday and Tuesday another piece in the set of Genuine Hostess Ovenware.

BELLE

"Little Lord Fauntleroy"

An old friend in a new guise was warmly welcomed at the Belle Theatre on Saturday when little Freddie Bartholomew acquainted us with a completely de-stuffed "Little Lord Fauntleroy," bereft of the traditional long golden curls plush suit, lace collar and baby blue ribbon sash, but none the less lovable for that.

The outstanding screen offering of David O. Selznick, who made such grand hits as "David Copperfield", "A Tale of Two Cities" and "Dinner at Eight" is a doubly important occasion in that it also marks a triumphant return to the screen after four years for the lovely Dolores Costello Barrymore, who is co-starred with Freddie in the role of the lord's adored young mother, "Dearest".

Adapted to the screen by Hugh Walpole, the famous novelist, this handsomely produced film is an auspicious start for the newly organized Selznick International Pictures Company.

It tells, in heart-warming terms the familiar story of the little American lad, who became a lord and went to England to live in a castle with his grandfather, the gruff, gout-ridden, old Earl of Dorincourt (C. Aubrey Smith), and was separated from the dear widowed mother whom the stubborn Earl refused to receive inside the castle gates because his son had married her against his wishes.

The Old Earl Transformed

How the child wins his way into the old man's heart and transforms him into a loving and delightful grandfather is charmingly depicted amid smiles and heart tugs and tears.

Eventually the old Earl softens even toward "Dearest" but is too proud to seek her out until his new found happiness is endangered by the appearance of another claimant to the title of "Fauntleroy". The story has a happy ending, however, with all the difficulties ironed out and everybody gloriously happy.

Freddie Bartholomew is even better than as "Copperfield" and Dolores Costello Barrymore is as effective as she is beautiful as "Dearest". C. Aubrey Smith is perfectly cast as the old Earl and the remainder of the cast, which also includes Henry Stephenson as Havisham, Guy Kibbee, as Mr. Hobbs, the grocer, Mickey Rooney, as Dick the bootblack, E. E. Clive, Una O'Connor, Ivan Simpson and Constance Collier, is uniformly brilliant.

Jonah Cromwell has turned in a perfect piece of direction and the set unbended down her face and she sniffed profusely into her best silken handkerchief. It was her birthday. It didn't matter that lots of people had remembered. Jeff had forgotten.

Leaving the stage at the end of the first act she found the leading man, Gerry Travers, at her side.

"How's Jeff?" he asked her.

"All right, I guess," she said. "He hasn't written me for a couple of days."

There was a hint of understanding in the lift of Gerry Travers' shoulders.

"You know how it is when you're out of a job. It's hard to write letters."

Just Jeff went to Washington last week. He's rehearsing with that new play."

"He was, you mean. They're closing, didn't you know?"

"Closing?" Gale stared. She hadn't heard.

"Yes, unexpectedly. Money ran out, I guess."

"Oh," Gale had that sinking feeling again. Even Gerry knew more about Jeff than she did. "He might have told me," she murmured half to herself, half aloud.

"You know Jeff," Gerry replied. "He probably didn't want to worry you."

Gale nodded mechanically. But back in her dressing room she felt bitterly hurt that Jeff, her husband should know how much Jeff mind-ed. Writing her promptly for money. Yet it was like Jeff not to explain. He was funny about money matters.

At the final curtain a couple of hours later she walked slowly to her dressing room. She was the last one to leave the stage. She had taken a taxi all alone. Now she felt singularly tired and lonely.

With her hand on the dressing room door she hesitated, awed by an awful stillness back of her. Then she pushed open the door to find the entire company assembled in her room.

"Happy birthday to you, happy birthday to you."

As the sentimental old school song died on her, her wondering eyes took in the scene—beautiful roses everywhere—baskets, large bouquets. But when she tried to thank the troupe for them they just stared.

"They're not from us. Read the card," they said in unison.

So she did. The flowers were from Jeff, tagged "Happy birthday, kid" and this time the message said "Love."

Gerry whistled.

"All from Jeff? He must have got a raise in salary. I'm glad he didn't worth there."

Gale didn't even try to hide the tears. She just blinked them back. "I'll bet there is," she said.

Old Batavia

Batavia, principal city of Java, founded in 1619, on the banks of the River Tjiliwung, near its seashore, formerly contended to the south along the banks of the river and only during the latter years of the Eighteenth century did European growth of the spread, which is known as Weltevreden. Old Batavia, as it generally is called, antedates Weltevreden by 200 years and is built in old Dutch style. Intersected by canals and narrow streets.

Cocos Island

Nearly 3,000 feet above sea level in places, Cocos Island, that mysterious dot in the Pacific ocean, 300 miles from the shore of Costa Rica, is cut in every direction by an amazingly intricate system of narrow ravines and valleys. This, coupled with the fact that it is covered with lush grass and bushes which extend almost to the water's edge, makes it extremely difficult to explore.

Jeff Remembers

— by —

Ruth Kelly

The telegram arrived back stage ten minutes before curtain time. With fluttering heart Gale Jaffrey ripped it out of the envelope. It must be from Jeff. He had to be from Jeff! He had always remembered her birthday. Why should he forget today, just because they had finally agreed to separate?

Gale's fingers trembled as she unfolded the paper. She read the words, then let it drop. It was from Jeff all right. It was a touch. Jeff wanted to play right up to the end. No happy birthday. Not even love. Just a touch.

She didn't hesitate a minute. She wired the money. Jeff had often done as much for her and they always paid each other back. But Jeff wasn't broke. He was rehearsing with that new company at Washington. What kind of a gag was this?

Gale dropped into the chair before her mirror, propped her yellow head in her hands. Well, she could take it. She had received a lot of these messages since her success on Broadway. From friends. From mere acquaintances. From strangers.

She had sent money to lots of people. The memory of her own struggles was still too fresh for her to ignore the appeal of the actor out of work. Just a year ago she herself had been working in a small town stock company on a percentage basis, mostly without the percentage. She too had had to borrow to get back to New York. But this year the miracle had happened. The little comedy in which she had the lead had become a hit over night — and she had become a star. She was the glamorous and fascinating Gale Jaffrey.

But right now she felt about as glamorous as last year's hat. Tears, mingled with mascara, dripped unheeded down her face and she sniffed profusely into her best silken handkerchief. It was her birthday. It didn't matter that lots of people had remembered. Jeff had forgotten.

Leaving the stage at the end of the first act she found the leading man, Gerry Travers, at her side.

"How's Jeff?" he asked her.

"All right, I guess," she said. "He hasn't written me for a couple of days."

QUADS RAVE OVER DIONNE QUINTS

Oklahoma Sisters Now 21 Years Old Visit Callander

Callander, Ont., May 11 (CP)—The Keys quadruplets called on all the superlatives they learned at college and still found themselves unable to express adequately the thrill they got today when the Dionne quintuplets danced for the weekend and three kisses.

The four girls who were born 21 years ago June 4 at Hollis, Oklahoma, spent an hour gazing through a window at the babies who will celebrate their second birthday on May 28.

They decided the Dionnes were "darling," "darling," "just gorgeous", and so on. None of them had ever had a thrill like it, they said.

"They seemed so like us," said Lela Keys, usually does the talking for Mona, Roberta and Mary. "I think they know how we sympathized with them."

Representatives of the Texas Centennial Committee, the girls brought dolls, dresses, sombreros and Texas spurs, those Mexican shawls that are thrown over one shoulder, to the quints.

Later they spent an hour looking at Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe's collection of quint photographs. This afternoon they will spend on Champlain Camp Island, despite rainy weather, and tonight Dr. Dafoe has promised to show them his collection of quint motion pictures.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied by Biggar and Crawford to Jas. P. Bickell & Co.

Contrasts between the present period and that of the late months of 1929 should be obvious. The current bout of panic has followed four months of declining business, falling rates were forced by brokers' loans were weekly establishing new record peaks and four million shares per day were commonplace. None of those conditions exists today. The political situation is admittedly different, but if the present Administration in Washington is to continue its heavy spending, business must be permitted to rise so that new taxes can be carried. If profits do not expand, further taxation would be inevit. Industrial inflation would be inevit. and in either case selected common stocks should increase in price.

From a shorter viewpoint, the stock market is suffering from the strain of the summer trade recession with its attendant uncertainties, and, of course, with the developments of the political campaign. Thus resumption of a vigorous upward trend in New York may be delayed for several months. This situation is likely at the disposal of well selected issues which are selling at reasonable prices earnings representing companies whose earnings trends are forward are preferred. Apparent satisfactory yields, 'the fundamentals underlying the present industrial situation are such as to warrant the opinion that further business recession has about run its course and that recovery will be resumed in the near future. Selected issues which are selling at reasonable prices earnings representing companies whose earnings trends are forward are preferred. STARR OF CHIEFS HANDS TORONTO DOUBLE DEFEAT

Hurler Allows Only Four Hits, Two in Each Contest

3 WERE SCRATCHY

Montreal Also Loses Twin Bill To Thumping Orioles

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.)
(Associated Sports Writer)

Roy Starr of the Syracuse Chiefs, looked like an overnight sensation man of the month, has climbed to the No. 1 position in the International League pitching race.

It's nothing unusual for Starr, who seems to be just getting properly warmed up at the end of nine innings, to pitch two games on one afternoon. The way he did it yesterday, however, was almost unprecedented. He pitched both games of a doubleheader against the powerful Toronto Maple Leafs, the second of seven, being called after them both by shutouts and gave only two hits in each contest, the scores by which were equally humble chiefs won were 3-0 and 2-0.

Just to make it a bit more remarkable, three of the four hits were scratch blows, only one Toronto player got to third in the opener and only one to second in the after piece. In addition Starr made a pair of hits in the first game.

While the record books are rather shy on minor league seals in the majors the only doubleheader shutout was pitched by Ed Rustbelt of the Boston Braves against Brooklyn in 1908 and the only better performance as to hits came in 1883, when Pud Galvin of the New York Metsthe limited Outsmbes to three blows in a double-header.

Dahlgren Supports Harder

Big Babe Dahlgren provided a large part of Starr's support as through every Syracuse player his safely in the opener. He hit two triples and two doubles in the opener and another two-bagger in the nightcap.

Along with Toronto, Montreal and Newark, the other high ranking teams, suffered yesterday. The Royals took a double thumping from the fourth-place Baltimore Orioles 7-1 and 7-5 before a near-record crowd of 21,000. Newark succumbed to Rochester's batting power, 8-4, in both halves of a twin bill fiesta at the expense of Albany pitching in a doubleheader, winning 13-3 and 10-4 to run the Indians' string of losses of 13 straight.

Fred (Cherry) Fitzsimmons, Baltimore veteran, pitching three-hit ball in the opener against Montreal, while his mates belted Lauri Myllykangas out with a six-run burst in the opening inning. The Royals took a 2-0 lead in the first inning of the afternoon only to be downed by a fifth-inning blast, that netted four Orioles runs. Gus Dugas' homer was the only Montreal tally off Blake.

Duke Standed Off Hill

Rochester blasted Marvin Duke off the hill for four fourth with six runs as three newcomers took part in the 21 hit attack on their former flingers. The new arrivals were Lou Scoville in the outfield, Al Cocciniello and Bill Swanstrom in the infield.

Although Buffalo's flingers gave up 26 hits, 16 in the first game, the Senators couldn't keep up in scoring. Eight runs in the fifth clinched the opener, while heavy clouting served up the second game in the early innings despite a counter rally. George Hockette, ace hurler of Albany's hitting, getting five-for-five, including a homer in the first clash and a double and single in the second.

CARDS INCREASE LEAD

Defeat Cubs 8-1 in Game Halted in Fifth by Rain

By ANDY CLARKE
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The front office of the Cincinnati Reds is convinced that it's good now and then, even when a team's not hitting.

Paul Derringer, number one flinger of the Reds, failed to slide home in a game the Reds lost to the Giants last week, and he was suspended without pay for this sin of omission. The Reds' management announced that the failure to slide was the last straw in a succession of misdeeds; that Derringer wasn't pitching as he should and that something more drastic might be done about it. Trade talk was bandied about and Derringer began to wonder.

Again embraced in the fold, however, Derringer went to the mound against the Pirates yesterday and burned in a pitching gem that brought smiles of satisfaction to Charlie Dressen and Larry McPhail. The Reds won 6-0 with Derringer allowing but three scatterd hits and permitting only one Pirate to travel as far as third base. He fanned five. Babe Herman and Billy Myers took care of the offense, Herman having a perfect day at bat with a homer, a double and two singles. Myers also hit for the circuit, with two on.

As Derringer was coming into his own, however, Lefty Grove of the Boston Red Sox, hero of five successive victories, was being bested from the mound as the Washington Senators down the Yankeymen 4-0. Buck Newsom was the hero of this encounter, leading the potent pokers of Boston down with six safeties.

Bees Out of Cellar

In other games, the Detroit Tigers and Cleveland Indians went 15 innings before the Tigers bowed 9-7; the Boston Bees climbed from the National League cellar into sixth place by virtue of a 5-4 12-inning victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers; Joe Dimaggio, the much published rookie, hit a homer in the Yankees' 7-4 triumph over the Philadelphia Athletics and the Chicago Cubs copped top honors in the van of the National circuit by defeating the Cubs 8-1 behind the hurling of Paul Dean. The New York Giants tipped over the Phillies 7-2 and the Chicago White Sox of St. Louis Browns game was rained out.

Grove, who pitched three shutouts in winning five games, was passed for seven hits and four runs in three and one-third innings as the Red Sox lost, allowing the Yankees to slip into first place. Joe Dimaggio started the New Yorkers off on the right foot when he slapped out his homer in the first inning after having failed to get a safety in 10 successive trips to the plate. A crowd of 32,000 cheered the rookie as he ran around the bases. Bill Dickey slammed his seventh homer of the season in the fifth.

Archers Make it Tough For Golfers in Match

Toronto, May 11.— (CP)— The controversy over superiority in scoring between good archers and good golfers resulted in a challenge match played at the Rouge Hills Golf Club east of here last night. The consensus today was that an archer could give a strokes a hole and still make them look for the club wielders.

Touring the 6,500-yard course, the golfers played in Orthodox style but the archers, although shooting from the tees, used four-inch tarpots with which to putt on the greens. Frank Hill, Andrealand Bank, both Archers, hit the mark from 50 feet on one green but Bill Banks was only two feet from the target with his second on a 445-yard hole.

Forrest Nagler, No. 1 Archer, turned in a 50 against a par of 74, while Harley Trueday led the golfers with par. The Archers frequently shot close to 300 feet, or 50 feet and invariably were straight down the fairway. The conventional early season hooks and slices played havoc with the golfers' cards.

DAY BY DAY

Old Lady Bad Luck seems to be dogging the tracks of senior baseball in Belleville this spring. After a strenuous fight to keep the game alive and active, that finally proved successful, another disaster hits the ranks of the locals last week. The very first night out Nelson "Red" Kipp, the ex-Brantford rocketer who is stationed at the R.C.A.F. camp and was expected to catch on as one of the local receivers, managed to step into one of the gopher holes in the outfield at the Fair Grounds, and wrenched his ankle. At last word Kipp hobbled around with an infrared ankle, that kept him from practice, but rejects from the R.C.A.F. are to the effect, that Kipp will be out in full bloom this week. In the meantime the local senior squad will practice every evening for the next two weeks.

The executive of the 1936 senior team in Belleville have been so busy with the baseball league that no nicknames have been suggested for the Belleville team of this season. It is customary to tack some kind of an unofficial moniker to the club, such as The Bees, Reds, Tigers or whatnots. A fan suggested yesterday that the Belleville Baseball Club just a shortened form for Belleville, was supposed. Then another says why not just call them Belleville. They are not in accord with the latter suggestion, however. Kingston are the Frontenacs, Peterboro are known as the Petes, while in Oshawa they are known as the Motors, after the General Motors and the team will likely be called the Motormen this summer. Any suggestions for a nickname for the 1936 edition of the Belleville baseball club in the hands of Kivanian Bill Cook or Mose Gregg will be considered and gladly publish all suggestions, and take a vote of the best one if necessary.

Due to the fact, that the local senators are practising nightly at the Fair Grounds, the Belleville Juniors will move eastward and commence a more strenuous system of practice at the Alemite Grounds, starting this evening. Manager George Lee is tickled pink with the enthusiasm shown by the local teenaged kids, "There were at least 40 boys out to our last practice and I tell you there were some really lively looking ball players among them in," emphatically announced Coach Barrett today. At the present time in another of a league is worrying the local Junior executive, with the first favour of entering only one junior team in a league with Walt Gerow's Napanee kids as the logical team to play. The games being played. Last years executive may not being afforded an adequate playing schedule, due to toll on the local Juniors, when they entered the provincial play-downs, so the problem, that confronts the Junior Sportsmen today—is the matter of a junior league in the district. Page Ernie Gothard.

There is no outside chance of Picton entering the O.B.A.A. this year, The Prince Edward County Baseball Executive are angling for some other county, and are about to procure a berth in the Lake Shore intermediate league among Cobourg, Colborne, Port Hope, Newburg, Orono and Peterboro. At present writing the clubs in that loop are willing to admit the Picton Church-Rotary aggregation except Napanee, who have threatened to withdraw if the opposition, that they consider the weakest be on far for their club's financial coffers to benefit. Of course there's the old argument, that Napanee will be a big draw from here to there as it is from there to here.

Supported by Mercantile and Industrial teams a new softball loop is in the making in Belleville, the latest addition to the league is Grange's C.I.A.C.O. team, the American Hardware and C. Sy Barrage's Belmont Restaurant squad are angling for league berths. Efforts to procure another entry, representing the Belleville-Sargent, are being put forward today and if a fourth entry is found, the league will operate later this week. In the meantime the league director and senior interscholastic softball loop are providing what "manhood" that is necessary.

Harry Plummer, Belleville's associate director of amateur sport publication returned from Trenton recently, after being the guest of district sports league being organized locally within the next fortnight. They are all there here if it's Trenton, Brighton and the Airport. We can place a fairly good team on the field in Belleville and maybe Deloro and Picton could help to round out a six teamed league," enthusiastically added Harry. The only draw-back that confronts the soccer organized club in Belleville is the lack of proper grounds upon which to play, they say.

Although local fans are glad to welcome back to town such wrestlers as Danny McDonald, the middleweight wrestling champion of Canada, the patrons of the game are far more interested in the Nick Mercurio-Chief Lynx bout of the big night's wrestling card. Wrestling Fans like the happier faculty of well remembering a grappler, who always gives a good account of his efforts in the ring, and that's exactly what Mercurio always succeeded in doing, while wrestling in Belleville. Nick is one of those rough and ready grapplers, who likes to get rough and tough with opponent at every opportunity, but when his opponent pulls foul, Nick just doesn't seem to appreciate the fact, that "every man has his day". When on the receiving end Nick can be depended upon to kick up enough fuss to bring the wrath of the entire house upon the head of the referee, we've badly mistaken, he'll be called upon to take plenty at the hands of Chief Lynx.

Tony Canzoneri and Jimmie McLarnin, former welterweight champs of Friday night's pot and after carefully counting the shekels decided it would be a good idea to make a return bout. "Pop" Foster, McLarnin's manager and sponsor, laments a return bout. On the other hand McLarnin and Ross gave the fans a thrilling battle a few years ago, so why shouldn't they repeat? Personally I would like small potatoes in any man's language.

Watch these Yankees—in the cry heard in the American League these days. Col Rupert's Rifles moved into sole possession of the American League leadership over the week-end, forcing Bob Grove and the record setting Red Sox into second place. In the meantime the Cardinals, "Gas House Gang" and Paul Dean", are forging out in front of the senior loop.

ONE WAY STREET

by JOSEPH McCORD

"It's [illegible]. Still think there's a catch to it. There's an old cop by the name of O'Brien over at headquarters, he acts as a sort of doorkeeper in the Chief's office. . . . Too much of a cripple to be good for anything else. I got him talking one day and wormed what I thought was a good story out of him. It happened long before the days of gangsters, but a couple of their ancestors plugged Jerry full of holes when he tried to turn 'em in. He got both of 'em with his gun before he went under. I tried my hand at writing it up in spare time, putting in a lot of color. . . .

"And the paper printed it!" Jean broke in excitedly.

"No. They didn't. I sent it over with a copy boy and never heard a word for two days. Then Parker called me in. I thought maybe the opposition had been up to something and had my attic all polished up. . . . until I saw my story on his desk.

"What did he say about it?"

"Something that would have hurt. That I was a fair leg man, but I'd never get anywhere. That I hadn't broke into a better job and big money? I didn't think like answer. But you can bet I was open to suggestions. Then he told me the O'Brien yarn a good feature story. . . . the kind he liked. Color and [illegible]. . . . whatever that means. And would I like a crack at the rewrite desk?"

"Don! That's wonderful! What did you say?"

"That what you think. So, the next morning, there was your old Uncle Don parked behind a typewriter. Old Parker was very decent, fed me a lot of shorts and gave me some pointers on style. That was last week. I was afraid to say anything for fear it would be the last either Pep. But last Saturday there were five straight banks in the weekly insult. So. . . ."

"I'm so glad."

"You know, Jean." Don resumed in a puzzling fashion, "it's made everything seem different. That story, for instance. Parker wants me to dig up a series on the city now. Of course that's a move to get us in solid with the department. But I'll get my by-line. Makes me wonder if I might make good. Never thought much about it before. Sort of took it for granted I'd found my rut."

"Why, of course you'll make good, Don! This is just a start."

"Maybe, Jean. . . ."

"Yes!"

"There's only one thing that would make it worth while. You."

"Oh, Don!" Jean faced him excitedly. There was a hurt expression in her brown eyes.

"Why?" Don asked wistfully. "I've kept my trap shut, same as I promised. For a long time now. Wouldn't I ever have a chance? You can tell me that much, can't you?"

"Please!" she begged. "Don't spoil things. You know I. . . . I'm over a bend of you, Don. But I have too many things to work out before I can go romancing." Jean tried to smile at the last words. "And I do need you for a friend, the same as you've always been. Promise me you will. . . ."

"Sure, Jean. Didn't mean to muff things. Forget it."

Jean was more touched by his words than she cared to let him know. "Don," she explained gently, "got to make good, too. So far, I've made just a small start. I want to get ahead, save money, go to art school. . . . Oh, there's a thousand things I have to plan on. Don't you see?"

"Right. I don't blame you. You're set for big times. I won't say anything more. But I can't help thinking things."

* * * * *

Poor old Don. His attempt to love making always had been funny. Even in his serious moments, he reminded Jean of a small boy. She smiled a little sadly to herself before she turned out the living room lamp. After tonight, it would be a little different. . . . the old carefree companionship. . . .

Everything changing these days.

"Has Don gone?"

Sawyer laid down his book and removed his spectacles as Jean came into the kitchen.

"Yes."

"Then I can have you a few minutes."

She allowed her father to draw her to a seat on his knee and rested her red-brown head contentedly against his shoulder.

"I like your friend Mr. Sturges, Bumble."

"Do you?"

"He is a very fine chap. A gentleman in every sense of the word."

"I think he's. . . nice."

"Nice?" John Sawyer's hand reached for his daughter's ear. He pinched it gently. "You'd better look up to bed now. I told Mother I would wait until twelve. . . . You wided she were home in a last."

Jean made no reply. She sat motionless, staring at the lampshade in front of her.

A mile away, high in a hotel room, Mark Sturges was engaged in the same contemplation. The litter of papers on his writing table was forgotten.

For some reason, he found himself picturing Jean Sawyer's face as she stood by the plane looking down into his eyes.

Who the devil was this Browne? He somehow didn't fit into the scene.

Mark Sturges' hopes for opportunity to be of service to Jean Sawyer's father came in an unexpected fashion.

He had stepped into the office of the Gotham Central Garage to pay a bill when he chanced to overhear a few words between Jimmy Ferris and his bookkeeper. Ferris was an aggressive, ambitious fellow, cheap to whom Mark had taken an instant liking.

"Hello, Mr. Sturges," the manager greeted his customer affably as he came over to the counter. "What can we do for you today?"

"Take some money, if you're not too busy."

"Never too busy for that." Ferris grinned. He thumped a rubber stamp on the face of the bill Sturges presented, scribbled his initials and the date underneath. "Thanks very much."

"Do you own this place, Ferris? If you don't mind my asking."

"We're incorporated. My wife and I have a controlling interest. No one to boss me. If that's what you mean."

"I don't." Sturges lowered his voice a trifle. "I couldn't help overhearing part of your conversation when I came in. You were saying something about being a man. . . ."

"That's right. Out of a job."

"Not yet. But I know a chap who needs one. What kind of place are you filling?"

"I'm looking for some one to take general charge here at night. It's not a hard job. . . . Keeping an eye on things, you know. I'd like to find a fellow who is settled. It's got to be somebody I can depend on. I'm tired of fooling with kids."

"Then I think I have just the man you're after."

"No fooling? What's his name?"

"Sawyer."

"I don't think I know him. Where's he's been working?"

"In the pen."

"For the love of Mike, Mr. Sturges! I'm not going to have a jail running this place alright! Why, we have quite a bunch of money in the safe here at times. Trying to

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Acting swiftly on his plan to save his knife from the insistent demand of the cannibal chief, Doc called to Bulala: "Tell him to watch closely and I'll show him a great trick." "Big medicine?" asked Bulala. Doc seized upon the words. "Very big medicine!" he cried.

Even the chief was impressed as the white boy exposed the knife to view in his right hand, then covered it with his left palm. "Abracadabra! Allo, presto, change cats and begone!" he shouted. "Now, you are it, now you don't." He opened his hands. The knife had vanished.

Dick was amused to see the chief's bewilderment at Doc's sleight-of-hand. As the cannibal looked about for the knife, Doc reached out and apparently extracted it from the black's ear. The astonished savage leaped back so quickly that he fell sprawling on his stool.

The blow to his dignity had a bad effect on his temper. He rose to his feet fairly bubbling with rage, and now Dick trembled for poor Doc. He knew not what outlet the savage's wrath would take and for the life of him he could think of no way to stem that seething anger!

Poor old Don. His attempt to love making always had been funny. Even in his serious moments, he reminded Jean of a small boy. She smiled a little sadly to herself before she turned out the living room lamp. After tonight, it would be a little different. . . . the old carefree companionship. . . .

"Too much of a chance. I'm sorry."

"Would it be too much of a chance if I guaranteed your company against any monetary loss through him?"

"Um. . . . You're that sure?"

"Yes, I am. It's almost the same as saving a life, Ferris. Maybe five lives."

"Well. . . . Suppose you have this bird come in and see me. I'd like to size him up for myself."

"I can arrange that, provided he hasn't found a place yet. But there are personal reasons why I can't have my name brought into this. Do you know Emory Stewart over at the store?"

"Very well."

"Fine. He doesn't know it yet, but he's going to be the go-between. When he calls you, ask him what he thinks of the idea."

"I get you."

"Thanks a lot."

Mark Sturges cherished a grateful and frequently recurring memory of that evening in the Sawyer home. It had satisfied a craving for genuine friendship he scarcely knew he had been aware of. So much so, that he found himself chafing secretly at Blythe Cannon's possessive attitude.

Her father seemed more and more inclined, as time passed, to leave details of the store management in the hands of his new subordinate. While this circumstance brought a keen sense of satisfaction to Sturges, he found himself in an increasingly uncomfortable position.

Invitations to Arden Terrace were frequent and difficult to decline; usually, there was no opportunity. Blythe Cannon knew the rules of further contract seasons, but more often they were informal family gatherings of three. . . . reduced to two as soon as the mellow chimes of the clock announced the hour of ten-thirty. Spencer Cannon's bed apparently was within his church in its exacting demands.

When the card table was in evidence, however, the Ridgeways were noticeably absent. Suzanne had made good her promise of an dinner invitation but, somewhat to Sturges' surprise, he proved the only guest. A manner which Blythe accepted as a personal affront, to frankly that Mark received again to secure his social activities in Gotham to a new minimum.

Emory Stewart had entered whole-heartedly into the conspiracy with James Ferris, and Sturges was satisfied that his own part in the machination was hidden.

When Mark arrived at the little Bridge street home he was greeted beahhily at the front door by Peggy. but Jean appeared almost at once, her arm about the waist of a slender woman.

"Good evening, Mr. Sturges. I want you to meet my mother."

"And I want to very much." he replied cordially, holding out his hand with a smile. "This is a pleasure I have been looking forward to, Mrs. Sawyer."

"I've heard so much about you, Mr. Sturges, I feel that we are good friends." Her gentle voice assured him. She apologized for Mr. Sawyer's absence. His position, for the present at least, necessitated night work. "But he likes to be busy," she added.

EXPECT CROSSING TO GERMANY TO TAKE 45 HOURS

Eckener And Lehmann Go to Washington to Return Greetings

LEAVE AT MIDNIGHT

75,000 Throng Hangar at Lakehurst, N.J., to View Zeppelin

Lakehurst, N.J., May 11 (AP)—Dr. Hugo Eckener and Captain Ernst Lehmann of the zeppelin Hindenburg, went to Washington today to return official greetings, leaving subordinates to finish grooming their record making craft for the departure tonight for Germany.

The famous designer of dirigibles and his associate took a train to Washington early today after an ovation Thursday that saw a crowd of 75,000 throng the United States' dirigible base for a glimpse of the ship, that completed a 6½ hour flight from Friedrichshafen, Germany, at dawn Saturday.

Berthed in the huge hangar here, the silvery zeppelin needed only a few final touches to make it ready for leave-taking. It will be moved outdoors early tonight preparatory to a take-off between 10 p.m. and midnight.

Its officers were confident that with favorable weather they would reach the ship's new base at Frankfurt-on-Main, Germany, 48 or 46 hours after leaving Lakehurst. The present west to east mark of 55 hours 22 minutes was made by the famous Graf Zeppelin in 1929.

To Make Ten Flights

Only about three more hours of work were needed to put the new sky queen in take-off trim.

The Hindenburg is to make 10 commercial trans-Atlantic trips this year.

Dr. Hans Luther, German ambassador, praised the Hindenburg's achievement "for the sake of the work for world peace which the German people and their leader, Adolf Hitler, are passionately striving for—notwithstanding many rumors and misinterpretations."

R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State, brought the greetings of President Roosevelt.

"The President has instructed me to welcome you to this country and to congratulate you on the successful completion of your venture," Moore told the grizzled airship expert.

The crowd that milled about the station and filed through the hangar was a reminiscent of the early years of dirigible activity here.

TWO DROWN AS CANOE IS UPSET

Searchers Patrol Rough Water of Gatineau River to Recover Bodies

Chelsea, Que. May 11—(CP)—Searchers today patrolled the rough water of the Gatineau river near this hamlet northeast of Ottawa in an effort to recover the bodies of two 18-year-old lads, who drowned when their canoe upset in a whirlpool at the base of the falls of the Gatineau Power Company's Chelsea dam.

The boys, Ralph Tuttl of Chelsea, son of the superintendent of the company's plant at Farmer's Rapids, and Howard Kinsman, had started out from Tuttl's home near the falls yesterday to paddle up the river, presumably to obtain a better view of the heavy fall of water coming over the dam.

In sight of three employees of the Chelsea plant the canoe upset shortly after the lads left the shelter of a small island. One went under immediately, but Elmer Lamarche, a witness, and never returned to the surface. The other had swam for a couple of minutes before disappeared.

Employees of the plant risked their lives in rowboats in an effort to find the bodies but were without success. Both lads went to Ottawa Technical School.

'HANDS OFF' SAYS DUCE

If Penalties Extended Italy Will Consider it "War-like Act"

(By A. E. Stunts)
(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Rome, May 11—(AP)—The Italian War Department today ordered the demobilization of the military classes of 1911 and 1912,—the principal classes called for the war against Ethiopia.

Their demobilization was interpreted in informed quarters as meaning:

1.—The war is definitely over in East Africa and no more soldiers need be sent there;

2.—Premier Mussolini does not believe any complications will arise in Europe as a result of his annexation of Ethiopia.

The new Roman Empire moved its big political guns up to the European front today with an admonition to the League of Nations Council, meeting in Geneva, to keep "hands off" Ethiopia.

Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Premier Mussolini's Geneva spokesman, was instructed to make it clear, that Italy believed it had juridical as well as military right to its hold on the annexed East African Empire.

Informed Fascist sources said Italy wanted peace— but peace compatible with the designs of the new Empire—and had assured its neighbors it did not want to carry the Ethiopian question into European politics.

Aloisi to Argue Case

Fascists said Baron Aloisi would accompany the accomplished fact of military occupation with the argument before the League that Italy's juridical right to Ethiopia was established clearly by the flight of Emperor Haile Selassie.

Hope prevailed, that the League Council session would show the futility of sanctions and the desirability of having Italy enter again into collaboration for European Peace.

If the League continued its sanctions siege, now that Italy has declared the war at an end, it was said, this would be considered a "warlike act". If the League extended its penalties, reliable sources believed, this would constitute a "warlike act".

Whatever happens, Informed sources insisted, Italy would face Geneva with a resolute determination to fight constantly against sanctions and to hold tightly to every acre of territory gained in the African Military Campaign.

Premier Mussolini left no doubt, that the territory including all Ethiopia after his decree Saturday night annexing Ethiopia, confronting upon King Victor Emmanuel the title of Emperor and appointing Marshal Pietro Badoglio, Viceroy of Ethiopia.

MUST AMPUTATE SCADDING'S TOES

All Have Turned Black, The Result of Trench Foot

Halifax, May 11 (CP)—A brave grin is Alfred Scadding's answer to the news he must lose his toes. When doctors told him last night, that amputation must be considered, the man, who lived for 10 days in Moose River gold mine with Dr. H. E. Robertson replied he was "lucky to be alive."

In his mind, no doubt, was the thought of Hannen Swaffer, Canadian trapped in the mine cave-in, who failed to survive the cold and privation of those 10 days.

Scadding has suffered from trench feet and for some time it was thought he might lose his feet. Special medical specialists brought from Toronto combined with expert medical attention obviated that possibility.

Last night, however, doctors concluded the toes could not be saved. They had turned black. When the operation will be performed was not stated.

A human sidelight on his experiences in the mine was revealed by Scadding. In imminent fear of death for days, the fear uppermost in his mind was a toothache. For some time a wisdom tooth had been bothering him, and hourly in the mine he was fearful it would start aching. Anxiety for his life was one thing, but it on top of everything else, that molar had started on the rampage.

Fortunately it was no good behaviour. Anyway it will be long before Scadding no more. A dentist came to him in hospital and whisked it out.

BLUM OUTLINES HIS 'NEW DEAL'

Socialist Leader Ready to Assume Premiership of France

Paris, May 11 (CP)—Leon Blum, leader of the dominant Socialist party, undertook to outline a "new deal" for France today after announcing he would accept the Premiership.

His program included a vast public works program.

France's Socialists remained "hostile" to devaluation of the franc, he announced, but attached more importance to relief of "unemployment and misery" than the financial problem.

Blum told the national Council of the Socialist party last night he would accept the Premiership of the French Republic if guarantees to be formed after the new Chamber of Deputies meets June 1.

The popular front of Socialists, Radical-Socialists and Communists won a majority in the elections for the new Chamber, with the Socialists gaining the greatest single party representation.

The Socialist National Council approved a resolution appealing to all Leftist groups to keep faith with the coalition and to collaborate in the forthcoming cabinet to succeed the Sarraut "Union" ministry of Premier Sarraut.

SILVER QUEEN OF COMMERCE ON RETURN JOURNEY

"Hindenburg" Lifted Gracefully And After Courtesy to N.Y. Headed North

48 PASSENGERS

Hopes to Reach Home Port Seven Hours Under Record

New York, May 12 (AP) — The zeppelin "Hindenburg", her 200-foot hull glittering in a bright sun, was reported 900 miles out of New York City at noon (E.D.T.) today on her homeward journey to Friedrichshafen, Germany from Lakehurst, N.J.

Lakehurst, N.J., May 12 (AP)—A huge "Hindenburg Line" was being drawn today—but this Hindenburg was a silver queen of commerce, and the line was being drawn across the skies between Lakehurst and Frankfort-on-Main, Germany.

With 48 passengers aboard, the huge zeppelin which spanned the Atlantic so swiftly last week, lifted her shiny bow toward the sun that studded a cool spring night, made a hurried courtesy call on New York city, and then headed out over the Atlantic.

The Hindenburg was starting the return journey of the first of ten round trips planned for the summer between Germany and the United States—trips which Dr. Hugo Eckener, president of the Zeppelin company, hopes will bring the establishment of a permanent trans-Atlantic commerce in the North Atlantic skies.

The airship lifted gracefully from the sandy surface of the Lakehurst naval air station at 8:16 p.m. (Eastern Daylight Time), headed into the southwest for a mile, circled eastward and then pointed its silver nose to the north.

Support of Restoration Fund To Replace Lost Endowments Urged by Bishop John Lyons

Two Thirds Objective is Reached, Campaign Goes on

MUCH AT STAKE

Anglican Synod Opens Sessions Today in Kingston

Kingston, Ont., May 12 (CP) Support for the restoration fund and men's organizations was sought today by Rt. Rev. Dr. John Lyons, Bishop of Ontario, in his charge to the sessions of the Anglican Synod of Ontario.

The restoration fund, he said, presented "a definite challenge to the very reality of the churchmanship of this diocese."

"The future of the Church of England in Canada was at stake," he continued. "We could not afford to value lightly the sacrifices of the past or the unselfish contributions of our forbears through the church to the life of this young country. We are grateful to record that the call did not pass unheeded. The three year period has run its course and has drawn to a close.

"The church in Canada allocated to us as our share of the burden, $90,000 to replace the lost endowments in the province of Rupert's Land. To meet in part our own urgent needs we added a like amount, making our objective in reality $60,000."

He referred to difficult economic conditions but added that the subscriptions to date total slightly over $40,000 of which more than $30,000 was received in cash.

An intensive campaign is still underway and the parochial organizations set up three years ago will be continued and strengthened in the appeal's interests.

Bishop Lyons referred to the gift from the dean and chapter and friends of Canterbury Cathedral, made to 90 cathedral churches throughout the empire and two in the United States. It took the form of a bronze replica of the eighth century Canterbury cross, discovered some 70 years ago beneath one of the city streets.

"There is a growing demand for men's organizations in the church for service," he continued. "The National Laymen's Council set up by the General Synod of our church in Canada, in session in Montreal in the autumn of 1934, is the answer. This action must be extended and quickened. The time has arrived in the history of our church for the utilization of the great body of laymen. They must share with the clergy the responsibilities of church membership."

Bishop Lyons mentioned the death of King George V, "A great and noble king, beloved of his people", was his tribute to the dead monarch.

The crowd pressed about the limousine, which drove within 70 yards of the main gates, shouting, jeering and hooting.

MEMBER AGAINST WITHDRAWAL OF THE CHEESE BONUS

Says it is Only Assistance Eastern Farmers Ever Received

EXPECT VOTE EARLY

Cons. Member Against Latitude of Tourists' Tariff Exemption

Ottawa, May 13 (CP)—Farmers of Eastern Canada look with wistful eyes on the assistance the farmers of the prairies receive from the Federal government, according to two members of the House.

Dr. Hyndman let off on the farm question by complaining about the withdrawal of the cheese bonus which was paid last year. He said it was the only cash assistance eastern farmers ever received.

The westerners got millions to assist them in marketing their wheat and in other ways. They were continually seeking assistance but the eastern farmers had been content to shoulder their own responsibilities.

The westerners had themselves to blame for their troubles, Dr. Hyndman thought—He recalled young men from his own county going west and becoming prosperous in short order. They would come back on visits and laugh at the man who stayed on a farm in the east and made little money.

Cheese Bonus Urged.

Later in the debate Mr. Brunelle expressed similar ideas as he urged a bonus on both butter and cheese. He thought it was time the western farmers got some help. He paid his share of the taxes which went to help the westerners.

Harry Fleming (Lib., Humboldt) took issue with Dr. Hyndman and said the western farmer could hardly be blamed for the grasshoppers and drought which made assistance necessary.

Sharp increases in income tax and succession duties were urged by Mr. T. S. Douglas (C.C.F., Weyburn). He said 95 per cent. of the wealth of the country was controlled by 25 per cent. of the people.

He urged a capital levy, especially against undivided corporation profits. Such a tax, he estimated, levied over a five-year period would yield $2,000,000,000.

A federal inheritance tax in addition to the provincial imposts, was urged by the C.C.F. member. He would attempt to equalize the provinces.

H. C. Green (Cons., Vancouver South) opposed the proposed duty on tourists' tariff exemption he considerably modified.

Mystery of Duce's Order Indicates Italy's Break With League, is Rumor

'Lash of Sanctions' Stirs Italian Action Over Defeated And Crushed Ethiopian Empire

SCENE AT LEAGUE COUNCIL

Council Defers Further Debate on East Africa Solution Until Fifteenth Day of June

Geneva, May 12—(AP)—Baron Pompeo Aloisi and his entire League of Nations delegation from Italy left Geneva today on sudden orders from Rome

They carried with them the secret of Premier Mussolini's hasty instructions of recall. Up until their train pulled out of the closely-guarded railway station, the Italians insisted they could not interpret Il Duce's command.

Nevertheless, many League observers believed the move was a prelude to a complete Italian break with the League over the question of crushed and annexed Ethiopia.

Geneva, May 12—(CP-Havas)—The League of Nations council decided tonight to continue enforcement of sanctions against Italy.

The decision was reached during a late day session which followed announcement that Premier Mussolini had ordered Italy's League delegation to return immediately to Rome.

The council voted to keep in force both the economic and financial punitive measures imposed last November.

The council's announcement did not state specifically that sanctions would be continued, but implied maintenance of the Anti-Italian coercive measures in an official statement that the council would "adhere to all decisions taken previously."

Immediately afterward the council adjourned further discussion of the Italo-Ethiopian conflict to a special meeting scheduled for June 15.

Council's Restriction

"The council, called on to examine the Ethiopian conflict, calls attention to the pronouncements made and the decisions taken in this affair within the framework of the League of Nations since Nov. 30, 1935.

"It believes an intervening period is necessary to permit its member to examine the situation created by the grave steps initiated by the Rome government.

"It has decided to assume its deliberations on this subject on June 15, and considers that meanwhile there is no reason to modify the measures taken in concert by the members of the League of Nations."

Diplomatic Break Seen.

Rome, May 12 (AP)—A diplomatic break between Britain and Italy seemed inevitable today, reliable sources said today, if British diplomats continued to "flourish the whip of sanctions" and insisted on Ethiopian representation at the League of Nations.

Dino Grandi, Italian ambassador to London, was instructed to present to the British government the reasons underlying Italy's decision to annex the Empire with annexation of Ethiopia.

Reliable sources said the ambassador was instructed also to try to "make Britain like it".

The Italian government adopted the attitude of "unalterable opposition" toward League council deliberations over Ethiopia.

Rome, May 13 (CP)—After a mass review in which all the Italian troops in the capital will participate, four motorized columns are scheduled to get out today to occupy regions of Ethiopia not yet under control of the conquerors.

"The council, called on to examine the Ethiopian conflict, calls attention to the pronouncements made and the decisions taken in this affair within the framework of the League of Nations since Nov. 30, 1935.

"It believes an intervening period is necessary to permit its member to examine the situation created by the grave steps initiated by the Rome government.

"It has decided to assume its deliberations on this subject on June 15, and considers that meanwhile there is no reason to modify the measures taken in concert by the members of the League of Nations."

Diplomatic Break Seen.

Rome, May 12 (AP)—A diplomatic break between Britain and Italy seemed inevitable today, reliable sources said today, if British diplomats continued to "flourish the whip of sanctions" and insisted on Ethiopian representation at the League of Nations.

Dino Grandi, Italian ambassador to London, was instructed to present to the British government the reasons underlying Italy's decision to annex the Empire with annexation of Ethiopia.

Reliable sources said the ambassador was instructed also to try to "make Britain like it".

The Italian government adopted the attitude of "unalterable opposition" toward League council deliberations over Ethiopia.

Rome, May 13 (CP)—After a mass review in which all the Italian troops in the capital will participate, four motorized columns are scheduled to get out today to occupy regions of Ethiopia not yet under control of the conquerors.

E. V. Illsley Speaks To Kinsmen's Club

"Reflections on our trend of living", was the theme of an interesting address given by the local Kinsmen's Club at their fortnightly meeting by E. V. Illsey, manager of the local branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, last evening at the Queen's Hotel.

In striking the keynote of his subject Mr. Illsey impressed upon the club members the need of personal thinking. "Our thoughts are extremely important as the trend of our daily thinking has much to do if we think in the proper channels to offset the hardships of life", explained the speaker. Mr. Illsey also stressed the need of individual conviction and that it developed solely in the individual.

President Carl Sills occupied the chair and thanked Mr. Illsey for his interesting and educational talk that left a much deeper impress for thought, especially for the younger generation. During the evening's program Bill McIntosh acted as song leader and Jack Allen was while Walter Downs collected the fines as sergeant-at-arms.

POLICE BLOTTER

Early today local police searched the eastern extremity of the city limits for a stolen light and radio driver. Following a motor crash on East Bridge street at 2.30 a.m. today. Constables Taylor and Armstrong made a call to the scene of the accident to find a hydro pole broken off at the base. Driver by residents informed the authorities they had been awakened by the sound of the crash. It was found what they believed to be a Ford sedan drive rapidly away after colliding with the pole and breaking it off at the base. A man and woman were seen in the vehicle, the police revealed today. They were not apprehended however.

Local police were asked to be on the look out for a 1936 model, three-seater roadster stolen at Trenton last night. The vehicle bore license number NE-214.

Shortly after midnight last night the police were called to the Dundas Ford Road residence where the residents claimed that a man was sleeping in a tent on their property and answering to their description. Investigation resulted in a man, giving his name as Arthur Bonnette, of Belleville, being taken out of the tent and lodged in the police station. Early this morning he was allowed his liberty, but instructed by Chief Ellis to remain away from private property.

Only six trunklines occupied the call board at the police station last night.

North Park Street, and a Canadian National Express truck, driven by Addison Lloyd, of this city, collided at the intersection. The noise of the impact was heard by residents at a distance, and the commotion disrupted the inspection as onlookers dashed to the scene of the crash. Fortunately no person had been injured.

Nearby stood P. C. Thomson, who immediately assumed traffic investigation. No charges were laid. Both vehicles were badly damaged during the collision, the light truck driven by Hunter having a broken front wheel, bent fenders and damaged body. The front wheels of the truck were pushed forward by the impact and the fenders and radiator broken. The vehicles were later towed away to nearby garages for repairs.

ARTIST'S ASHES ARE BURIED HERE

Percy Franklin Woodcock, R.C.A., Died Recently in Montreal

Percy Franklin Woodcock, R.C.A., celebrated artist, who resided in Belleville many years ago with his parents, the late Rev. Ed. Woodcock, a prominent minister of the Methodist Church, and Mrs. Woodcock, died last Tuesday, May 5th, at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, which was his place of residence for some years. After cremation his ashes were forwarded in a handsome urn to Messrs. Tickell & Brown, of this city, to be deposited in the Woodcock family plot in Belleville Cemetery. Yesterday (Monday) afternoon the urn was conveyed to the cemetery and the Rev. Dr. E. N. Baker, an old friend and classmate of the late artist at Albert College, conducted the committal service at the graveside.

The late Mr. Woodcock, who was in his 81st year, was born at Belleville, Ont., on August 11th, 1855. On coming with his parents to Belleville he received his attended Albert College and later studied art in England, Holland and France. In Paris he lived for over four years a pupil of Gerome in L'Ecole des Beaux Arts and later for two years he was a pupil of Benjamin Constant. In 1883 he exhibited "Pifferaria" in the Paris Salon, followed by "Portrait of Miss H. H." in 1885, "Returning from the Well" and "The Abandoned Heart" in 1886, a Normandy landscape in 1887 and "The Close of Day" in 1888. His pictures are considered to possess much merit that for two years they secured places upon the Paris Salon line of distinguished artists.

Returning to Canada in 1888 he took up residence at Brockville and not long afterwards succeeded the late F. C. Gerveau as principal of the Brockville Art School, a place, which he occupied for two years. Giving up this position, he travelled extensively in different countries, always painting and continuing to attract much attention by his work. He contributed to the Canadian Art Gallery at the Colonial Exhibition in London and exhibited also for three years in the National Academy of Design in New York, excelling in landscape, but also attaining considerable fame in portraiture. His work is represented in the permanent collection of the National Art Gallery of Canada in Ottawa by three works "Near Chateauguay", "An Ontario Farm", and "Returning from the Well", the last named being one of his best known productions.

For the past twenty-five years the late Mr. Woodcock had resided at Montreal, where he was an intimate friend of the late Sir William Van Horne, who frequently sought his advice regarding the purchasing of paintings.

On June 19th, 1878, Mr. Woodcock was married to Aloysia, daughter of the late John Pratt of Montreal, who was prominently identified with the Canadian Navigation Company. They had three children all of whom died some years ago and their mother was buried in the Woodcock plot in Belleville Cemetery.

Surviving him are his widow and one brother, Mr. E. Clayton Woodcock of East Orange, N.J.

Collegiate and Q. V. S. Praised by Captain Smart

Many Parents And Members of School Board Watch Inspections

R.C.I.V.S. Corps

"It is rather hard to find fault with the corps" said Capt. Smart, District Signal Officer from Kingston, at the conclusion of the Collegiate and Vocational School Cadet inspection held today at the Collegiate Campus. The weather was ideal and parents of the members of the corps, Members of the Board of Education, together with the City Council, members of military units in the city were out in full force to witness the inspection, while hundreds lined the downtown streets to welcome the Corps as it marched in column of route to the Armouries where it was dismissed. The Cadet Corps Guard of Honor, Shiels, is to be congratulated along with his officers for the very fine showing the Cadets made in their inspection. Their drill was snappy and faultless in their marching. The singing was excellent and the March Past was as good as any accomplished by any corps at that institution and Capt. would be saying a great deal. The Corps was in command of, Dave Bradford with Fred Lee, second in command, while the company commanders were Capt. Company, Bill McGee; "B" Company, Cecil Langanville, "C" Company, Jim Moon; "D" Company, Donald Newby. Don Wood had charge of the Color Party, while Frank Lancaster directed the Cadet Band and Don Patrick acted as Regimental Sergeant Major. "Pat" Shiels, son of the Cadet Instructor was the mascot for the Corps.

The Corps first marched passed the saluting base in column of route in the line and returned passed the saluting base in company in line column. On the past march they came in column of route and then came to the salute by the left in front of the base, the salute and "Present Arms" were given. Returning the battalion broke up into companies for drill purposes closely inspected by Captain Smart and at the conclusion it was announced that "C" Company had won the competition with "A" Company placing a close second. Major Beverley Gribble then presented Captain Bradford with a gold medal for the best shot in the Corps and Sergeant Instructor Norman Hall with medals for the first class and second class marksmen. Captain Smart in complimenting the Corps on their fine showing stated it was unnecessary to point out their faults, unless it was to say some were not shaven, a few buttons were undone and some gaiters needed blackening. "You seemed to take enjoyment in your work" said the inspecting officer "and that is what appealed to me. George F. Ostrom, chairman of the Board of Education congratulated the Corps, the staff and the students and stated that the discipline demanded in the work would stand the Corps in good stead in latter life. "If there were any dissenters in regard to Cadet Drill I hope their minds will be changed on what they have seen today and that next year they will be up to mark in their march and standing one of the Province." said Mr. Ostrom. S. O. Slider also a member of the Board congratulated the cadets on their showing, and Col. W. Fenton, K.C. said it was a pleasant thing to see the old cglers and speaking on Empire Day also said to remember and honor Queen Victoria. He told of the early history of the Empire and hoped that all would give their lives in service for the British Empire in whatever capacity they might be manded.

At the conclusion, three hearty cheers were given for the reigning King, Edward VIII and announcement was made that there would be a half holiday would be granted, which brought forth more hearty cheers. The battalion of Cadets then marched off for their route march and drill.

Q.V.S. Corps

This is one of the finest Public School Cadet Corps I have been privaged to inspect. Their work on the drill grounds was voluntary, which is essential in the moulding of a good cadet corps. The various drills, marches and physical training exercises were very good indeed. I congratulate you upon your inspection," stated Captain G. W. Smart, district inspecting officer from Dufferin Military Headquarters, No. 3 Kingston at the conclusion of the annual cadet inspection of Queen Victoria School held this morning.

The largest number of parents and interested citizens ever to attend a cadet inspection at Queen Victoria School was on the school campus today to witness the splendid demonstration of cadet training at Queen Victoria School, under the direction of Captain J. E. Bateman, assistant principal of the school.

The parade opened with the general march past followed by marching in column of route and review order. The conventional cadet drills including the physical training and rifle drill were presented for the inspection of Captain Smart. One of the feature drills of the day was a physical culture exhibition by fourteen cadets under Captain Bateman in command. The splendid manner in which the physical training exercises were promptly manoeuvered was recorded by with military precision was noted.

The Q.V.S. cadet corps was under the command of Captain Cyril Gardner, who issued the very commands for the general drills and marches in a splendid manner Lieut. Ross honourable command from the inspecting officer. The platoon commanders were Lieuts. Wm. Yerrow, Rolf Knudsen, Clayton Burley, Norman Yerrow and Wm. Brown. Cadets Norman Robinson and Ross Wannamaker acted as saluting base guides while the color party consisted of Sergeants Kenneth Youngs, Richard Downs and Chas. Holmes. Following the general inspection Captain Smart presented the winners of various medals for cadet shooting throughout the Dominion with their medals. The winners from Queen Victoria School to be trained in musketry and shooting by Captain Bateman and to receive medals for their expert marksmanship were Captain Cyril Gardner, Lieut. Norman Lieut. Clayton Burley, Lieut. William Borne, Sergeant Jack Stewart and Cadet Arthur Griffin.

Present from the Board of Education were Messrs. Geo. Ostrom, chairman, Wm. Harrison and G. F. Lent. Following the inspection Mr. Ostrom declared the remainder of the day a holiday, with applause from the large gallery of scholars. In commenting upon the work of Queen Victoria School cadets, inspecting Officer Captain Smart stated: "You have done splendidly and your work on the parade ground is a credit to your school, your corps and its officers. You completed your work on the parade grounds like soldiers and I congratulate you," he concluded. At the conclusion of Corps Commander Captain Cyril Gardner three rousing cheers were given for the inspecting Officer, Principal Wilkins and others present to conclude the inspection.

N.J. QUADRUPLETS ARE 'DOING FINE'

Health is Good And Gifts Pour in on Kasper Boy Babes

Passaic, N.J., May 12 (AP)—The Kasper quadruplets, Frances, Frank, Ferdinand and Felix were "doing fine" today, both physically and financially.

St. Mary's hospital, where the tiny tots gave doctors and nurses a brief glimpse Monday, reported their clinical condition as being excellent today.

To look out for their economic welfare, the quadruplets had a business manager, Attorney Joseph A. Turner of Passaic, and a host of admirers. Gifts were arriving at the Kasper home in Little Ferry and one enthusiast reported he had ordered a bank room for four.

The first offer which Mayor Turner accepted was one of $500 with which to buy necessities for the babies and $100 a month to pay rent for the family from a Belleville man. The offer was telegraphed from San Francisco by Mrs. Edmond J. Herrechr.

"My wife and I talked it over and decided the best right to have a decent home," said Herrecher, wealthy automobile dealer and the whole family should be kept together—not separated as was the case with the Dionne children."

Parking Restricted to Hour On Main Streets in City as Council Adopts New Measure

Five Days From 9 to 7 Saturdays 9 to 11, Sunday Open

NO OPPOSITION

By-law Will Come Into Full Force And Effect Immediately

The Parking By-law, which has been under discussion for some time by the City Council was passed by that body at their regular meeting on Monday evening and will immediately come into full force and effect. Parking on Front Street from the lower Fire Hall to the Upper Bridge and from the Lower Bridge to Pinnacle Street will be limited to one hour, the time and hour parking will be in effect will be from 9.00 a.m. to 7.00 p.m., from Monday till Friday and on Saturday from 7.00 a.m. until 11.00 p.m. There will be no restrictions on parking on Sunday. The various clauses of the by-law were passed without discussion.

Building By-law

A by-law to restrict the erection of certain types of buildings in certain areas was passed as was a by-law to issue debentures to the extent of $4,000 for relief work in 1934 and one of ratify the agreement between the Corporation and F. J. O'Neill for the collection of garbage in this city. The Council also went on record with regards to garbage collection, that the police prosecute anyone not disposing in the same after it has been placed out for collection. A common practice has been to kick over receptacles making a disagreeable mess on the sidewalks and causing much inconvenience to the collector.

Information Bureau Needed

Mr. Best-Orr appeared before the Council asking permission to erect a booth or building abutting the Trenton Camp for the purpose of supplying information respecting this whole district. The speaker claimed it would be an advantage to the city and surrounding district. Alderman Bateman was much in favor of the scheme but thought that at one time 95% of the tourist traffic going to Northern Hastings passed through Belleville but that the widening of the road allowing the C.N.R. was not ready to assume their share and therefore no action was taken.

Caretaker Appointed

George A. Hale was appointed caretaker of the Tourist Camp at a salary of $15.00 per week, his duties to commence on May 13th. The window sills at the police station will be painted and a new door to cost $30.00, while a price of $87.50 for replacing the present roof was referred to the estimates. Parking lights will be placed in the area taken over by the city for parking purposes. Street oiling on certain streets was referred to the estimates. No action was taken on the suggestion that a piece of property adjoining the Filtration Plant be purchased by the city. Repairs to the building now rented for a city yard up to $500 was authorized to be undertaken and when these repairs will be done immediately. The house and lot known as 29 Gordon Street, was sold to Rose Emmett for $775.00. Some of the property acquired for parking purposes should be advertised for sale but it was finally decided to sell same for amount stipulated.

Make Improvements

Under the head of Inquiries, Alderman Arnott asked what was being done to alleviate the dust smell at the Drinking Aid. Wills explained the matter was taken up last year and the Council thought the expense was too great. "We did not find any action till late in the fall and I believe something should be done immediately," said Ald. Wills. Ald. Cushing was delayed to peruse the files of letters on this subject and bring in a report.

Ald. Lewis inquired as to whether anything had been done on the matter of water supply to some of city property in arrears of rent and Ald. Cushing said the matter would be attended to. There being no further business, Council adjourned, Mayor Hill thanking the members for the quick dispatch of business brought before them. There were present, Mayor Hill, Aldermen Wills, Arnott, Thompson, Jennings, Bateman in the chair for the committee of the whole and committee of by-laws.

Plant in Good Shape

Just before closing time, Alderman Jennings reported that he had visited the gas plant, that it will soon be taken over by the city and stated it was in excellent condition. The alderman made it quite clear there will be no dismantling of the plant and it will continue to operate as a going concern.

Council.

Proceed With Foreclosure

A recommendation, "That the City Solicitor proceed with tax sale for foreclosure and to recover judgment secured by the mortgage, provided the Ontario Sheet Co. Company Limited has not paid its arrears by the 15th of this month" was passed without discussion.

Mr. Walker Grills asked the Council why the recommendation to buy four 34 x 7 heavy duty tires had not been acted upon and it was explained by the Mayor, the Council had decided that tenders should be called. Mr. Grills asked if he thought the discount given by his firm was the highest that could be obtained but Alderman Baragar told Mr. Grills that tires had been purchased at a higher discount.

Mr. Grills: "I would like to see the records of the tenders received."

Ald. Baragar: "Surely you do. not doubt my word?"

Mr. Grills: "I'm not the business given to a few select dealers?"

Ald. Baragar: "I don't think so."

Ald. Domenico: "Why beat about the bush. We called for tenders and when we thought the price too high."

Ald. Baragar: "When the matter was brought up I did not think it necessary to buy four tires and as I don't think the City Engineer had any business to order that number, I thought we would have been enough."

Ald. Clapp: "I think Mr. Grills is entitled to some business."

Mayor Hill: "The business should be passed around and this year it is the turn of Mr. Grills."

Ald. Safe: "I have instructed the City Engineer to go to Mr. Grills next week for gas, oil and repairs."

Ald. Armstrong: "I think the matter has been explained and that Mr. Grills can put in tender it tires are bought."

Part Grant Advanced

A grant of $400 to the W.C.A. was made and same will be taken from the annual appropriation when the estimates are drafted.

A sewer complication on Dundas Street East was referred to the City Solicitor for an opinion despite the objections of Aldermen Baragar and Domenico. A resident has a home on this street which is somewhat lower than the street and the contract for gas call on lender it tires are bought.

GOODWILL DAY IN SCHOOLS

Next Monday, May 18th has been set aside as goodwill day for the schools of Ontario. It is the anniversary of the opening of the conference at The Hague in 1899 where for the first time in history the nations met together to consider means by which international disputes could be settled without recourse to war. In observing this day the scholars and students of Ontario will join with students and scholars of many lands in fervently praying for continued peace.

Hon. Dr. L. J. Simpson, Minister of Education, in urging co-operation of inspectors, teachers, and public as well as scholars in this observance, refers to the war threats "in spite of the fact that the last war left to all nations a legacy of unparalleled distress, misery and horror. Men with broken and mutilated bodies are still in hospitals where they have lain and suffered for 18 long years. Lives were ruined, trade demoralized and consequent economic distress has lain heavily on all the countries of the whole world.

"While children now in school cannot remember the horrors of the War, nor comprehend the strain endured by their elders throughout the long days of the actual strife, even they can realize some of its results. They themselves are sufferers. Fathers are out of work, thousands of families are on relief, the comforts that should be theirs are lacking, and opportunities for employment when they leave school are greatly reduced." The Minister points to the danger and probable results of another age of carnage and asks for wholehearted co-operation to make Goodwill Day effective.

The junior branches of the League of Nations in Canada, Home and School Clubs and Women's International League are co-operating in the observance.

Dramatic and other programs to impress the young are being planned throughout the length and breadth of Ontario and other provinces.

LOOKING BACK TO CAESAR

If Mussolini is trying to emulate Julius Caesar, he has the greatest task on his hands, greater than building an Italian Empire for Caesar is said to have been "the noblest man that ever lived in the tide of time."

Those who note the grandiloquence and acts of grandeur of the past few months of Caesar's life explain them by this fact that Caesar was too busy a man to bother with little things, such as the elevation of Caesar's statue in the Capitol with those of the seven legendary kings of earlier Rome or the placing of a statue adjacent to Victory, with an inscription "To the unconquerable god". It is believed by Fletcher Pratt, a biographer of Caesar, that it is to the bootlicking Roman senate or the Egyptian queen that credit must be given for the elevation of the Caesar statues in Rome.

Caesar came of an ancient patrician lineage which had played no small part in Rome, though his leanings were toward the democratic party which people might not have expected from a scion of a noble family.

Caesar's character is rather clearly defined to the modern world through his own writings and those of Cicero, the Roman orator, historian and lawyer by other contemporaries. Through them the motives which prompted him stand out, revealing a man who dearly loved his country, and sought its progress for he devoted attention towards amendment of the troubles which afflicted the Empire. Caesar does not show as one who was mainly ambitious, he achieved much because he had almost unrivalled gifts without a trace of selfishness.

Like supremely great men, Caesar did not concern himself with the petty things, but with those of supreme importance. When he conquered his enemies in the state, he raised them to a level with his own followers. There was nothing narrow in him. He did not bear a grudge.

His character has been variously viewed in the past two thousand years, some saying that his actions though not intended to do so, destroyed liberty in ancient Rome, and that his additions to the Roman Senate, for instance, made the greatest of Roman ideals ridiculous in the eyes of the people. Others have held him in supreme place, because of his wealth of gifts as jurist, writer, statesman, philosopher, orator, historian and soldier.

What possibly changed the course of Roman history was the fact of his murder by those who feared that he was destroying the Republic. Had he lived, there is no telling what the man who was only 58 years of age and who was the possessor of the greatest gifts for public life ever possessed by a Roman or for that matter by any man in the ancient world or perhaps in all history, might not have achieved. His death was one of the greatest tragedies which Europe has ever witnessed.

Caesar in his attempts to improve the state of his country, and in his statecraft might well serve as model for public men. But there are few if any who can approach him in talent. No doubt the modern Italians look back upon the great dictator as one of the greatest men of all time and a worthy model for their present day leaders, not so much as a military leader but in statecraft. Caesar was of his own age in part. Were a man of like gifts today to appear, he would be a modern with an influence likely reflecting upon every phase of modern international and national life.

"CONFETTI COMING! DUCK IT"

TALKING ABOUT NEWSPAPERS AND NEWSPAPERMEN, for a change. Sometimes we talk about ourselves, but not often, owing to inherent modesty—believe it or not. New York newspaperman who represented the New York Times in Ethiopia until recently, which was a very interesting column, pinch-hiting for Walter Winchell. He tells of an old editor he worked under who defined a "journalist" as a reporter with cane and spats—"but there's still a lot of swell journalism being done by just plain reporters." While it is true, says this newshawk, that there's nothing older than yesterday's newspaper, and "beats" stay hot at best only a few hours, the comforting thing is that there is nothing newer than today's newspaper and there are always plenty of tomorrows.

x

Censorship is described by the writer of the column referred to above as the bane of the life of the correspondent abroad and the best way to beat it, he says, is by using Yankee slangwage, which stumps the censor.

x

In Ethiopia when Emperor Selassie suddenly flew to the front, censorship was clamped down tight. Correspondents of the Associated Press and United Press were O.K., because they had a code which fooled the censors, but the other correspondents were up a tree. They knew their bosses would be tearing their hair when the A.P. and U.P. came through, so one man beat the barrier by cabling:

"Principal eight ball fronted this morning."

Another correspondent broke the news to his paper as follows:

"King-pin off, flipped frontwards."

While still another used this device:

"See Beaverbrook's morning October 15, six column two confirm it."

In Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express (London) on the date mentioned on a certain page and column there was an article stating that the Emperor would soon fly to the Front.

x

All of which shows that the newspaper boys are not dumb and are quick on the trigger.

x

Lawrence Stallings, noted war correspondent was down in Djibouti, the French seaport at the railhead from Addis Ababa when he got a tip that Dessye would soon be bombed. His own cameraman, Al Waldron, and plenty of other newspapermen were at Dessye, and he did not want them to be taken by surprise. He could not tip the Ethiopians off to the fact that he had some important advance information or he would be in danger of getting in trouble as a spy, besides closing a good avenue of information. Stallings wirelessed "Confetti coming. Duck it!" So when the Italian bombers laid their eggs the newspapermen were elsewhere.

x

Newspaper girls may also be mentioned as having had interesting experiences but none more bizarre than that of Maisie Clemens, one of New York's brightest aces in the newsgathering game. Maisie was in New Brunswick, New Jersey, covering the Halls-Mills murder trial, that unlovely triangle where a minister of the gospel married into a rich family, was slain under an apple tree on a New Jersey farm together with his sweetheart, solo singer in his church, also married. Maisie was on the World staff and uncovered a new angle of the story. She knew she had a beat and hustled to get it into the office before closing time. The World phone number was Beekman 4000, which she knew and asked for. What she didn't know was that she was connected with Beekman 2000, a rival newspaper. The American Maisie got the connection, asked for a rewrite man and poured her story into the—not the World office but the American. When Maisie saw her "beat" in the American next day she almost fainted. Even now she suspects "crooked work on the part of person or persons unknown, with suspicion directed mostly to the bright boys of the American "on the spot".

Late Daniel Webster Reid

Trenton, May 12 (Special)—The funeral of the late Daniel Webster Reid was held yesterday afternoon from his home on Dundas Street East at two p.m. Mr. Reid was in his fifty-third year and had been ill about two years prior to his death. He was well known in sporting circles and played lacrosse for Madoc and other towns in his younger days. Left to mourn his loss are his wife, the former Josephine Mae Emslay; one daughter, Alice, of Trenton, and two brothers, Jacob, of Trenton, and James of Winnipeg. The deceased had been a resident of Trenton for the last ten years. Prior to his coming here he resided in Campbellford. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. (d. D. Blaze Starts in Attic

The Trenton Fire Department fought a blaze in the home of Mrs. Harry Groff, Dundas and McColl Streets, for one hour yesterday afternoon. The blaze started in the attic of the home and had gained considerable headway before being noticed. An unknown person walking along the highway issued the alarm to Mrs. Groff and her daughter, Mrs. Nora Gulliver, who were the only occupants of the house at the time. Neighbours and firemen carried a number of articles out of the downstairs but the contents of the upstairs were almost completely ruined by the smoke and water. Mrs. Groff and her daughter had most of their camping equipment and were preparing to leave for their summer home at Twelve O'Clock Point. The damage has not yet been estimated but it is expected the loss will be high as many valuable articles were ruined by water and smoke.

Police Court

In police court yesterday afternoon Clarence Phillips of Kingston appeared on a charge of driving his automobile in a manner dangerous to the public on May 1st. Mr. Phillips was driving on No. 2 Highway three miles east of Trenton on the day of the occurrence and was coming west towards the town. He passed a car on a curve at that point of the road when the traffic officer picked him up. Mr. Phillips pleaded not guilty to the charge and after hearing the evidence of the accused the Crown could not sentence the man as there was no law in the Highway Traffic Act now pertaining to that special case. The Crown stated that he has to see information and to let the matter stand till he gets a look at the regulations. The case was enlarged until May 14th.

For obtaining $10.00 for a worthless cheque from a local merchant it cost an Ameliasburg farmer $28.10 and a suspended sentence of three months. The accused passed the cheque on the 23rd day of April. He told the Magistrate that he gave the cheque out when he had the money in the bank but had to pay it out when cash was low in the meantime and when the cheque was cashed he had not sufficient funds to cover it.

A Belleville gentleman pleaded guilty to acting to being drunk and was fined $16.25.

A local motorist appeared some time ago and was found guilty of breaking the Highway Traffic Act. The case was heard in Belleville police court and the motorist was fined $10.00 and $2.25 costs.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

Girls—Beware of Men Who Give Big Accounts of Themselves.

Did you happen to read a day or two ago, on the front pages of your paper, about a Vienna shirt who married Princess Hohenlohe to get their savings and said, when safely lodged in jail, "This is the first moment's peace I've known in five years?"

Needless to say he was very good looking, danced divinely, could, rather surprisingly, be called a detective-like skill in discovering how much money a girl had saved or had inherited in the way of a dowry. The more cash her little back book revealed, the more ardent became his lovemaking.

The police say that he defrauded, in all, about fifty women, and the talents he displayed, in keeping them apart could readily have been employed in earning a fair income.

"Pooh! Pooh!" I hear murmured the sheik, as he snaps contemptuously on a rap on his prison pallet. There was no hardship in the sentences handed out to the shamer. If banal release from having to explain to nearly three score of ladies.

Too many modern girls fall in love with, "Count Vronsky" or "Prince Igor," and he the common scene of the heroine in Wagner's opera in demanding a few details about the mysterious groom, before they've said the fatal "I will."

Even if the law grants a divorce later, it would be a great waste of anguish, time and publicity, not to say money, if girls or their families would insist on knowing something about fascinating strangers who appear on the scene and make love to some cherished girl, too intoxicated by love to know that a man with no history is something of a risk.

Unless the suitor happens to be an out-and-out fraud, he should be able to look out a few days' break in his parents, sisters cousins—or even a grandmother or two. He should be able to tell his source of income, whether he is a salaried man or one of the friends he has made. And if he does happen to be a foundling, while he needn't broadcast the fact to the world at large that he was a deserting baby—he should at least tell this to the girl he intends to marry.

Where their emotions are concerned, women are apt to be entirely too confiding. For it is only the inexperienced girl who lends a willing ear to tale of caution in the matter.

People still chatter about the lady past 80 who her second husband was one of the richest men in the world and who fell for one of these adventurers. He was young, good-looking and somewhere in the twenties.

His second an introduction to her under cover of his eldest and most honorable of French names. He proved to have been a former Texas cowpuncher and Mexican bandit. Of course, was not as much to his discredit, if would be a great pity to go with a phoney name, and getting a good deal of her money.

Good Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Subject Please, Parents!

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:—

Will you please settle this argument? A man is very resentful because I refuse to tell him my age. I asked him to ask her mother (she did not know my age) and get her consent to their marriage. The girl felt this was showing her motherin-law to be courteous to which she was entitled. The man says that because the mother knew they were to marry, he was "imposed upon".

What a gallant and cooperative and gracious young man is this fellow! Such consideration should take him — should long ago have taken him — firmly and not too gently and told him his place in the manners of social decency.

Even if the girl's mother probably realized that her daughter and this young man were "keeping company clandestine", he should still have had a talk with the mother when the engagement was finally determined on between the girl and him—to ask her consent. Not only is the girl so brawny maintains, not only to ask for the mother's consent to the marriage, but to have a talk with the mother, who in this case is the guardian, the responsible one spiritually, of the girl he wishes to marry, his financial situation, his prospects, his plans for their future. Then all would be well...the mother would be "at home" to the situation and her new "son" had taken her deference and respectfully into their confidence, the man would know that he had been "manly", the mother would be proud that her girl had been cooperative with her mother's wishes.

He "imposed upon", indeed. It is the girl and her mother who are imposed upon by this man's non-understanding cad. Even if the mother did know that there would probably eventually be an engagement between them, what possible difference could it work in the matter to graciously and with complete willingness what his fiancee sets him to do for the sake of respect to her mother, to say nothing of love for her mother and her wish to have her future mother completely into their confidence and into participation in their plans? Oh duty was shirking in this essential one in this case too, since the mother had no father as her guardian. I pray that this young man will be a more considerate and courtly husband than he is a son.

Calling on the Newlyweds

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:—

Am I right in assuming that bride and groom upon returning from their honeymoon and taking up residence, should be the first to extend invitation to their friends to call on them? I have been told people in the country for a long time, but in the city it is the bride's event. As a matter of fact, upon speaking to the prospective groom of a date for the bridal shower, he told me that they "would be married some time in the future."

The question has now arisen as to whether or not I am right in assuming that I should be told hours before going to visit them for the first time? Or perhaps that the bride should announce either by telephone, that she has returned from her honeymoon and is ready to receive her friends at her new home. Am I correct?

Curious

Not when two friends of the bride and the groom, we usually do not wait for a special invitation to call on them shortly after their return from their honeymoon.

Of course if announcements were sent out, in the case you mention, and with them "At Home" cards, naming a date after which they will be "at home," we do not call before that date, unless we have otherwise or we do not wait on ceremony, or wait for cards of invitation.

He also explained them on their work and expressed the opinion that it was the best contest of its kind that he had seen.

At the conclusion of this discussion, Dr. W. A. Paul, president of the merits of the various boxes, the meeting was called to order by Dr. Paul, president, and an illustrated bird lecture was given by Rev. Nicholson. The lecture was illustrated by the National Museum of Canada, Ottawa. Following this Dr. Paul thanked the boys and girls for the interest which they had taken in the work of the society as evidenced by their building of the boxes. He explained that the purpose of the organization was to make Tweed a more beautiful place in which to live. The growing of flowers, trees and shrubs, and attracts the birds which fill an important place in the life of man.

The beautiful coloured slides were chiefly actual photographs of the birds in their natural surroundings.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"13 Hours by Air"

Local amateur talent will make its bid for recognition on the "Amateur Program" to be conducted on the stage of the Belle Theatre at 7.30 tomorrow (Wednesday night). The program is such as will satisfy the most exacting and will call for entertainment. Entries may list their names at the Belle Theatre.

The search for Canadian talent has turned in what will prove to be more ways than one. Pretty, the amateur entertainer secures a job through his very ability. This results in benefit of a far-reaching nature. Not only does the management gathers force like the ripples in a pool of water after a pebble has been plunked in. The effect is that there is a general increase in employment. Property hands, stagehands, painters, carpenters, signwriters, publicity men, railway buses, hotels—the circle is far reaching—all profit, and through the money received and spent, the merchant is the richer. It is an all embracing scheme. The proof of its success the greater is the increase in employment conditions.

The winner of the local, "Amateur Contest" will appear on Friday and Saturday with unit No. 1 of Jack Arthur's "Prize Winning Canadian Amateurs on Parade" with a guaranteed salary. He or she will then receive a free contract young persons as Molly Valerie Mc-Falls who gave up her job as a sales girl in a Toronto Department Store and staked everything in bidding stage fame. Molly Mcffie specializes in blues singing and though but twenty, has fair to cut a wide swathe in her chosen profession. Before her success on the "Amateur Broadcast" over CFRB, Singson told a little of the life history of Toyohiko Kagawa, the outstanding Japanese Christian who was in Belleville at the time. As some members were privileged to attend the evening meeting all are hoping to hear more of his life and work. Mrs. W. H. Rodner of Belleville spoke a few words on the cause of the missionary work. The call was given very impressively, the response being the name of a missionary and a short talk on the work of each being given, that responded to this all had splendid. AT THE CAPITOL

"Magnificent Obsession"

What is "the magnificent obsession?"

It refers to a magical philtre of living which local theatre-goers will have an opportunity to learn when they see "Magnificent Obsession," Universal's John M. Stahl production starring Irene Dunne and Robert Taylor in the starring roles.

At the same time they will see what is regarded as a powerful and emotional film drama, the crowning effort of a master screen director. A dirty-faced urchin pedals a bicycle through the streets of the prosperous Midwest community. Suddenly he is thrown to the ground in front of a limousine. Dr. Robert Merrick, famous surgeon, rushes to the boy's aid. Finding the lad unconscious, he carries him into the car and speeds to his home.

Merrick's wife, Helen, is a beautiful woman, and the doctor is devoted to her. Their home is a model of luxury and refinement. Merrick's skill as a surgeon is unsurpassed. Helen is proud of her husband's achievements. Their life together is ideal.

Merrick operates on the boy, and the lad's life is saved. But the surgeon's heart is heavy. He has failed to save the life of another patient, a man who was dear to Helen. Merrick's grief is overwhelming. He cannot bear to face Helen. He leaves the house and wanders aimlessly through the streets. He is struck by a car driven by Robert Taylor, and is killed instantly.

Helen's grief is terrible. She cannot bear to live in the house where she was so happy with her husband. She leaves for a visit with friends in Europe.

Robert Taylor, who was driving the car that killed Merrick, is a wealthy young man who has been spoiled by his mother. He is a reckless driver, and has been involved in several accidents. He is overcome with grief when he learns that he has killed Merrick. He goes to the dead man's home to express his sympathy to Helen. He finds that she has left for Europe. He follows her.

Taylor's mother objects to his marriage to Helen. She tells him that Helen is responsible for Merrick's death. Taylor refuses to believe this. He tells his mother that he loves Helen and will marry her.

Helen and Taylor are married in Europe. They return to the United States and live in the Merrick home. Taylor's mother refuses to receive Helen. Taylor is unhappy because of this.

Helen learns that Merrick was responsible for the life of the boy he saved. She also learns that Merrick was responsible for the life of Taylor's father. She tells Taylor that he owes his life to Merrick. Taylor is overcome with grief when he learns that Merrick died because he saved his father's life.

Helen tells Taylor that Merrick had a secret method of living which he practiced. Helen tells Taylor that Merrick's secret method of living is the secret of true happiness. Taylor learns the secret and practices it. He finds happiness.

"Magnificent Obsession" is a story of emotional appeal. It is a story of sacrifice and of love. It is a story of the power of love to overcome all obstacles. It is a story of the power of love to bring happiness to those who are worthy of it.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied by Biggar and Crawford to Mr. Finkle Electric.

The mining shares are the centre of interest at the present time, the action of these securities bearing out the forecast recently made by Financial Service that more attention will be given in the near future than to the industrials in the immediate future. A number of sensational advances in the "golds" has been the spark that has ignited the enthusiasm.

Drury and Thompson, in their Market Letter state that there is every indication that we are on the verge of a mining boom—like that to be profusely circulated and it will pay those accepting them to study carefully where the property is situated, what the ore indications are, and whether there is any likelihood of the mine being eventually brought into production. There are, however, many excellent speculations among the newer mines and sensational gains among some of the low priced "golds"—mines already in production where the already-indicated ore bodies are being steadily increased; in this group, we would mention Lake Shore, Patricia, Little Long Lac and Lamaque.

The public is always attracted by the prospect of huge profits. When reports are received that mining traders have made fortunes in an issue in the short space of a month —developments that have actually transpired—it is no wonder that the average man is "stampeded into mine-conscious". Mining is an industry of tremendous risk, but amazing stocks in the "penny" class should realize that they are gambling; the Porcupine Crack has always played an important role in mining ventures.

Standard Statistics states that since the increase in the Canadian tariff on gasoline in September, 1930, was an emergency protective measure, necessitated by chaotic conditions in the United States oil industry which have subsequently been corrected, the rate was reduced from 3 to 2 cents before being put to one cent on May 2, on recommendation of the Tariff Advisory Board. Because of the well-established position of the three leading Canadian oil companies, Imperial Oil, British American Oil and McColl-Frontenac Oil, these companies will probably continue to dominate the market above the border, but since the tariff on crude oil has not been reduced, refining activities should receive considerable stimulation of gasoline. Since sources of crude oil supply are the basic point of revenue of the Canadian oil industry, no change in investment should result and research into petroleum companies is recommended. Below is a compilation of the effects of the latest tariff.

Before any rise of interesting proportions can develop in the distillery and refinery companies, the conservatives will have to take place. Premier Hepburn has stated it would appear as if a settlement is in progress, and the Dominion Government is making every effort to settle the dispute.

Roosevelt is still a favorite for re-election in the United States but Presidency add some stable bond to have been placed in Wall Street at 11 to 5.

Interest should shortly develop in the "warm-weather stocks". Many companies operate on a seasonal production in the summer months, this being particularly true of the beer companies, with the peak usually looked for a good tourist trade, sales of Canadian beer, however, should receive a considerable impetus.

Coming Events

The foreign exchange trading rooms of the banks are busy trying with speculation as to the probable course of sterling, and sterling in the markets if, some morning, the world awakes to find the franc cut loose from the gold moorings. While one can gather almost any opinion within such limits, a great many of the exchange traders think the franc will fall violently against dollar and sterling, and that the pound or British fund could no longer anchor to the franc, while sterling against dollars might rise moderately. The dollar being maintained fairly consistently against the European currencies. Should the franc go off gold the Belgian currency, generally, be a real necessity for the United States and Great Britain to arrange immediately to follow the dollar and sterling the anchorage which, has been furnished by the franc.

Nornanda Mines

The time is rapidly drawing near when the directors of Noranda Mines will be called upon to decide the question of dividend on the present capital stock of $10,000,000 par value. In well informed quarters the usual $1 a share is expected now with an increase in the rate coming in the final half of the year. The buying of these shares has looked anomalous for some little time.

Balsam on Canadian Conditions

Canadian business faces summer with best prospects since 1929, Hardy Agnti figures show a quickening of industry and trade in nearly all quarters of the Dominion. Already general conditions are from 15 per cent to 20 per cent better than at this time last year, "gold" and further recovery lies ahead.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, May 13—(CP)—Gains had the edge on losses today on the Toronto industrial share board and volume showed some improvement over that of yesterday's quietly limited issue had fair support from New York and prices had been chalked up gains. The tone was strong in oils, liquors, and a few scattered groups but the afternoon display of strength was not maintained till the close. Imperial, International Petroleum, Walkers and two-liliers-Seagrams finished with gains of 1 to 1-3 and Ford A had about 2-4 to the good. C.P.R. and Brazilian moved up slightly and International Nickle improved only narrowly. Gains predominated in the banks, roots and steels.

The Steel of Canada stocks were firm, gains were reported for Pressed Metals, Canadian Car, Dom. Steel, Steel Coal and English Electric A. Soft spots in the Utilities were Bell Telephone and Montreal Power. Building Products, International Milling Pfd., and Montreal Bakeries and Westeel Weldwood.

Carnation Milk Pfd., a new listings, sold at 100 1-2.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 13 (AP)—A little profit taking marked the stock market near the start of the final hour today and early gains of fractions to around a point were halved in many cases.

Among the strong performers on the advance were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, American Can, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Continental Can, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Union Pacific, Montgomery Ward and American Telephone and Telegraph. Radio Utilities and rails slipped a shade either way.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, May 13 (CP)—Quiety strength was displayed by the Toronto mining market during the day on volume leadership supplied by the cheaper golds. Lake Shore and McIntyre ruled higher in the trade and action was sluggish in the base metal and oil groups. Hard Rock and O'Brien turned over in heavy volume and both closed with a few cents.

In the medium-price golds, McKenzie, Canadian Malartic, Central Patricia and Sylvanite were up 2 to 5 cents. Moon Mullins, Reno, Wasamac, Read Authier, Gunnar and McWatters held about steady and reasonable gains of few cents each appear for Macassa, Paymaster, Dome and Pat Reno.

Lake Shore advanced 3-8 and McIntyre 3-4. Wright Hargreaves, Little Long Lac and Hollinger Consolidated were steady to strong and Dome Mines, Teck-Hughes and Kirkland Lake were firm to weak. Among the penny stocks substantial advances were posted for J. M. Consolidated, Denoro, Gordon-Bousquet and Murphy. A Toronto broker has asked for Dieckmans and Base Metals Corporation and a loss of 1-2 for Noranda were the main changes in the base metals.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, May 12.—Local cheese prices advanced fractionally to-day, reflecting the improved levels established at country boards over the week-end, and trading in cash started the new season better than a year ago. Also, with production still very light and with plant market stronger, competition has been keen for the offerings. Butter, eggs, potatoes and poultry were generally steady. Quotations to-day were posted at the Board of Trade as follows: Cheese, large boxes of butter and 369 boxes of cheese.

The cheese market became 11/4c to 1½c up in price over the week-end, current receipts, the chief line arriving.

The butter market was given a range of 19¼c to 19½c, but was again made easier at the No. 1 level in cartons or 1c. Lot.

On the egg market graded shipments of local eggs, in 1c. lots, were 20¼c to 21c for A-large, 18½c to 19c for A-medium, and 18½c for B, and 17½c for C, with storage packed eggs in the main, in cartons, quoted somewhat higher.

Butter Eases At Toronto

Toronto, May 12—No. 1 Ontario butter solids eased one-quarter cent per pound yesterday to 30¼ cents, after holding up fairly well last week. Prints published in the morning showed an increase of 23 percent, in storage holdings of butter for the week ending, while production in Canada for the first four months of the year showed a material increase over the corresponding period of last year.

Egg prices showed little at last week's closing levels, although the undertone seemed to be firm.

GRAIN

Winnipeg, May 11 (CP)—Reinvigorating opening fractional advances, wheat prices eased quietly in early Winnipeg Grain Exchange dealings today, responsive to weakness at Liverpool.

Values near mid-session were 1/4 cent per bushel lower. July 78¾ and October 79½ cents, Liverpool closed ¾-¼ lower.

PLENTY OF ACTION BY LIGHT HEAVIES

Fine Card Arranged For Opening Show in This Class

Making reservations for future seasonable attractions at the Belleville Arena, the wrestling ring has been moved to the southern end of the auditorium for tonight's initial showing of light heavy-weight wrestling in Belleville for the season. The light-heavies have not appeared in a local ring for nearly three years, at which time they proved most satisfactory, however.

Featuring Danny McDonald, the middleweight wrestling champion of Canada, who meets Lefty Priestly in the main bout tonight, the light-heavies move into town with an all-star three-bout card. McDonald is a splendid type of wrestler, who always resorts to other methods of modern wrestling to win his bouts and the admiration of the fans especially the fair sex, who go for McDonald in a large manner.

The semi-final bout of the night should prove highly popular with those fans who demand action and pugnacious attacks as both. Nick Mercurio and Chief Lynx are noted for their rough-house antics, while in the ring. Mercurio has on numerous occasions brought the wrath of the patrons upon his head, by his ferocious attacks of knees and nobpicked elbows upon his opponent but he meets a similar type of wrestler in Chief Lynx, which doubtlessly means a tough evening's work for Referee Bert Wells. Mike Anderko's preliminary opponent will be named at ringside.

Don't forget— the light-heavies provide action personified at the Arena tonight.

LAWSON LITTLE OUT OF U.S. OPEN

Double Winner in Amateur Golf Fails to Qualify at Hartford

New York, May 12.—(CP)—Lawson Little, the burly shot-maker, who won a double victory over the British and United States Amateur Golf championships, will be among the missing when the United States open play begins in June.

Playing at Hartford, Conn., yesterday, the long-hitting Little failed to clinch one of the eight New England berths up for grabs in the 152 for the 36 holes.

Only two Canadians tried for places and one of them, Bob Gray of Windsor, Ont., was successful.

Gray, who is with the Windsor Golf Club, shot 71-79-146 at Detroit. Gordon Taylor, Toronto amateur of note, compiled cards of 78-79-157 in the Buffalo trials but could not land one of the four berths alloted that district. He was 15th in the field.

The downfall of Little, who only recently turned pro, was the most astounding upset in the sectional qualifying rounds that took place in all sections of the country. Other players, who have carved niches for themselves in the golfing world also went down, however.

Really mild-yet satisfying-that's why-

When the lighter wrestlers displayed their wares in the local harnesses, many of the spectators did a stop to Picton, but still did a little thing like that matter. The kids always threaten, but I don't think they had nearly as much fun as the old man. Just don't tell them we let Ma's stepmother have the tin-eared Duke as he raised the kiery and we're pushing it on to the kids for their future use.

We are indebted to the A. G. Spalding Company for their annual condition of box score cards which will subsequently be distributed among the various local baseball "fans" minor baseball teams throughout the district.

A number of local industrial and mercantile softball clubs will commence tonight in hopes of organizing a local senior softball league, which is to embrace only plant and mercantile loops. Rumours have Charlie Tebworth as the President. Five teams, the C.G.I.A.C.O., Eldorado, Belleville Surgical, Corbetts and a Jacobs entered. The Bowling Alley will be represented. There is room for another entry, says Cy Jarrigan, branch of Eldorado remembers!

Out in Peterboro the Intlock City sport columnist has been belittling the C.O.B.L. umpires continually since the Peeles downed the Petes FIVE straight games to win the C.O.B.L. title. Yes, the Electric City scribe did trim the Prize Pre executive for a record up to 14 safeties in the last 18 tries, and of those blows were for extra bases.

The game scheduled between the Norwich Beaus and the Oshawa Royals and the Baltimore Orioles and Rochester Wings were postponed because of rain.

LOSING STREAK OF 15 STRAIGHT SNAPPED BY WIN

Toronto on Receiving End of 7-3 Score by Albany Senators

PATTISON BLASTED

Bisons Defeat Syracuse in Other Game Played

(By the Associated Press)

Up around Albany today they were wondering what got into the Senators in the International League, who finally won a ball game.

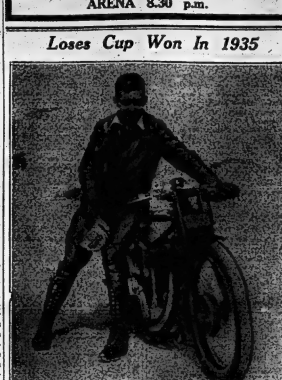
The Senators have been losing so regularly, that the Albany fans became interested only in what the score was. The Senators rose up yesterday and crossed them by beating one of the best teams in the League.

After losing 15 straight, the Senators conquered the Toronto Maple Leafs by the decisive margin of 7-3, shaving the chances of southpaw Jimmy Pattison as though they were accustomed to mailreading fingers. Pattison worked for six innings during which he was belted for 12 hits, including homers over the right field fence by Pierson and Jolley, each with one aboard. The Senators got one run in the third, took courage and gathered two in the fourth, one in the fifth and three in the sixth.

Went Route

Leon Pettit went the route for the Senators and allowed only seven bingles, five of which were made good by three base drives. George Murray, who started the seventh in the box for Toronto, did much better than his predecessor and blanketed the Senators for the last three innings.

Also in only other game played in the circuit yesterday, the Buffalo Bisons defeated the Syracuse Chiefs 9-7 with a fine piece of relief pitching being turned in by Lefty Jacobs and Frank McGowan displaying some lefty cloutting.



Jacobs entered the fray for the winners in the seventh inning with the score tied and two on. He retired three consecutive hitters. Dahlgren opened the eighth with a double but he was left stranded when Jacobs made the next three batters go down easy rollers.

McGowan clubbed a homer, double and two singles to bring his record up to 16 safeties in the last 18 tries, and of those blows were for extra bases.

The game scheduled between the Norwich Beaus and the Oshawa Royals and the Baltimore Orioles and Rochester Wings were postponed because of rain.

Loses Cup Won In 1935

GEORGE PEPPER

"The local motorcycle racing demon rider, George Pepper, who finished third this year in the annual quarter-mile sprints held by the Windsor Motorcycle Club at Rossland Golf Club at Windsor on Sunday, Pepper established a sprint record of 13 seconds to win the honors and the cup in 1935, but this record was beaten by Ottawa racer rider, W. Shilwell on Sunday, when Shilwell was clocked for the 1-4 mile dash at twelve and seven-twentieths seconds.

The annual quarter- mile sprints held under the auspices of the Windsor M. C. C. drew some 20 entries this year, including Pepper who was defending his 1935 honors. A slight hesitation in the changing of the gears on his machine at the start was responsible for some of Pepper's loss this year. He finished third, one fortieth of a second behind the time established by the second place rider.

The race at Windsor are all sprints, taken from a rolling start of 70 yards. The races are electrically timed.

Champion Detroit Tigers More Optimistic as Players Burns and Bridges Deliver Defeat Cleveland to Edge Back Into First Division

ALLAN DRIVEN OUT

Temperamental Hurler For Indians Tries to Pick Fight

(By Andy Clarke, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Things are looking a bit brighter in the camp of the champion Detroit Tigers.

Hartnett by early season injuries and form reversals, the Tigers have had a tough time of it thus far but there is reason today for Mickey Cochrane to contemplate with a little more hope. Boe Burns is back ahead: the gruelling days of summer when, Mickey asserts, the team will class and endurance will step out front.

Two ball players, Tommy Bridges and Irving Burns, are the reasons for the pick of optimism. Bridges, a mainstay of the pitching staff last season, had three defeats and only one victory to his credit until yesterday's game with the Cleveland Indians, when he came into his own to pitch five-hit ball and win his game 8-3. Burns, a weakling at last since he jumped from a fabulous season with the Browns to fill the important shoes of Hank Greenberg, the Tiger first baseman, who suffered a broken wrist, showed his first burst of power with the club, getting a home run and a single in four trips to the plate.

The victory enabled the Tigers to climb back into the first division as they unleashed batting power all down the line. Al Simmons got three hits, one a triple, in four times at bat. The fiery Gehringer "Jockey" was in fine fettle, irking Johnny Allen, who was driven from the box after four innings by a single the temperamental pitcher wanted to punch Del Baker, Tiger third base coach, and Cochrane.

Hostile to Umpires

The Phillies took advantage of the short right field fence at Baker Field to drive out five home runs but the Giants also took advantage of it in the ninth to land the blow, that gave them a 13-12 victory. It was a heetic ball game to say which the lead changed five times and eight pitchers saw duty for the Giants. A total of 31 hits were made with the Phillies getting 16.

Mel Ott, who drove in a total of eight runs altogether, banged the payoff homer in the last inning with two on, two out, and the Giants behind by two runs. Manager Bill Terry of the New York team, who is leading both leagues with a batting average of .438, got three hits for a perfect day at bat.

Chicago White Sox took a barrage of 22 hits, eight for extra bases, from Boston Red Sox pitchers, five of which were home runs, to win 10-6. Luke Appling, batting champion of the American League ball park with a .429 average, was the leading hitter with four safeties in five times at bat. Ted Lyons, who was the 12th straight defeat for Rogers Hornsby's team. It was his first start of the season.

Punching Puckman of Famous Clan Patrick To Represent Canada

New York, May 12.—(CP)—Murray Patrick, the punching puckman of the famous Clan Patrick, trained his sights on Olympic Boxing trials today after adding a brilliant gem to the crown here last night.

Soon after he and Johnny Billy Goode of New York, for three one-sided rounds to win the Catholic Youth Association's Heavyweight championship, Lester Patrick's youngest son revealed he had the intention of turning pro, for the time being at least. The promising Canadian Amateur champion, who was the wish of his father that he try for the Olympic team and carry the Maple Leaf in the summer games in Germany.

It was no fault of Murray, that he was unable to continue the knockout streak that carried him into the C.Y.A. finals. In the rightdowns he flashed a murderous right, that belted the two men, who faced him down and six in single rounds.

In Goode, the handsome young Canuck met a veteran and a farmer C.Y.A. champion. The Bronx hitter appeared the more polished boxer, but the only use to which he could put his talents was to keep from being a tayo.

Firing punches that travelled only inches—in the manner of jarring Joe Louis—Patrick forced the New Yorker into retreat in the first minute. Then, for the entire three rounds, the Canadian titleholder kept up the withering drumfire, driving at Goode's bobbing head and body, opening wounds and raising welts.

In the first round, Goode was in the shadows. There were cuts over each eye and his nose dripped claret. Yet, in the twilight the ringwise New Yorker remembered is roll automatically with the smashes, and made his last literally stand on end. And that seemed to all that kept him from going down for a count.

Canadian Unmarked

Patrick, who weighed 192 against Goode's 194, was a striking contrast with his blue-black hair and left the Madison Square Garden ring to the cheer of 7,000. The Canadian was unmarked and the black curly hair that crowns his handsome features was scarcely ruffled. The bloodied Goode was beaten on all of the top. But in the ring the Bronx Boer was far from discouraged, and the shouts of the fans were as much in tribute to his gameness as to Patrick's skill.

From behind his smiles, Murray said in the dressing room, that he believed he could have finished the opponent in another round or two. He thought he had hurt him well weakened up for a haymaker.—

"But for strength," he said, "let me tell you that on Saturday I met one stronger than any I ever run into. You must know him. The name is James J. Braddock.

"Jimmy offered to go a couple rounds with me. Well, he handled me like I was a baby. Then he knocked me one on the chin with the right and I sat down very hard. There wasn't any count and I guess it isn't any disgrace to be popped off your feet by the champion of the world."

"If Braddock can pop you, you he shouldn't have much trouble with Louis, I guess," guessed a newsman.

"That's a terrible joke," counseled Robert Kennedy Hall, King Vidor and Louis down on his size if they meet."

ONE WAY STREET

by JOSEPH McCORD

There was an air of quiet happiness in the little announcement that Sturges was quick to detect. He sensed the entire atmosphere of the home had changed. Even Jean was affected by it. There was a light in her brown eyes and a buoyancy of spirit that made her more attractive than ever to the young man who watched her as closely as he dared.

The longer he observed and talked with Jean, the more Mark Sturges became obsessed with the belief that a reward of sorts was due him. Thus, after an hour's chat with mother and daughter, he made bold to ask Jean if she would drive with him. In answer to the doubtful glance she cast her mother, Mrs. Sawyer suggested quietly:

"I think it would be very pleasant for you, dear. Perhaps you should take your coat."

The two of them rode through the soft darkness for a time without speaking. Sturges drove rapidly, giving his entire attention to passing traffic signals. He was the first to break the silence.

"Is it too cool for you with the shield open?"

"No, indeed. I like the breeze. It's been so warm all day." Jean relaxed comfortably in her seat, letting the wind toss her loosened hair. So she remained, seemingly lost in thought, until the car sped through the outskirts of the city.

"I thought we would circle around by Prospect Hill," Mark told her presently. "I came into town that way the other evening and discovered one gets a very interesting view of the city." He wondered why he found it difficult to converse with this girl, now that he had her to himself. For almost the first time, too. But at the moment, Jean's manners suffered. The silence made it even more satisfying. Her response to his suggestion had been brief.

"It is a pretty view from there. I never tire of it."

Sturges found himself speculating morosely over that. Been there with that fellow Browne, probably. Almost every kid had a car these days. He said nothing more until he slowed the machine on the crest of an elevation that overlooked a greater part of Gorham. The distant streets were picked out by strings of lights crisscrossing the murky haze.

"Do you mind if we park here a few minutes, Miss Sawyer?"

"Of course not."

"We have plenty of company," he commented and wished he hadn't.

Jean watched him settle back in his corner of the seat, then inquired abruptly:

"Mr. Sturges, did you know Daddy Jack had a position.....before this evening, I mean?"

"Why, Mr. Stewart mentioned something about it....." Mark lighted a cigarette with elaborate care.

"Did you have anything to do with it? Please tell me."

INSTALLMENT 2A.

Sturges extinguished his match hastily.

"No indeed," he lied cheerfully. .....Whatever made you think that?"

"I was wondering." Jean mused. "When I tried to thank Mr. Stewart for his kindness to Jack, he didn't seem to want to talk about it."

"He wouldn't." Mark smiled to himself in the darkness.

"I know. He is like that. But it was good of him..... You don't know what a difference it has made!" Jean exclaimed impulsively. "Daddy Jack is so like his old self again..... just as he was after he had the chance to talk with you. Even John has changed," she finished with a tremulous little laugh.

"And you?"

"Oh, I couldn't tell you.... It's like waking up from some dreadful dream. I think I never was so happy."

"I'm glad."

"Everything looks so different. I feel that I can go ahead and begin working out the things I want."

"May I ask what they are?"

"Of course. It's my.....job, I want to go home much as I can accomplish. I must try to do something really worth while. I want more training..... go abroad. I'm not sure ? don't want to become a very famous engineer of germs. Do you think that is too much to hope for?"

"Of course not," Mark declared. "Except there are not many girls your age who have their heads set so strongly on a business life. Or are there?"

"Perhaps not. But it's different in my case, I think. I've had others to think about and plan for. I still do."

"Then you don't ever consider a home career?" Mark attempted to say it lightly. "Some young man may come along and spoil your program."

"There's not much danger," Jean laughed. "I packed away my romantic notions in moth balls, long ago. I'm too busy now for such things."

"Don't be too sure," Sturges warned savely. He was conscious of a sudden satisfaction. Perhaps that newspaper fellow didn't count after all. "I used to think that, too," he added.

"And did the moths corrupt your dreams?" Jean asked demurely.

"I've been afraid to look and see."

"That's too bad."

Somewhat to Mark's resentment, Jean took the conversation into her own hands at that point, leading it skilfully away from the topic uppermost in his mind, one that he found pleasantly dangerous.

She drew him out to tell of his several trips to Europe, an account that brought breathless little questionings. In turn, she acquainted him with bits or her earlier life, drawing a veil always over the recent four years.

For an hour or more they chatted intimately, Jean's former air of reserve vanished completely. She was alert and eager, ready to laugh. And Mark Sturges lost himself in a strange contentment he dared not analyze.

"I think we should be starting back," Jean reminded after a sudden pause in the talk. A silence which for some reason, neither one found easy to break.

"Perhaps." Mark agreed reluctantly. He straightened himself behind the wheel and reached for the ignition switch. Then he paused to remark bluntly: "Miss Sawyer, I'm wondering if you remember something I said the first time you refused to have dinner with me."

"Yes, I remember."

"Well, I still feel the same way about it. That's why I appreciated your coming out like this..... giving me a chance to really talk to you. May I hope you'll be nice again some time? I refuse absolutely to give up our friendship."

"I might..... if that is what you call being nice. I have enjoyed it, too."

"Have you? That makes me all the more glad. You know....." He was fumbling with the switch. "I wouldn't ever want to interfere with a career, but I could almost wish you weren't with.....the famous from Block. Do you mind if I tell you that?"

"No," she replied slowly. "But, of course, I am."

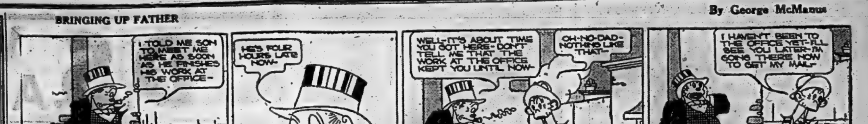
"I know. You needn't....." Mark's assurances were cut short by a passing car. It swung in sharply, so near that the rays from the headlights made both occupants blink. A gerry mocking voice rang out from the blackness behind the lamps.

"Jon solo! Mais!"

Jean instinctively shrank close to Sturges.

"What did that man say?" she asked tremulously.

Galla Galla was more interested now in robbing the boys of their possessions than in venting his rage upon them. Angrily he demanded that the boys remove their clothes at once, and they had no alternative except to comply. Then they took the rags the chief offered.



Dick and Doc wound the calico strips around them after the manner of the Bim Gloh which was Tarzan's only garment in his wild homeland. The boys were filled with secret pride, as they always were when they could duplicate anything connected with the Jungle Lord.

All this time they had managed deftly to conceal their knives, and Doc was more determined than ever not to give up these valuable weapons of defense. But now Galla Galla renewed his demands, so, once more, Doc repealed his act of making the knives disappear.

The chief's eyes narrowed. "Chief him want to know where 'em go!" said Bula. Envious Intamo, the medicine man, availed the answer eagerly. Should the boys' magic have more powerful than his trickery he was ready to urge that they be killed at once!

"I didn't notice," he explained grimly. "Some one with a sense of humor working overtime. That was all. We'll start now."

"Please."

Mark tried to put Jean at ease with casual talk during the swift trip to the city, but his efforts met with scant success. He sensed that she was deeply disturbed by the incident on the hilltop. Luckily she gave no intimation she had recognized the voice. But she was wondering.....frightened, perhaps. Confound that Belgian upstart Edythe's chauffeur must have been driving alone. Otherwise he would not have ventured his little game. It would be chalked up against Mrsn for a future accounting.

"Will you come in?" Jean asked when they reached the house and Mark assisted her from the car.

"I believe I'd better not...." He said it regretfully. No need to push good fortune too far. "But I have your promise for another time, Miss Sawyer?"

"Good night, Mr. Sturges. And thank you very much....."

"Good night."

Jean stood on the step, watching until the red lights on the rear of the car disappeared around the corner. She opened the door with a sigh. That strange little feeling of fear welled up in her heart again. She had been so happy. Forgotten everything.....Almost.

At the same moment, Sturges, driving through the darkened streets, was speaking his thoughts aloud.

"Better watch your step, Mark. Aurelius. You came very near slipping."

To Jean's delighted surprise, she was favored with an opportunity to attend Gorham's outstanding musical treat of the year, a symphony concert by one of the country's great orchestras.

Most amazing of all, the invitation came from Don Browne.

Jean laughed to herself each time she recalled the elaborate carelessness with which he introduced the subject, as if it were of no consequence whatever.

"I suppose you're going to hear the big band at the Empire," he remarked casually.

"I'm afraid not..." Jean admitted with a sigh. "I did think I might treat myself to a way-up seat, But the prices are too much like that."

"Yeah? How'd you like to string along with me? I'm dropping in there for a little while."

"Don't! Don't tell me you've turned music critic!"

"Me? Fat chance. No.....just attending in my executive capacity. If you care to accompany, Miss Sawyer, I'll be charmed."

"Are you serious?"

"Sure I am. I wangled us a couple of passes."

"However did you do it? It's marvelous!"

"Merely mortgaged my soul to the city desk. That's all. I started working on Parker as soon as I got wind of this show."

"Oh! But you don't care for concerts." Jean was conscience-

LABOR M.P.'S QUESTION BALDWIN ON ANNEXATION

MINES GROWTH IS PHENOMENAL C. M. A. INFORMED

Encouragement in Business Credited to Ontario's Enterprise

BUSINESS CLIMBS

'Debt Appalling', Says President The Province Able to Pay So Far

Brantford, Ont., May 13 (CP)—Encouraging improvement was shown in business last year with phenomenal progress in mineral production, Harry Barrett, retiring chairman, told the annual meeting of the Ontario division, Canadian Manufacturers' Association here today.

"The present situation has come to us of this day because Ontario people have been enlarging, hard-working and reasonably sane in their public and private thinking," he said. "Under that situation there is a responsibility rests upon this province, not only to safeguard what we have, but neither to lead nor follow other provinces into untried economic experiments.

Business Growing.

"We are to be congratulated in the direction of increased business. There seems to be opportunity ahead of us. Canada has a long way to go but will in the time-testing many people. If will be a much more satisfactory future if we are able to provide opportunity for all who want to work and there is less desire on the part of citizens to look to the state for the basis of life.

"In these years when business is going through a process of gradual recovery, it is very essential that business people should watch economic tendencies under observance, always bearing in mind, however, the movement of a new law, radical or otherwise, carries with it the responsibility of administration, and that the opposite governments do not want to discourage business to the point that may lead to their embarrassment.

$40,000 Bank Deposits Are Rated.

"Public and private debts are, of course, appalling in their magnitude and so far, at any conception, we have been able to fulfill our public and commercial responsibilities. Various methods of relieving ourselves of these burdens have been suggested, but Ontario people have not expressed themselves by their selection of successive governments as in favor of doing otherwise than to take full responsibility for their obligations.

"We are told that there are upwards of 1,000,000 persons on relief, but this figure is frequently misconstrued as indicating the number of persons unemployed. The employable persons properly on relief are estimated at approximately 300,000. It cannot be said that recovery will be complete until these people are back at work. Any improvement in the market in which the manufacturers sell our goods, will at once enable us to employ more people in employment.

Putting Workers To Work.

"A fundamental principle of business progress is to reduce costs by expanding production. Thus the profit margin small so as to distribute the benefit of the trade to production and consumption of more goods, employment is increased, more wages paid, more raw materials purchased and more freight moves over the railroads. Lower prices of finished goods increase the purchasing power of the people and there is more dollar income upon which the government can levy taxes.

"In other words, as we are able to put people back to work in manufacturing industry, a considerably larger number will find employment in the distributing and transporting services, the goods which our manufacturing industries produce, so that as we are able to improve our position, we will at once begin the means for employment elsewhere."

REPORT LAWYER $70,000 SHORT

J. J. Huggard of Seaforth Being Sought in N. Y. City

Seaforth, Ont., May 13.—(CP)—Search of J. J. Huggard's safety deposit box and office was started which already have revealed shortages in excess of $70,000, went on today while Ontario and New York police authorities sought the forsworth lawyer, missing several days.

Police said 36 deposits bore under his name have yet to be opened. About 30 have been opened under supervision of Provincial Constable P. E. McCoy, who called clients of Huggard into the office one by one. Many of the boxes had been found empty.

A charge of theft of $2,000 from Joseph Crummett, a client, was laid against the missing lawyer yesterday, while police search apparently concentrated on New York. Huggard was last seen at Fort Erie, Ont., and was believed he crossed the border at Buffalo.

New York Police were requested to search for the fourth barrister who came here 15 years ago from Toronto and was prominent in the town. He is president of the Seaforth Athletic Association and was manager of the town's Junior hockey team last winter.

Charges are pending against the lawyer's office yesterday when it became known a charge was laid against him. Some demanded to know if their deposits were safe. Some found they were not.

Provincial Constable Percy McCoy in charge of the investigation, at one time was attached to Belleville district.

Assize Jury Finds No Libel Against Drew

Toronto, May 13.—(CP)— Successful in one part of the libel action brought against him by Ronald H. Walkinshaw, private secretary to Attorney-General Roebuck and chairman of the Advisory Board of the Department of Insurance, Col. George A. Drew today will press for an immediate start on the hearing of the second part of the action.

A jury under Mr. Justice Makins yesterday found there had been no libel in the words upon which the case" These words were published on May 1 by defendant, a former Commissioner of Securities in Ontario, in the Toronto Globe Oct. 13, 1934, and were in reference to the Queen City Insurance Co., of which Mr. Walkinshaw was president and general manager.

The jury found that the alleged innuendo was that there had been dishonesty or fraud, or both, on his part, but that he had maintained the pension of the license for cause.

Application to Add City Defendant in Flood Case Dismissed by Judge Madden

John Smith Action vs. Railways Figures in Application

JUDGE'S RULING

The Canadian Northern Ontario Railway and the Campbellford, Lake Ontario and Western Railway, (the C.P.R.) sought in an application in County Court here to add the City of Belleville as a party defendant to the action over the flood instituted by John Smith of West Belleville and Mr. Justice Hilary, asserting that the city should be added for the following amongst other reasons:

(1) By reason of neglect to instal culverts in West Dundas street.

(2) By the construction of the road in the easterly part of the river below Victoria Park.

(3) By dumping snow on the ice in the channel opposite the Hardware Company's plants.

(4) By failure to blast out a channel in the river at or about the mouth.

Judge Madden of Napanee heard the application and last Friday dismissed the same, holding that as alleged the missing lawyer's office yesterday when it became known a charge was laid against him. Some demanded to know if their deposits were safe. Some found they were not.

Provincial Constable Percy McCoy in charge of the investigation, at one time was attached to Belleville district.

This decision is held of great moment to the City at Belleville.

Mr. C. A. Payne, K.C., of Belleville, represented John Smith, A. D. McLean, K.C., of Toronto, and J. E. Maunsell for the C.P.R.

Representatives of the railways have been in the city several times since the flood, chiefly being here in connection with the study of flood conditions in previous years and also with inspection of the properties which were in the flood area. It is understood that they will complete their survey and interviews about the end of this week.

Coleman, infant son of Bridge street, is putting on a new appearance. The Scots' locks have been raised three feet or more to get it out of possible floods in the future while repairs have been placed on the outside of a number of dwellings which stand on the river where were worn away have been filled up and slowly that part of the district is coming back to its former appearance. The latter has required the work of carpenters to replace the corners and walls torn out by the huge ice cakes which came down the street against the houses and through the parks and gardens.

SELASSIE FOR GENEVA

GRIEVED FATHER HOPES MOCKING WATERS WILL GIVE UP LITTLE SON

Peterborough, Ont., May 13 (CP) —Slowly about the fringes of Little Lake George Planter cruised today with heavy heart but undimmed faith that the cold, mocking waters will give up the body of his little son.

Since April 3 when seven-year-old Gerald Planter fell into Jackson Park Creek and was drowned, the father, grim and silent, has toured the lake each day. Some days he makes several trips, and sympathizing friends patrol the waters to aid their grieving neighbor.

For three weeks Planter and Gene O'Carroll rowed about the lake. Sometimes the search was extended more or five miles down the Otonabee River to Rice Lake, for the searchers are convinced the lad's body was swept down the swollen Jackson Park Creek to Little Lake and may even have been carried into the Otonabee. Today the creek is scarcely a foot deep in places.

Ten days ago the offer of a motorboat was made by the Johnson Outboard Company. The broad-beamed skiff and new motor were carried by truck to the river and the company announced the equipment would be used "until the body is found".

Every morning O'Carroll makes the round of the lake, usually accompanied by Danny Lee. In late afternoon after work Planter takes up the search. The lake is covered an average of four times daily. On Sundays other neighbors help, and the search for little Gerald's body goes on—and will continue to go on.

SECOND COUNT OF SUIT LAID OVER

Justice Makins Decides Not to Hear Action Until June 8

Toronto, May 13 (CP)—Hearing of the second count in the libel action of Ronald H. Walkinshaw, private secretary to Attorney-General Roebuck against Col. George A. Drew was set over till June 8 by Mr. Justice Makins today after brief argument developed when Col. Drew charged slander had been made at witness tampering.

The jury yesterday found in Col. Drew's favor on the first count in the libel action, based on an article allegedly supplied by the Colonel and which Mr. Walkinshaw charged contained libel.

Col. Drew today urged hearing of the second count be proceeded with immediately and then declared:

"Mr. Walkinshaw yesterday sought to interfere with one of my witnesses." An inducement was held out to him by Mr. Walkinshaw. He took him out to lunch."

His Lordship stopped Col. Drew after Sailer Hayden, K.C., Mr. Walkinshaw's counsel, protested.

"He can't make statements of this kind," Mr. Hayden said. "There's a proper way to bring it out."

"This strikes at the very foundation—" started Col. Drew but he was again stopped by Mr. Justice Makins. Mr. Hayden charged Col. Drew was "trying for headlines".

"I have decided in my own mind that I will not go on," said His Lordship. He suggested Col. Drew and Mr. Walkinshaw "metaphorically shake hands, then setting the case over till June 8.

ART. BANNISTER REFUSED APPEAL

Unless Clemency Granted 19 Year Old Youth Must Hang

Ottawa, May 13—(CP)—Justice Crockett of the Supreme Court of Ontario today refused, as an application for leave to appeal on behalf of Arthur Bannister, 21, of Toronto, against a conviction for the murder of Philip Lake for which he was sentenced to be hanged.

Mr. Justice Crockett based his refusal on the conclusion there was no conflict between the judgment appealed from and previous cases in the case and those of other courts under similar circumstances.

Bannister and his brother, Donald, 20, were convicted at Dorchester, 11 p., for the murder of Lake. Lake and his wife were slain at their home in Dorchester, N. B., when it was what the Crown claimed was a kidnap-murder plot to provide the youth's mother with a child to be used for extortion.

BOMBARD GOVT. WITH QUESTIONS

Laborite Members Cheer Reference to Tearing up Decree

Geneva, May 13 (AP)—Whether Premier Mussolini and Italy will remain from the League of Nations and join forces with Chancellor Hitler and Germany worries diplomats today.

Well-informed Italians said the possibility that Italy would resign from the League, following the example of Germany, should not be excluded.

London, May 13 (CP)—The government was bombarded at question time in the House of Commons today with questions about Ethiopia.

Lieut.-Commander R. T. W. Fletcher, Labor, demanded to know what was the diplomatic status of the British mission in Ethiopia. "Does the government still regard it is as accredited to the Ethiopian government," he asked.

Prime Minister Baldwin was definite there had been no British recognition than the Italian Ambassador in London (Dino Grandi) a few days ago. Mussolini's decree that Italy had annexed Ethiopia and that the King of Italy had now assumed the title of Emperor of Ethiopia.

Britain accepted the decree copy "under all reserve", he said, pending the outcome of Premier Laval's visit to the League of Nations Assembly.

"And will tear it up, I hope," interrupted Clement Davies, Labor, to the tune of laughter from the Labor benches.

ACTOR'S ANCESTOR BECKET SLAYER

Cyril Maude Confesses Descent From Man Named Tracy

London, May 13 (CP) — Cyril Maude, the famous actor who has been a distinguished annual meeting of the Actors Church Union last night, told the story of his ancestors who slew Thomas a Becket. "I am descended from Sir William de Tracy, Lord of Barnstaple, who killed the 12th century Archbishop.

Cyril Maude is well known to Canadian theatre audiences, having frequently toured the Dominion. He is now chairman of the Actors Church Union.

"Maude's dramatic instinct makes him a fine raconteur and he told of a rector who murdered an Archbishop in front of hundreds of worshippers," was the genial comment of Dr. Inge.

"I bestow upon him with great magnanimity my full absolution."

Tracy was one of the knights who heard the exclamation of King Henry II: "Will no one rid me of this turbulent priest?" referring to Thomas Becket. Tracy forthwith left the Court for Canterbury and as Archbishop in the sanctuary of the cathedral.

Persons With Chronic Sinus Trouble Suspected Causing Colds Epidemic

Kansas City, Mo., May 13 (AP)— Persons with chronic sinus trouble, called the source of common colds, are found in the victims of chronic sinus trouble.

This medically new idea which explains many of the familiar-apprehensions of catching colds in subways and crowds and even in surroundings of seemingly healthful origin was forward by Edward C. Sewall, M.D., of San Francisco before the American Medical Association here today.

Chronic infection of the sinuses, he said, is the reservoir from which epidemic of common colds arise.

As an illustration, Dr. Sewall cited the sort of sinus disease often called "fake colds". These, he said, are usually mild attacks of the sinus condition. The persons who have them are real cold "carriers".

The fact that they appear to be the true common cold usually clears up misunderstanding about these human "carriers" are the general source of colds, Dr. Sewall analyzed the well-known stories about persons never having colds until exposed to them.

He cited also experiences to show that colds appear to be "carried by" riers" sometimes act like forest fires which get worse as they spread. The colds become more virulent as the virus spreads among fresh material.

An example of this was a group of explorers who gave colds to Eskimos. The explorers were immune to their own colds, but after the Eskimos had the colds died a while they became so virulent that the explorers caught them from the Eskimos.

'Canada Marvellous', Says German Captain Here With Emden Crew

170 Blonde Young German Officers, Midshipmen From Emden at Depot

ON WAY TO 'FALLS'

First German Sailors To Visit Canada in 22 Years

Radiating good health and trim efficiency, 170 blonde young German officers and midshipmen of the German cruiser Emden, namesake of the ill-fated coastal raider used during the Great War, as guests of Belleville for a period allotted the city at noon today in true sailor style.

Under the command of Captain V. V. Dewel the party, travelling in a special train on the Canadian National Railways is engaged in a goodwill tour of Canada and the United States.

"Canada," agreed Captain Dewel, in a brief interview with the Ontario Intelligencer, "is a marvellous country. Our reception here in Canadians has been even more than marvellous. Everywhere we have been it is the same. Canadians are magnificent."

Leaving Belleville, the party will proceed to Toronto and Niagara Falls where a semi-free of the districts will be made in the later section.

Experience in War

One of the officers of the first Emden, later destroyed by guns of the Australian navy, Captain Dewel wounded flesh of his experiences with the raider, most famed ship of the German fleet, whose depredations were a constant source of worry to Allied shipping.

"The war is over. We are just on visits, glad to be here and visit you people," intimated Captain Dewel, speaking in slightly-broken English.

Now used as a training ship, the Emden, Captain Dewel has attained a complement of the best sailors from throughout Germany. Many of the boys, it is evident, have come from the best of families. Quiet, well-behaved and possessed of a marked efficiency, the lads, in their smart, white uniforms, attracted considerable favorable attention by many who visited the north depot to see the special train arrive at one o'clock.

Salute on Departure

Snappy salutes and smiles were given the spectators as the train moved off, following a brief stopping which time the midshipmen and warrant officers were allowed to stretch their legs.

Crossing the ocean was a holiday trip, it was revealed by Captain Dewel accompanying eleven days, during which time typical days of navigation and lessons in seamanship were given the young crew.

Tours Arranged

No blue uniforms or other German sailors were visible in the special train carrying the men. Except for the blondness and typical Teutonic features, the boys could have passed for Canadian naval cadets in trim and neat uniforms. Only a few of the officers spoke English, but all knew their mother country during the hectic days of the World War.

One of the most interesting aspects of the present journey through Ontario has been the lavish pullman coaches used by the party. "Your trains are so funny," one slight, blonde sailor was heard to remark as he gazed from within, recalling all aboard again just before it moved off to the west.

An acute shortage of carpenters, painters and other house-building artisans, is reported at the local Employment Office at the present time.

Hon. Dr. Simpson, Ont. Minister Of Education Visits the O. S. D.

Greatly Impressed With The Fine Work Being Done For Handicapped Children

IS FIRST INSPECTION

Praises Efficiency of Superintendent And Teaching Staff

On his first visit to the Ontario School for the Deaf, the Honorable Dr. J. S. Simpson, Minister of Education, was in the city yesterday and in his inspection of the School was greatly pleased with the work that is being accomplished there.

Dr. Simpson, accompanied by Mrs. Simpson, and Dr. H. E. Amos, Inspector of Auxiliary Classes throughout the province early last year Acting Inspector of the Ontario School for the Deaf, visited the various classrooms and during the latter part of the afternoon attended a demonstration of rhythm and physical training work given in the School.

In speaking to the Ontario Intelligencer, Dr. Simpson expressed much pleasure with his visit to the School.

"I am impressed by the whole school," he said, "The buildings are in a wonderful state of repair, and the grounds are beautifully kept. The officials, the domestic staff and the teaching staff are very efficient.

Deaf Children Greatly Handicapped

The distinguished visitor was particularly impressed with the healthy happy appearance of the children and stated that he could not help feeling profoundly touched with the tragedy of their handicap.

"It always seems to me that the deaf children have a heavier burden to bear than the blind. They are denied association with others because they lack the medium of speech. The happy life of a deaf child, such as that in the School, must be very difficult for it is impossible for a mother to teach it by the usual procedure of enforcement will be employed," stated Secretary Arthur Hafman of the local police department, when discussing Belleville's new Front and Bridge Street parking bylaw this morning.

Whether the bylaw must be presented through the police commission or directly to the police department from the city council, could not be ascertained today, however, just when the police department will commence to enforce this new bylaw also remained rather vague in the minds of the police heads, as no authentic information had been forwarded them nor had a copy of the bylaw been placed in their hands instructing the department to proceed with the enforcement of the new law.

You may remember years ago the city tried a 30 minute parking law in Belleville. At that time the constables did not adhere strictly to the time limit of 30 minutes. As I understand it, the parking bylaw was not passed primarily to be a means of raising funds for the city through fines, but more so to alleviate the congestion of parking and permit citizens and potential shoppers to be assured of a parking space, when it is desired," continued Inspector Arthur Hafman, when he was approached on the subject today.

Activities proceed rather serene in and around local police circles during the past few days, with the exception of a single arrest or majo" motor accident to report. The latter occurred last night's rain drove an even dozen transients into the police station, where they sought shelter and lodging free from the wet, cold atmosphere of the "jungles".

Effects of Bacterial Blight on Beans

(Experimental Farms Note)

It appears that very few, if any, of all those who grow the garden bean escape loss from the well known and destructive disease known as bacterial blight. Under ideal conditions for the spread of the bacteria causing this malady, they are carried in the seed planted, a complete failure in the crop may result. As soon as the seedling appears the diseased areas develop on the first leaves. The germs may then spread to other leaves, or from plant to plant, carried by the splattering of rain, and wind, and by men and dogs in the cultivation of the crop. For instance, the organisms are spread easily if cultivation is carried out when the leaves are moist. Therefore, this should be done only under dry conditions.

The early symptoms of the disease are easily recognized on the leaves, where the diseased areas at first have a water-soaked appearance, and later, as the crop parasitement-like tissue remains, or becomes transparent. Often the diseased areas on the pods also have the characteristic water-soaked appearance, but they do not become dark coloured as is the case with the anthracnose spot. In this disease the bacteria pass through the tissue of the pod and actually invade inside the covering of the new seed, where they persist ready to infect the next crop. Thus, the first step in growing a healthy crop is to plant seed which do not contain the bacteria causing bean blight. Seed of this type is now specified and guaranteed by certificates, a method which may be used on a small garden plot is to remove early any bean plants or pods showing which have disease lesions on the cotyledonary or seed leaves. Even the Old Timers' Association, has the extent to which it can be applied, has given good results in preliminary tests made by the Dominion Entomologists, of Plant Pathology at the University of Alberta, Edmonton.

Treating Potatoes to Control Stem Canker

(Experimental Farms Note)

The potato disease commonly known as "stem canker", "rhizoctonia", "black scurf", "potato scab" or "black scurf", probably causes more loss than any other malady affecting the crop in Canada. The black scurf on the tubers, as is the case with common scab, makes them unsaleable, but the effect on the plant stems bearing the tubers reduces their size and deforms their shape, quite depending on the seriousness of attack, and on the extent of injury.

However it is the damage to the stem that appears of greatest economic importance. The young sprout as it grows up from the seed way to the surface is more easily attacked than the older parts resulting damage than at any time later. Instead of the stem being able to grow years to occur almost wholly during the spreading period. This damage is known as "damping-off" or "scurf" on the planted set. Thus, under favorable conditions the parasite quickly grows from these patches of scurf to the sprout which it may entirely destroy or delay it to cause "misses", and stunted plants in the field.

From studies of this disease by the Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology, Edmonton, co-operating with the University of Alberta, it has become quite clear that scurfy potatoes should be treated before they are planted. Of course there is no point in treating seed which is free from scurf, but one must bear in mind that only a slight amount of scurf is just as effective in transferring the disease as a large amount is. In treating, however, one may, if not careful with the time which tubers are immersed and with the strength of the solution, injure the germination and vitality of the plants, even as much as is caused by the disease. The experiments at the Edmonton Laboratory have shown that the corrosive sublimate solution is effective in killing the sclerotia or scurf on the tubers. Two ounces of corrosive sublimate are dissolved in 30 gallons of water and, if the scurf are abundant and large, the best period is 1-2 hours, but half an hour would be quite sufficient if only a slight amount of small scurf is present. In fact it is dangerous to use the shorter period where advisable.

Normandie Makes 28.5 Knot Crossing

New York, May 13.—The French superliner Normandie, largest and fastest passenger vessel afloat, arrive, arrived from Havre via Southampton yesterday on her first voyage in 5 days, 14 hours and 30 minutes, 2,944 miles from Bishop Rock to the Ambrose Channel Lightship at the 103 hours at an average speed of 28.37 knots. The 24 hour run which from noon on May 8 to noon on May 9, when she made 725 miles at an average speed of 30.42 knots.

During the six months that the Normandie was idle at Le Havre she was redecorated and about 1,700 extra tons of steel angles and braces were built into the stern to cope with vibration complained of by passengers. The crew on after part of the top deck was removed and a lounge and winter garden smoking room was built in its place for the comfort of passengers.

This alteration added to the weight of the ship and also increased the gross tonnage considerably by the enclosed spaces considered in gross tonnage measurement.

The two after shafts were moved out further so that the propellers are further from the hull to decrease vibration, it was said. On a trial run before the Normandie sailed, the shafts were changed. Fitted with four-bladed propellors and the vibration was said by Henri Cangardel, managing director of the Compagnie Liar, to be reduced in the liner, to have been imperceptible.

Expect Cordial Rivalry

Officers and engineers of the Normandie and Mr. Cangardel agreed that the vibration had been reduced by the alterations. They said that at 30 knots on the trial run there was no more vibration than at 23 on the Ile de France or 19 on the Champlain.

FOUR KILLED IN GAY NIGHT CLUB BY FIRE, PANIC

Flames From Torch Dancer's Too Spread to Drapories

NINE WERE INJURED

Scenes of Wild Disorder as Patrons Try to Escape

San Francisco, May 13.—(AP)—Four persons died in fire and panic in a gay Night Club here early today when flames from a torch dancer's too spread to draperies and soared through the place.

Of the dead, two were women, one of them the hat check girl, who fireman said was trampled under the feet of the panic-stricken patrons as they stampeded in terror for the narrow hall exit.

The others, who had their lives were crushed and burned during the wild scene of shrieking women and shouting men.

Nine persons were reported injured and firemen said one terrified girl, a dancer, dragging a woman from a window in the flames rescued her blind husband.

The dead—Joe Dickinson, hat-check girl; Mrs. Elsie Forrest, Petaluma, Calif.; John Manson, San Francisco and Albert Pinkham Conley.

Describing the start of the fire, witnesses of the club said Viola Richman, an entertainer, was dancing with a torch in each hand.

As she swung and kicked, her toe struck one of the torches and it flew into draperies above her head.

The flimsy draperies burst into flames and the fire spread quickly through the low ceilinged room.

Another dancer, Betty Blossom, was saved by firemen.

So In Chic at Vienna

Above 50 persons were in the Club, known as the Shamrock and located in the downtown theatre district, when the fire broke out.

The hat-check girl was knocked to the floor in the cage by the scramble for hats and cloaks. She was found there later, trampled and burned.

Miss Blossom was flung aside by the throng as it pushed along a narrow hall from the club rooms and down the one-storey flight of stairs to the street.

She was rescued by Fireman Fred Wood, who dashed through the flames and smoke seeking dancers unable to find their way from the building.

Three members of the orchestra, Bob Wilde, Walter King and Don Wolfer—were found huddled in the ice box, into which they had dived. Wolfer's hair was singed and the others were suffering from smoke and shock.

All of the injured, except Mrs. Jerry Harley, dancer; Patrolman Nicholas Bruno, a fireman, and Robert Morgan, police, were treated at an emergency hospital and taken to their homes. None of the three were reported fatally injured.

APPROVE BUDGET IN THE HOUSE

Ottawa, May 13.—(CP) — With a sweeping parliamentary approval of its budget on record the Mackenzie Government today moved towards another phase of its financial policy the establishment of bank councils.

This requires an amendment to the British North America Act by the Imperial parliament and Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, said today was that the House of Commons adopt an address to the Parliament at Westminster to take the desired action.

Late last night Hon. C. H. Cahan, (Cons., St. Antoine-Westmount-Georges Lacombe), said all correspondence with the Provinces regarding the disposal of the $1,000,000 held before the House was asked to debate the address that Mr. Lapointe said there was very little correspondence and most of it had already been produced.

Both the Social Credit and C.C.F. Groups maintained a determinant in formal votes on the Budget while the Conservatives refrained, simply registering their Opposition by calling out "Nay" when the main Budget motion was adopted.

The two independent groups found themselves allied with Liberals and Conservatives in voting down one another's proposals. Thus the Social Credit amendment to the Budget by 196 votes to 16 and found no support outside the ranks of that party. The C. C. F. amendment went under to the tune of 210 to eight and Miss Agnes Macphail, (U.F.O.-Labor Grey-Bruce), lined up with the followers of J. S. Woodsworth.

The opening exercises were in charge of Mary Neil, a mother's daughter, by Mr. Ross Ketcheson, president of Moira Y.P.U. who called upon Miss Ruth Emerson, to read the address of Welcome. The meeting was then turned over to Miss Dorothy McMullen, president of the Eggleton Y.P.U. The Scripture Lesson Psalm 121 was read by Mr. Leonard Waterfall. A reading was very suitably given by Mrs. C. Pitchett. A recitation by Master Hugh McMullen and a reading M. s. M. Wilson were given. A solo was very beautifully rendered by Miss Lenora Stapley. Miss Marion McMullen presented a paper on Current Topics or the day which brought this part of the meeting to a close. Miss Grace Vandervaeter very graciously moved a vote of thanks to the friends from Eggleton to which a hearty response was given. The guests then repaired to the vestry where a very dainty lunch was served and an hour of social intercourse. A basket for their contributions of the evening which was very profitable evening had been spent together.

RURAL SUNDAY

On Sunday Rural Life Sunday will be observed in a number of churches. Of particular importance in these hours of worship will be the recognition of the place of the rural church in national society. Agriculture performing a basic duty in the state, it naturally means that the rural church, the mouthpiece and expression of rural society ought to be at its best. That it should be vigorously and efficiently maintained is patent to everyone.

For the rural church is no doubt more a part of the life of the people than the city church. It approaches more the unity which so many seek in religious and denominational life. In towns and cities there are great cleavages of denominationalism on the same street and even in the same household but in the country there is no such basic division, primarily for economic reasons and fortunately so. This rural church and its ministers are in very close association with the people, more so than in the case of city churches. Hence the supreme importance of a healthy, well supported rural church.

The rural church is the recruiting ground for the church as a whole, it is pointed out. It supplies and trains the ministers and any sagging, says the New Outlook, in the country church would be a very serious matter.

Attention is called to the new and pressing duties which have devolved on the rural congregation. It has become more a community centre. It knows its mission as the mission of the church is everywhere—man's and society's welfare.

In the country the church stands supreme and on the factors acting for betterment. There are not the numerous organizations there which assume and split up the effort in the large centres. The rural church brings together the people of the community and naturally touches the rural areas very ultimately even if attendance in country churches like that in city and town churches is often undue eclipse. The church is the centre of the inspirational life in the country.

There is one thing to be noticed about the rural membership. Many rural members are often to be found in city churches. So they learn something of the city church problems. Would it not be well if city dwellers would spend some of their time and money in the city by going to the country and worshipping with rural congregations? They may not hope for the inspiration of numbers and of large and impressive buildings for many of the rural churches are quite large and are becoming more and more places of beauty, symbolic of beauty of worship and of the soul, but there is the inspiration of worship with those about us, of common interests and bearing their share of the burden of Christian duty and of civilization. They would learn much of the problems of the country through the rural church.

It is to be hoped that Rural Sunday will be observed in city, town and country. It will provide city ministers with ample opportunity for emphasizing the importance of the work of the rural church and rural society in connection with the whole range of Christian Society and will reveal in an unexpected way to the urban worshippers something of the problems of the rural parts. Then those citizens who happen to be out of the towns and cities should take the opportunity of attending rural services. They will not regret their experience.

TEACHING PEACE AMONG NATIONS

For Goodwill Day, May 18th, to impress upon the scholars of the schools the importance of international peace, numbers of programs have been suggested. Here is a program suggested for assemblies. Juniors—peace song; Dutch Dance; German fairy tale; address on a hero of peace, on world friendship; national songs in unison; play—"Visitors from other Lands", in which children dressed in various national costumes give short talks on life in the countries they represent.

For seniors, the program includes, peace song, national dance, talk on cause of war or debate on 'Resolved that armaments should prevent war', French song, national songs in unison, play illustrating the work of the League.

In the class room, suggestions are:—For Kindergarten: children in costume holding an international party, games of other countries, national songs, dances and stories; children pretending to be speaking from other countries, as each one listens to a child in the room by radio. For Juniors, talks on other countries, stories and international games; talks on the League of Nations and heroes of peace; League games and competitions, expression of ideas by children on war and peace; tracing of peace effort through the ages, and simple plays. For seniors: Mock Trial of the League; debates, as "Should Canada help in imposing sanctions on Italy?"; discussions on peace and war, lying conditions in the world, causes of war and conditions necessary for peace; dividing up into countries and discussing social problems from the viewpoint of each country; national songs; poems.

From these suggested programs it can be felt that the children will be able to gather a really impressive view which they will not soon forget as these high ideals of peace are dramatized before them in song, story, talk and little drama.

VIOLETS

I stopped my car on the country road
At the blur of blue in the grass;
My time was precious, the sun was low,
But God's hour could I pass?
Again I saw the child I was
In the sun of a country lane;
And the scent of the violets opened the past,
And the present was cleansed of its pain.

Oh! loves of my childhood, where are you now,
Who once gathered violets with me?
Brown heads and tow-heads, your spirits draw near,
All happy, all laughing and free.
One, sleeping, on Vimy, has joined the old crowd,
Deserting his poppy-strewn bed,—
And an arrow of sunshine shoots over the hill,
And rests on the gold of his head.

Violets, violets, violets!
My heart is sore this day,
For the sunshine gone from my childhood's hills,
And the youth that has fled away.

BELLEVILLE IS NOTED FOR ITS ATTRACTIVE SHOP WINDOWS, and folks come from far and near just to indulge in window shopping—women folks, that is, for men folks would not admit that store window gazing held any attraction. Window dressing, is becoming more of an art every day and some fine effects are to be seen in a walk about Belleville's business section. It's a far cry to the day when the store windows were filled with all kind of junk, seldom changed, not more than four times a year at the most, and the window glass was so seldom washed that it was hard to see what the window actually did contain. Nor so long ago, either. Dad remembers, and Grandad certainly can tell you everything that was in the window.

MERRY CHRISTMAS TO YOU AND THEM WHAT CAME WITH YOU, or words to that effect is the usual salutation of Tom Marks, veteran stock actor of the olden, golden, ten, twent., thirt. days—spoken from the stage, generally in the Christmas season, by a man familiar with the audience which always distinguished Tom Marks. He always got a big laugh when he thus separated the sheep from the goats. It intimated that mere man was just a more or less worthless appendage which the ladies carried round with them to do the chores and wait on the fair sex generally. Tom Marks is dead, and another chapter of stage life is closed for there are no Marks Bros., or Sons on the stage now. The Marks Brothers were born and raised on a farm down at Christy Lake, near Perth, and helped their father work the farm, while the mother Marks looked after the butter, eggs and house work. Farm life did not suit the boys and one by one they slipped away and became actors, finally combining to create the Marks Bros. entertainment which produced a different play every night with vaudeville turns between the acts—also two or three weekly matinees thrown in — and all for as low as ten cents for "nigger heaven", the first of popular priced entertainment. They prospered and many a young Canadian from Halifax to the Rockies saw and heard his first stage thriller because of these boys who refused to stay on the farm. It is said that Tom Marks was advance agent for Buffalo Bill (William) Cody when he barnstormed Canada with a stage show and a stage coach and Indians for a street parade—long before the creation of the Wild West Show. Something happened the stage comedian who probably sickened and died trying to get laughs out of those grim visaged Indians that Buffalo Bill had trailing along with him. However, the show could not go on with nary a laugh, so Tom was called back to fill in the fun end. It is said that he managed to make the Indians laugh and that settled it—he remained with the stage and for years had his own company and was chiefly remarkable for his friendly fraternization with his audiences, and for his high silk hat and frock coat, and the many people who could call him Tom to his face and get back a friendly smile and generally their own first name, whether it were Brockville, Perth, Halifax, Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary or Oshkosh.

POPE DRAWS LINE CHURCH, STATE

Charges State is Encroaching Throughout World on Church's Demands

Vatican City, May 13 (AP)—Pope Pius expressed the fervent hope that the end of the Italo-Ethiopian war would be the prelude to true European and world peace."

Inaugurating the world exposition of the Catholic press before thousands of spectators, His Holiness remarked that the opening coincides with the "triumphant news of a great and good people."

Catholic newspaper activity in 112 countries was on display at the exposition, housed in the steel-framed temporary building. Only Germany and Russia among the world's principal nations were not represented. Vatican sources said Chancellor Hitler disapproved German participation.

The Pope in his address drew a clear line between the Church and State and charged that the State is encroaching upon the church's demands.

"The Catholic Church," the Pope declared, "does not intend at all to usurp anything of what appertains to politics, but merely so-called, in accordance with their end."

He lamented that politics were creating for the Roman Catholic Church every kind of difficulty, hindering the activities in those vast fields which have a greater need for the church and could most profit by her—the youth, the family, the schools, the press, and the popular masses.

CONTINUE GRANTS IN MAY AND JUNE

Provinces Much Relieved by Announcement of Labor Minister

Ottawa, May 13 (CP)—Fears of an immediate end in Dominion relief grants to the Provinces were allayed today following the announcement by Hon. Norman Rogers, Dominion Minister of Labor, the grants for May and June will be at the same rates as in effect last month.

The Minister's announcement was made here in a formal statement but night, means the Dominion will pay the Provinces approximately $20,000,000 a month for the two months.

At the same time Mr. Rogers announced a new development in the handling of the relief problem. Relief agreements now being negotiated with the Provinces will provide for a review of the relief situation at the end of each three-month period by a recently created National Employment Commission and the Labor Department.

"It is believed that such a review at quarterly intervals will permit a more accurate check on the relief problem in the various Provinces and a corresponding readjustment of grants-in-aid to meet the changing situation," Mr. Rogers said.

Expanding employment brought an encouraging improvement in the relief situation since April, Mr. Rogers said, but the Government decided to continue the April grants through May and June. He anticipated further improvement through relief works, which will receive funds from conference now taking place with the Provinces. The Minister also expected an increase in private employment.

Mr. Rogers said: "Satisfactory progress" was made at yesterday's conference with Ontario representatives regarding a work programme. This will be continued today with Hon. David Croll, Ontario Labor minister, and Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Highway Minister, representing the Province. Premier Hepburn, who led the delegation here, returned to Toronto last night.

Montreal, May 13 (CP)— The Police have been joined. Yesterday Chief Justice Greenshields warned his confreres that if a Superior Court Writ to fill vacancies is issued he duties he must be charged with the seeds of the case he was to hear."

ZEP IS FAVORED BY A TAIL WIND

Maintains Average Speed of 71 Miles Per Hour on Flight

(By Louis P. Lochner)
(Copyright, 1936, by The Associated Press)

Aboard the Zeppelin Hindenburg en route to Germany, May 13 — Favored by a good tail-wind over the Great Northern circle, the Zeppelin Hindenburg sped into the second stretch today of its return flight across the Atlantic to Germany.

Despite fog and falling winds during the first day's run from Lakehurst, N.J., the massive airliner had maintained an average speed of 71 miles an hour yesterday, for the first half of the flight to its home base at Frankfort.

The Hindenburg's position was reported by Mackay Radio to have been 49.05 degrees north latitude, 35.34 degrees west longitude at 2.30 a.m., E.D.T., today, about 2,675 miles to 55 miles an hour, but faster time at intervals raised the average.

Off to California!

Letters Written by Mr. Geo. M. James Conveying Impressions of His Travels Across The Continent to The Land of The Golden Sun

No. 5

Hello Los Angeles, good-bye Kansas City!

Although the following lines were written in Los Angeles on May 3rd, 1936, nevertheless there is much to be said concerning the previous week, and therefore we left off in article IV.

We have already pointed out that the sheep for fifty miles or more west of Pittsburg are an uneven black due to smoke and dust from factories and coal mines. From the beautiful city of Columbus, Ohio, westward, all sheep are their normal white again.

While passing through Dayton, Ohio, we saw a peculiar advertisement and, it represented an enormous ice-cream cone well executed with windows and door. A very pretty girl attendant waved to us smilingly as we passed. Children could hardly be dragged by this sight without due inspection and refreshment.

Then Indianapolis, where we spent one day, to St. Louis is 250 miles. On this journey we passed through the States of Indiana, Illinois and Missouri. The State of Indiana is level (in striking contrast to mountainous Pennsylvania), has very many excellent farms, homes and buildings. The cities of the State of Indiana are up-to-date and excellent, and reflect the prosperity of their agricultural surroundings. We have something very different to relate, in fact the very opposite, when we come to dreadful Colorado and Arizona.

Perhaps at this point it would be well to repeat that our trip from New York to Los Angeles was along our northern route from the Atlantic to the Pacific, clear across the continent of North America, to be followed by a complete tour of California, including a short home by a northern route through Reno, Salt Lake City, Chicago, Detroit and Toronto, as well as many other intermediate points to be set forth in detail in the near future. We do not have the intention of establishing a world record for time and mileage exclusively by busses and covering not less than 10,000 miles in fifteen consecutive days.

As we entered the great city of St. Louis, we saw the waters of the mighty and majestic Mississippi River to the left, and understood perfectly why St. Louis stands all the world to our famous St. Lawrence and the noble lakes it drains. Both rivers are noted for their volume and navigation, and the Mississippi is primarily responsible for the prosperity of the country through which it flows for thousands of miles. Strangely enough they both have their source in the same state, but the latter rises not very far north, but one flows south and the other east. One of the great bridges of the world spans the Mississippi at St. Louis, and is second only to the Hudson River at New York, the bridge between Tampa and St. Petersburg, Florida; a magnificent bridge near Edinburgh, Scotland, and last but not least, the Peace Bridge at Buffalo over the Niagara River. Such engineering feats cause us to honour the skill and wisdom of man, and to know that he is truly and literally only a little lower than the angels.

After our arrival in St. Louis, we heard an account over the radio in our hotel room of an exciting ball game between the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Giants, old rivals, with the final score of three to two in favor of the Cardinals after a seventeen innings game. It was a restful diversion for us after travelling all day.

WARNING ALL MARRIED MEN

About every other store in St. Louis sells something for women and the goods are so beautiful and fashionable that women cannot resist the temptation to buy and buy and then start all over again and buy still more until the poor husband is literally a bankrupt.

"Well now, you might just let me have this one additional item; it's just too pretty for anything; I don't believe I can eat or sleep without it."

If wifey only spoke thus endearingly once or twice it would not matter, but the temptation as in Paris is too great, and hence married men should keep them away from St. Louis. We never saw more beautiful wearing apparel for women in New York, or even in Paris; we were very agreeably surprised.

The State of Missouri which we crossed from St. Louis to Kansas City, a distance of 260 miles, is famous for its wheat and corn. We saw many farmers at work preparing large fields for corn, which is planted about the middle of May. We never saw more careful or more perfect cultivation in all our travels. The soil was turned over and over in various ways until it was in ideal condition. Our observations are not always of this character. More frequently we see very bad farming.

In a restaurant in St. Louis, a sign in a conspicuous place read: "Tipping is non-American". In the light of our experiences throughout this great republic, these words are highly significant. We leave the fourteen million darkies of America out of account, because like the sponge, they live on what comes to them by chance, not on what they go after on their own initiative. The true-born, white American is too proud to accept gifts and thus place himself in an inferior position. His own heart he is the freest mortal on earth, with ability and energy to earn all he needs on the basis of equality with the highest. Nothing is more inimical to him than interference with his independence and initiative; he is a master, a creator, not a despicable tool in the hands of others. We have been much refreshed by the pride of independence manifested in America with admiration. To maintain his birthright, he forms unions to secure adequate remuneration for his services to society. He does not accept favors, but demands his rights. In theory he will have the support of most thoughtful people.

A BAD LITTLE GIRL

All who travel meet from time to time very interesting people. We now relate a recent experience of this kind and more will follow in subsequent articles.

We have the esteem of a lady and her lovely daughter, much like Shirley Temple, by a few casual acts of courtesy. We were travelling the same way, and seats became great treasures. The daughter is a very much, and spoke of her in endearing terms.

"When she is good as she is now in your presence, she is very good, but when she is bad, she is very bad and should have a good old fashioned spanking." The mother confilled these words to us, when the child was out of hearing. We were much astonished that she had not heard everything yet.

When day not long ago, she did something (offense not named) which could not be passed by unnoticed. I as her mother naturally think she is beautiful too but I cannot spank or whip her, so I tried a new plan but with heartfelt grief. I said to her: "Now you are bad, you go to bed in my bedroom, dark, clothes closet until she said she was sorry and promised to be a good little girl for the future. She submitted to being locked in the closet without protest of any kind. In half an hour I returned and unlocked the door. I asked her if she was ready to be good, and she shook her head, stamped her foot, and said 'NO'."

"I have spit on your clothes and on your shoes and now, I am just waiting for more clothes to spit on." determined little lady.

"Without another word, I seized her under my left arm, and with a good strong hand spanked her vigorously until she begged for mercy and promised all that was required. She has been a lovely child ever since."

We loved her now more than ever, but somehow we recalled the story about the downfall of the angels, and wondered if this beautiful child would become eventually another of that large army, who can never find a husband that entirely satisfies.

STILL ANOTHER PROBLEM

Reports from Belleville assure us that many are interested in the problem which was given in a former article, and that some were correct, and as a result will win the special prize offered. Readers can understand in this connection that letters cannot be attended to until our return but all answers and letters will be taken care of by The James Tours, Belleville, Ontario, Canada.

For a month from May 5th, our address will be:

HOTEL BARCLAY, ROOM 306, 103 WEST FOURTH STREET,
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, U.S.A.

All letters to Mr. James or the writer will be much appreciated and promptly answered. Who does not love to receive letters, when several thousand miles away from home.

In case our first problem was too difficult for juniors, we now give another with a nice book on travels as a reward to every winner. The present problem concerns the difference in time throughout the world. For example four years ago to-day, we were on the Atlantic Ocean on our way to London, England. Every day at noon we were required to put our watches on forty minutes until they indicated five hours in advance of the time in Belleville. When it was one o'clock in the afternoon in Belleville, it was six o'clock in London. Going east we put our watches on.

On our recent journey from New York to Los Angeles, we were required at various places to put our watches back an hour, until, when we reached Los Angeles, we had put our watches back three hours. When it was one o'clock in the afternoon in Belleville, it would be ten o'clock in the forenoon in Los Angeles. Going west we put our watches back. Explain fully the reasons for these changes as outlined above, and, if your reply is correct, you will receive the prize already mentioned.

The grand scale of Nature is the chief charm of a western tour such as we are portraying from time to time. From now on this will become much more in evidence.

A LONG STRETCH

Kansas City to Los Angeles is seventeen hundred miles, and as this route is chiefly through deserts of sand, and mountains of granite ten thousand feet high (some snow-capped), we decided on one of the greatest experiments in our travels. Some Saturday night at midnight, we went on board a night bus with complete sleeping accommodation and arrived in Los Angeles exactly at midnight the following Monday night, forty-eight hours but with the three hours already accounted for on going west, a total of fifty-one hours for seventeen hundred miles. It was a wonderful trip in many ways and will be recorded in our next article.

Kansas City is second in grandeur only to Columbus, Ohio. We spent 24 hours there but would like to go again for a longer period. The streets are built down like the waves of the ocean, and the effect is startling to a visitor. The business section is substantial and permanent with many fine departments like the Philadelphia or Toronto. The visitor can have a good time in Kansas City at a very reasonable cost.

SALES TAX

Every one of the dozen or more States that we have passed through have a sales tax of two or three per cent. collected at the time of each sale by the merchant. This money in one State goes for old age pensions, another for unemployment relief and in others into the general revenue fund of the State. In Ohio, Kansas and other States, the merchant sells the purchaser small paper checks issued by the State government at a cent each in Ohio, and at ten for a cent in Kansas and these are given to the required amount in connection with each purchase. This prevents such frauds as have taken place in New York City where dishonest merchants have collected the two per cent. tax but have not always paid it over to the city. Many times a day in this great republic, you are reminded that taxes are inevitable and that the burden will grow and grow perhaps to the breaking point. Civilization too has its price but only money can satisfy.

At the state line between Missouri and Kansas, we encountered inspectors with large fans and vehicles for the plants infected with disease or pests. Almost every state in the union protects itself vigilantly in this way on the theory that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

FASHION NOTES

The St. Louis fashions are much the same as New York but many flowered linen dresses are on display. There are many long capes, white, pink, yellow, gray summer coats. Capes are quite the thing, some short but most are long. Accessories (hat, gloves, and handbag) all match.

In our next issue we may have something to say about fashions in California.

Best wishes to all.

Willingdon is Raised To Become Marquess

London, May 13.— (CP— Cable)— The King last night approved that a Marquessate be conferred on the Earl of Willingdon, who has just completed a five-year term as Viceroy of India.

The King received Lord Willingdon in audience at Buckingham Palace and afterwards the retiring Viceroy and Lady Willingdon lunched with His Majesty and Queen Mary.

Freeman Freeman-Thomas was raised to the peerage as Baron Willingdon in 1910, in 1924 he was created a viscount and in 1931, on his appointment as Viceroy of India, after completing a term as Governor-General of Canada, he was created first Earl of Willingdon. The Marquess he will probably retain his association with Eastbourne, Sussex, taking the title Marquess of Willingdon.

Officers Receive Commands of Guide Groups

Last evening at the regular Girl Guide meeting in the Y.M.C.A. an interesting ceremony took place when Ann Schuster and Esther Moncrief were dedicated as captains of Third Belleville A. and B. Company respectively by Mrs. M. K. Rennenkamp who has been Company Captain for fourteen years. In giving over the duties of Company Officer, Mrs. Rennecombe was proud that the new leaders were girls who had grown up in the ranks and were now fitted to take charge of the large company.

Audrey Lecence as Lieutenant of A. Company, Edith Arnold as Lieutenant of B. Company and leaders Mary Vos Thomson, Betty Holland, Mina Gilmer, Mickey Forster, Betty Anderson, Mary Burton, Helen Mary Schuster and Jean Thompson were dedicated last evening in the presence of a large gathering of Guide Council members and Rangers. The solemn promises of the officers were taken in a hushed and serious manner by the youthful leaders.

Betty Holland's patrol, Beth Lynch, Betty Moult, Peggy Webster, May Thompson, Doris Ashton, Edith Harvey and Joan Blakelee, again won the golden numbers for receiving the most counts during the year. As they received a similar award last year the equivalent in money was presented. Prizes for the best notebooks went to Betty Holland and Betty Moult of the same patrol.

A program of folk dancing and singing concluded a very happy evening. Last week at a masquerade party given by the leaders, seconds and guiders for the Guides, Mrs. Rennecombe was installed Camp Mother.

GEEN'S DRUG STORE

Trenton and District

Trenton, May 13 — (Special) — Reginald Hopper, employee of Hinchey's Service Station, Dundas St., East, Trenton, was seriously burned about the arms and body, when his clothing ignited from a blaze caused by a pail of gasoline igniting from sparks off the starter motor. Mr. Hopper was cleaning the ignition with a paint brush dipped in gasoline. He had the pail of gasoline on the running board of the car and when the starter was motor started, the flames spread onto the brush, jumping back, he spilled the gasoline over himself and in a moment's time he and the car were on fire. Mr. Hopper was helpless and had not Mr. Jack Kinney proprietor, and Mr. Joe Gould of the R.C.A.F. been on the spot, Mr. Hopper might have perished and the car might have burned. The two grabbed a fire extinguisher and ran over and turned it on the burning man and car. Mr. Hopper was burned so bad, that it is expected that he will not be able to work for one month. He is at present at home in bed, Dr. E. A. McGinnis attended the case.

Stolen Car Recovered Burned Up

Trenton police have had plenty of trouble locating the person or persons who are stealing the cars around Trenton. Last night Constable Somstime Monday night the Chrysler roadster of Percy Pollock was stolen from his home on Shutter Street. Police received a call at 11.45 yesterday morning telling of a car being seen on the Anglican cemetery sideroad, which is two miles west of the town. On arriving the police found the automobile in the ditch, almost completely burned up. The auto had been driven off the side of the road into a four foot ditch and it appears as though the offender had opened the gasoline tank, took out a pail of gasoline and poured it into the seat of the car, then starting the fire. The car is a complete loss, but it is covered with insurance. Police state that "this siege of car stealing" compared with 1931 when twenty automobiles were stolen before the culprit was caught. They also think, that it is the same sort of a case, for in 1931 one man did all the stealing.

Hole in One Golfers Are Going to Have a Chance

Trenton golfers do not seem to be getting enough holes in one, as the old fashioned bamboo flag poles which are stationed, at each hole are being changed to steel. Officials state that "there has never been a hole in one scored on the links since its origin and that the large bamboo poles in the cups are the cause of it.

Organizing Tennis League

The King Street Church Young People's Association are organizing a tennis league again this year as the league, which organized last year was an ultimate success. Mr. Robert Smithtrim is in charge of the organization and hopes to have a greater number of members than last year. The thirty odd members last year enjoyed themselves and the season as well as tournament was brought to a close by a great deal of recreation and competition for them. The league is going to draw up a schedule between the other tennis clubs.

HYDRO SPONSORS COOKING SCHOOL

Mrs. E. McLean Returns to Conduct 3 Days School Opening Yesterday

Home-makers of the city welcomed the return of Mrs. E. McLean, who conducted three days' cooking classes held in the Hydro Demonstration Hall, Front Street, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Mrs. McLean's winning personality has so impressed itself on the visitors to the cooking school each year that the announcement of her coming is always taken as the return of an old friend.

The well arranged "kitchen" on the stage of the hall was equipped with its range and food cabinet and trim kitchen furniture. A basket of lilacs added a gay note of colour. Mrs. McLean was welcomed to the city by Mr. Ernest Smith, representing the Belleville Hydro Electric System who also extended greetings to the audience. He emphasized the slogan "Hydro is yours —use it" explaining that cooking with electricity was the cheapest and cleanest method.

In her demonstration, Mrs. McLean pointed out that the recipes were all tried, tested and carefully elaborate for the average family. The lesson was given in the art of cooking of cakes using a standard basic recipe. So many home-makers find difficulty in cake-making that Mrs. McLean explained carefully each step and dwelt on some of the causes of cake failure. Once the standard recipe has been mastered, a great variety of cakes can be concocted with ease and success. Fully, a "drop" batter makes better cakes than a "stiff" batter when using an electric oven. With other forms of fuel a circulation of air results and a more moist batter was advisable.

The important rule in all cooking" said Mrs. McLean is never to guess at amounts. Another is to avoid opening the oven door during baking. Food will not cook as well and it is ready to eat when done.

The speaker stressed the necessity of using utensils to fit the elements on an electric stove. Too large or too small utensils result in waste of electricity and bills that are larger than they should be.

The interested audience took to heart Mrs. McLean's invitation to chat with her, and the afternoon was in the nature of a meeting of an Hydromaids group of friends.

Features of the range which make it outstanding were carefully explained by Mrs. McLean and, to keep the demonstration from growing tedious, many simple and tasty anecdotes were related.

Peanut butter chocolate cake, standard cake, date delights, and corn flake cookies scientifically cooked and appetizingly finished and garnished and the ladies present were enthusiastic in their praise of the splendid array of cookery.

Mr. Smith in the afternoon very gave many vital facts about Belleville Hydro-Electric service including which interesting attendance prizes were awarded.

OLD FOLKS' OUTING EAGERLY AWAITED

Kiwanis Club Prepare For Annual Visit to Hastings Old Folks' Home

The advisability and advantages of having a radio station to serve the Bay of Quinte District was discussed at length by Norman Ireland in an interesting way at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club held on Tuesday at the Queen's Hotel. Frank Domenico, President of the Club, presided, with Harold Johnson as song leader, and Albert Boynton at the piano.

Ernie Finkle requested a number of cars to transport the inmates of the Hastings Old Folks' Home to the annual outing given by the Club. The event will take place on Friday next and the Club members as well as the occupants of this home eagerly look forward to it. Norman George Furhan in charge of arrangements for the program announced that Jack Arthur and his Canadian Amateurs would provide the program. Mr. Furhan will be given gratis," said Mr. Furhan, and he requested that a large number of the members be on hand to assist. At the conclusion of the lunch Mr. Sandercock will be host to the Club at a luncheon.

Mr. Furhan reported on the progress made by the committee respecting the playground situation and stated that the committee appointed by the Board before they could apply to the City Council for some action on the matter. He also explained that the drainage question could be solved without a large outlay of cash and that the East Hill playground would be the best suited of any place in the city for the undertaking. Fred Hamilton, member of the Council, promised action when the matter was brought before that body. Cliff Baragar, in charge of inter club visits asked all the members to keep the date of June 10th open as on that date the annual field day for Kiwanis Clubs in the district would be held at Oshawa and there was hope that the local Club would permanently win the softball trophy.

Mr. Lockett, introduced by Eddie Logan, discussed the question of a radio station, showing the advantages which would accrue and the cost of operation. Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by Cliff Baragar for the information supplied.

Progress of Science May Make Hospital Equipment Obsolete

Windsor, Ont., May 13 (CP)—If medicine and science make the same progress during the next five years as they have during the past five, most present day hospital equipment will be obsolete in 1941, Dr. F. W. Routley, of Toronto, secretary of the Ontario Hospital Association, told 75 doctors who attended a banquet marking the tercentenary celebration at Hotel Dieu.

In hospital institutions today, Dr. Routley said, there is considerable misunderstanding between those who organize, equip and operate hospitals and the medical profession. Some doctors, he said, in their demands for equipment are liable to see only their own personal side of the matter.

Dr. Routley paid tribute to the organization of Sisters of the Church, who founded the hospital and were among the first to operate hospitals in the world.

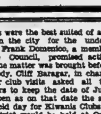
Do You Know That



IN AFRICA... PEOPLE OF THE JUNGLE HAVE A TRIBAL BARBER. WHO SHAVES HIS CUSTOMERS WITH A PIECE OF SHARPENED GLASS...?

Our own predecessors centuries back, employed just as crude methods as these present-day jungle people. Sharpened glass, and flint greased with madstones were the earliest known shaving tools. These gave way to razors of copper, bronze and then steel. The first safety razor was invented in 1762. It was very clumsy, unsafe and generally unsatisfactory. Improvements and inventions followed, but it was not until the nineteenth century that advancement in the process of steel made possible a shaving edge which would stand up. To-day the Gillette Blue Blade for example, hollow ground, sharpened by gigantic grinding machines, adjustable to watchmaker's precision and is tempered in special electric furnaces is glass-cutting hardness—producing a keen, lasting edge.

Today everything a man needs to secure face comfort is at his command. The drug store's shaving department is the culmination of years of progress. Here he can choose from the vast array of products at his disposal that make shaving a delightful and a smooth clean-shaven face a matter of pride and joy.

Livestock

Toronto, May 13 (CP)—Early cattle trading was active here today at the opening of the Toronto Livestock Market and not much was made to change English prices. There was a cattle holdover of 200 head. ITALO-GERMAN ECONOMIC PACT

Rome, May 13 (CP)—Discussion of Italo-German relations came to the front today when Premier Mussolini's gesture in refusing the Austrian crown was made known.

For the time being these discussions centre around the question of an economic alliance between the two countries for the exploitation of Ethiopia.

Plans for co-operation between Italy and Germany in the development of Ethiopia's resources were viewed as the first step in the creation of a closer economic relations which have grown up between the two states since the signing of the anti-Comintern agreement. Italian trade with France, Britain, Belgium, Holland and Switzerland has shown a decline.

Equal Radio Service Sought For Telephones

Ottawa, May 13.—(CP)— Belief that the telephone companies should be given an equal opportunity with the telegraph companies in competing for business of the Canadian Radio Commission was voiced during the meeting of the Parliamentary Committee on Broadcasting.

Chairman R. McIntosh (Lib-North Battleford) declared the committee should say at once that telephone companies, if their submission that they had equal if not better facilities, should be given an even chance with the telegraph companies in handling radio business. C. D. Howe, Minister of Railways and Canals, agreed and said he thought that assurance could be given.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied by Sims and Crawford by Financial Service.

Interest in the Industrial market is small at the moment, and the majority of traders are watching the mining list for opportunities. The exceptional strength in a number of mining issues during the few days has tended to call attention to the risks of security.

There are styles and seasons for stocks just like there are for clothes, etc. At the moment, the pronounced gold preference is in style. Reports of sensational profits captured by traders in some of the gold stocks that have moved up sensationally in recent weeks are responsible for the increased enquiries being received about every gilded issue that shows strength.

Mining, at best, is a hazardous industry, and entering into speculation as well as pure luck play an important role in successful mining operations in the mines. As one mining company president recently remarked, there is no more risk involved in mining ventures than in the industrial issues, provided that every person takes the trouble to study a mining investment with two securities, as well as the low yields afforded by the majority of high grade securities, the yield on "Oil" and "Pete" is most attractive.

The declaration of the regular dividends on the 7th of June as was in the previous period on Imperial Oil and International Petroleum was in line with expectations. It is interesting to note, however, that both of these securities are attractive on a dividend yield basis. "Oil" at present time affords a return of 5.7 per cent. while International Petroleum yields 5.6 per cent. When consideration is given to the high investment rating of these two securities, as well as the low yields afforded by the majority of high grade securities, the yield on "Oil" and "Pete" is most attractive.

Investors Watching Foreign Developments

For several weeks the uncertainties for the world's political and financial situation have cast a long shadow over the stock and security markets. Doubtless other influences have also affected the movements of commodities and stocks. But it is impossible to ignore the close alertness of the investors on this side of the Atlantic to such factors as the Italo-Ethiopian War, France and the possible devaluation of the franc.

One of the close correspondence between affairs at home and affairs abroad, the most sensitive evidence is to be found not in the movements of the speculative markets but in the more fundamental trends of business activity. A comparison of the Industrial production outside the United States and Soviet Russia is given in the May issue of The Annalist. That index reached its depression low in March, precisely the same month that the Federal Reserve Board's index of our own industrial production also reached its low point for the whole depression. In April 1933; a month after the Autumn of 1934, following a well-sustained advance; reversed movement in 1935, followed in both cases in the months of August. At its low point, April 1933, production is 15 per cent. above the level of two years later and our own production 16 per cent. Even short-term trends have striking similarity. In seventeen of the twenty-four months of 1934 and 1935 the movements of the two world production moved up or down together.

Want New Janitress Mothers Picket School

Elton, Pa., May 13—(AP)—Picketing mothers prevented their sons and daughters from going to school today.

They want a new janitress at the school, which is attended by most of the youngsters of this community of 2,000.

The students went on strike two weeks ago for the same reason, but started back to classes after being warned the truancy laws would be enforced.

Their mothers patrolled the entrances of the building today and their children remained home.

A group of fathers stood across the street supporting the views of their wives.

PLAYERS FIGHT

Durocher And Stengel Settle Argument Behind Grandstand.

By ANDY CLARKE

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York Yankees, leading the American League race, are wondering whether St. Louis Browns again are going to throw a monkey wrench into the machinery.

The Browns were the bane of the Yankees last year, tossing very savage, indeed, McCarthyites were in the opposite dugout and then departed just at the time when the Tigers happened to be the foe. They were a big help in the Tigers' march to the flag.

The Browns, with 13 straight defeats behind them, tackled the Yankees yesterday to break their losing streak in the Stadium. The Red Sox also were shut out 5-0 by the Tigers and so the Yankees remained in the van of the race but Manager Joe McCarthy hoped the Browns weren't going to make it a odd habit.

Al Thomas, starting his first game, allowed but four hits as he bottled the Yankee batsmen. Pat Malone, who was the last star for the Yanks against the Browns, seemed on the way to rejuvenation as he gave up six hits and runs in the first two innings before being relieved by Johnny Allen, who allowed only one run more.

He deserved turned in the best pitching performance of the day when he let the Red Sox down with three hits. Thomas fanned four in the first bit off him in the ninth inning. The Tigers collected eight hits, one of them a homer by Goose Goslin.

Dizzy Dean Shelled

Dizzy Dean was shelled with 13 hits as the Dodgers beat the Cardinals 8 to 4 at Ebbets Field winning his first game of the season. Brandt held the Cards to four hits in the first nine innings. Al Butcher pitched the last frame. The game was marred by bad blood between Manager Casey Stengel of the Dodgers and Leo Durocher of the Cards and they met behind the grandstand after the game to settle their differences. Durocher and Casey hit him with a bat but Stengel insists that it was merely his bat. The umpires broke up the battle.

For the second day in a row, the Giants won a ball game in the ninth inning, Travis Jackson hitting a double to drive in Mel Ott for a 5-4 win. Ott, who was the hero of the last game against the Phillies, when he whaled out a homer to score three runs and give the Giants a 6-5 win, again had singled and stolen second to lay the groundwork for the victory. Jackson poke, Clyde Castleman and Tank Lieber each hit a homer with one on for the Giants.

Phillies in Cellar

Cincinnati Reds sent the Phillies into the National League cellar when they beat them 8-4. Lew Riggs, Reds third sacker, sending home the winning run with a single with the bases loaded and two out in the seventh.

Darkness and an approaching thunder storm halted the Boston-Pirates game with the score sit-all at three in the ninth inning. It was a three-hit pitching contest in which Waite Hoyt and Carl Hubbell were pitchers, four of whom worked for the Bees.

Two other games were called on account of rain. Washington held a 3-0 lead over White Sox when the rain came down in the third inning and the game between the Athletics and Cleveland Indians was called in the second with the Indians in the lead 2-0.

Cyril C. Slapnicka, general manager of the Indians, went to the aid of the Athletics, Johnny Allen, who has become a favorite target for the hockeys of baseball, and William Harridge, American League president. Slapnicka complained that "constant heckling" was being employed in an attempt to lessen the pitcher's effectiveness. He contended that the "ballyhooing of rival teams that Allen is a headhunter" has harmed spit ball, wet arm, unfair.

BUFFALO BISONS SERIOUS THREAT IN MINOR LOOP

Found Batting Eyes And Have Won Six in Row

TORONTO DEFEATED

Lowly Senators Score Eight Runs in Third Frame

(By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Buffalo Bisons, who lost six games in a row earlier in the International League season, have begun to make up some of the lost ground now that they're found their batting eyes.

Still deep in the Second Division, the Bisons now have belted out six consecutive victories and are looming as a serious threat to the Rochester, Baltimore and Toronto clubs, which are leading a battle royal just a notch or two ahead in the standings.

Paced by Frank (Beauty) McGowan, Buffalo's array of experienced hitters, batted over the .300 mark Sunday as they walloped the Toronto Maple Leafs 10-3 in a home-run duel at Buffalo. Each team hit four hits, with five pitchers taking the thrashing, but the Bisons were not benched most of their blows in the fifth inning to score eight runs and pound four of the five Toronto twirls. McGowan hit a double and a homer with three on base in the big inning to run his hitting spree to 10 blows in 24 times up.

Montreal gained a 3-2 victory over Newark in a clash between the Royal leader and runner-up. Bob Weiland of Rochester hung up his fourth straight pitching victory as the Red wings split a doubleheader with Baltimore and Albany, its 13-game losing streak over, turned back Toronto 11-7 in the day's other game.

Pinchola Beaten

Louis (Crip) Pofil limited the Bears to three hits, including Ernie Pinchola's home run shoted to give Al Pinchola, Newark's second baseman brother, his first defeat of the season. The triumph increased Montreal's lead to two full games.

Baltimore's Orioles took the second from Rochester 5-4 in the 13th inning with Cliff Melton fanning Jack Burnett with the bases loaded. Jack however, was too much for the Baltimore pitcher, belting three for two hits, while Phil. Weintraub smacked the Birds' first homer in the sixth and a 1-0 victory. Albany collected eight runs in the third when Wilkey Wisters was walked out, and managed to stay in front although Jack Grove and Ed Rogers to cover with rallies in the eighth and ninth.

McDonald And Priestly Give 400 Fans a Real Thrill

ANDERIO DISQUALIFIED

Chief Lynx And Mercurio Wrestle 30 Minutes to Draw

Danny McDonald, middleweight wrestling champion of Canada, successfully defended his title against Lefty Priestly of Toronto, when McDonald won the only fall of the main bout, that was terminated by the hour limit, at the Arena last evening. A small crowd of less than 400 came back to witness the middleweights in action and they heartily stamped their approved to the main bout with hearty applause.

The courage and agility of both main-boaters coupled with their speed and determination to really win the night's show, as the initial two bouts of the night proved amphibian last interesting, when Mike Anderio was disqualified in his bout with Max Webber, of Hamilton, while Nick Mercurio, 198 of Italy, and Chief Lynx, also of Hamilton, grappled strongly 30 minutes of uninteresting grappling to a draw. Mercurio took some of the crowd-pleasing figuring out ways and means of tripping from behind the back of the mat, which is the object of the game.

The main bout was doubtlessly the cleanest exhibition of orthodox wrestling seen in the local ring, both Priestly and McDonald displaying clever tactics and aggressive gymnastics. The rapidity with which the bout was staged kept the crowd keen and also manage to evade their opponent when in precarious positions, however the fans like the speed and fast foot-work setting the pace home highly satisfied with their lot.

Flying holds, such as flying tackles, flying mares, flying head scissors were repeatedly in evidence. McDonald, being slightly the heavier, resorted to head-locks and body-slams while the lighter Priestly used scissors holds and leg-locks with gusto. After 36 minutes of fast and hard wrestling McDonald secured a cradle-roll that left Priestly all in the wrestle. However, McDonald took advantage of his opportunity to win with a flying tackle and body-slam, which gave him the fall of the main bout, the ball counting for Priestly proved aggressive and was punishing McDonald at full time.

McDonald Floored

Although McDonald opened the second round on the offensive, Priestly weathered the attack, and finished the round, especially at the end of the bout, Priestly floored McDonald with a flying tackle from the right leg and wound the leg around McDonald's arm-pit, later applying severe pressure to force McDonald to about for mercy and all the referee Wally Wister was needed to prevent the latter from doing so. Referee Bert Wells, who held down the third spot in the main bout, especially as he assisted Priestly in the fall of the main bout, the ball counting for Priestly proved aggressive and was punishing McDonald at full time.

Due to poor matchmaking the first two bouts were far from interesting. Per instance Mercurio could have tossed Weller without shedding a single drop of perspiration, but Mike, being an old campaigner, tried to give the customers a show and in so doing was disqualified. In the semi-final it was a poor match, for Lynx knew little of wrestle and his willingness to rough matters, but last night Mick was handled with Chief Lynx was another villain proved to be villainous an opponent as ever stepped in, it looked like a pure case of poor matchmaking in the initial two bouts.

Getting back to the main bout, however, it was the proverbial honey. The agility and speed of which Priestly and McDonald worked in the ring drew more applause, than any of the bouts that have graced the mat, which is the object of the game.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

For once local fans saw a wrestling match, that sent the two contestants "shooting". Last night, when Danny McDonald and Lefty Priestly went to work in the main bout of a three-card show, they actually did work for the money. The patrons present appreciated the orthodox methods employed by both men. There was no gouging, illegal tactics or unsportsmanlike attacks by either adversary, both entered the ring and their speed and agility were for them the admiration of the fans.

Due to poor matchmaking the first two bouts were far from interesting. For instance Mercurio could have tossed Weller without shedding a single drop of perspiration, but Mike, being an old campaigner, tried to give the customers a show and in so doing was disqualified. Another thing, Priestly and McDonald took advantage of the opportunity to win with a flying tackle and body-slam, which gave him the fall of the main bout, the ball counting for Priestly proved aggressive and was punishing McDonald at full time.

Some fans wondered how McDonald could win the first bout after being out of the ring. The fall was called proper. Priestly was inside the ropes and ready for action. McDonald took advantage of the situation, threw Umpire Wister to the rope, then the outside, and managed to pin Priestly and win the only fall registered. Really what you should have present was how McDonald wrestled, which was commendable, especially in the last few minutes. The ordinary wrestler would have conceded the fall, but McDonald won.

Whether the fight-bawlers will return to the Arena or not is a question. Only a handful of fans have witnessed last night's show. Of course all you have to do is ask them if they were present and what that main bout is be savored of fistic fireworks and they'll tell you it was a heavy. Personally we'd like to see the lighter wrestlers return under a different system of matchmaking. For instance Anderio and Mercurio, Webber and Lynx, these are still lay the blame of their non showing to the matchmaking of last night's sparring exhibition.

Elevating from the elementary stage of pre-season practices and sharpling fines, the local hurler Bob A. A. squad will move big and baggage to their new training ground on the Collegiate campus this evening. Following a short huddle between Manager George Lee and Coach Leo Barrett it was decided to forsake the Collegiate campus for a more spacious ground, the old Alemite Grounds was considered, but found to be too rough. The diamond at the Pair Grounds is being utilized nightly by the seniors, but the Bob made arrangements to complete their spring training on the Coleman Plots diamond. This evening Coach Barrett will divide his squad into two teams and play an abbreviated game, finally believe it is better to have scrub games between the first-up teams than too much of this fielding and hitting practice. At least we're not to try it for any length, announced the coach today. Incidentally any team-aged boy interested in playing baseball should not hesitate, but come out to these junior practices. The local squad is badly in need of a catcher, we hear.

Barney Ross, world's welterweight boxing champion, has agreed to defend his title against Jack Carroll, Australian challenger, in Sidney next December. It was announced in Chicago yesterday. Let's see, isn't that where Tommy Burns unsuccessfully defended his title against Jack Johnson? "Better beware Barney. Have a care, laddie."

Reports from out around Fenbero, Latta, Canniffton etc., are to the effect, that considerable interest is being taken in the South Hastings baseball league this season. Dr. Harry Blakley, yes the same Harry who invented the ball at shortstop for the Toronto Nationals, and who was the senior O.B.A.A. title in 1922, has been named as the manager of the Fenbero team in the South Hastings loop. Dr. Blakey is a rabid ball player's player man, who does not favor favoritism and is an any way apologetic. The Fenbero players will eventually find that Dr. Harry knows his baseball and if they heed his coaching they'll surely scratch their baseball mind.

Some of the aspiring baseball players in this man's town should take last out of "Holden "Dad" Johnston's book and remember he always on hand for every practice, although sometimes late is a little late and for a very good reason. But lives out near Fenbero and after doing his job comes around the house climbs aboard his bicycle and pedals his top speed into Belleville, a distance of some six miles, and attends all local work-outs of the Belleville nine. That is the kind of fellow Belleville is not graced with a few of around these parts. It's the heart and determination of Sid Johnson. We know of some local baseball players who've been weak a few blocks to practice, "If they want to play baseball they'll have to come up to the park" was the remark we heard one player make on the way to the park. Sid Johnson with his bedik afforded their long-awaited opportunity, and if you're a consistent team, they should make the most of their possibilities and enter into the baseball surroundings with gusto.

Timmy Wurzel, who has been playing with Belleville baseball six his game and shut out Yankees to for the past two seasons, turned out to practice with the local seniors on Sunday at old Roy Smith of Trenton.

ST. MIKE'S TEAM IN FIRST PLACE

Jones was relieved immediately crossing the plate to score.

Tommy Carter and Jones battled top for St. Michael's and besides pitching steady ball, was given good support by Schrie, of the Albert squad, led the hitters of the game with three safeties. 'OLD TIMERS' TEACH YOUNGSTERS HOW TO HIT THE HORSEHIDE

(By Earl Hilligan, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Chicago, May 13 (AP)—Youth may be served eventually, but a few "old timers" in the American League are busy these days proving they still can teach the youngsters a trick or two.

Young, ambitious pitchers in the junior circuit can take lessons from that surprising veteran of Boston Red Sox, Bob (Lefty) Grove. After a great comeback last season, the old fireball star's ability to do so well this year was a matter of doubt to many seniors, but with the season a month old "Lefty" has a record of five wins against one loss and leads the circuit in strikeouts, with 26.

Mel Harder of Detroit Tigers is another twirling "ancient" making things hum. The "Alabama Colt", as Vic is known among his mates, appeared in only 13 games last season, finishing with a 5-3 record. Yesterday he beat Boston's powerful Red Sox, 5-0, allowing four hits, to annex his third win of the year against one defeat.

George Blaeholder of Cleveland Indians also has been around a while. He broke in with Columbia and has three games on the right side of his pitching ledger to lead the circuit.

Goslin Hitting .348

Leon (Goose) Goslin, whose .350 and above batting mark for both last fall, has been in the league since 1921 but the way he's hitting and clip-clopping him look like an ambitious rookie determined to make the grade this year. The "gander from Salem" got two hits in four times at bat, one of them a homer.

Manager Jimmy Dykes of Chicago White Sox is supposed to be creakingly near the pine and slipping, but Manager Dykes had just a .328 average. Another Sox veteran, Luke Appling, is batting just under the .300 mark and is the second place among the leading rookies hitters with nine.

Lon Gehrig may not be classed strictly as a veteran but he signed with the Yankees just 13 years ago and in that year in 1925 Lou is "hot" once more and boasts a .367 mark at the plate.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Al Simmons, Chicago White Sox big game and shut out Yankees to break team's losing streak.

Vic Sorrell, Tigers: Shutout Red Sox with three hits.

Jo Jo Moore, Giants: His single in ninth scored Mel Ott with run that beat Cubs.

Ed. Brandt, Dodgers: Held Cardinals to four hits while mates pounded Dizzy Dean and won.

Lew Riggs, Reds: His single in the seventh with the bases full and two out gave team 6-4 win over Phillies.

Bill Brubaker, Braves: Led Pirates attack against Bees, driving in three runs with a homer and two singles.

RELIEF ISSUE TALK PROGRESSES

Premier Hepburn Satisfied With Result of Conference

Ottawa, May 13 — Satisfactory progress was made today at conferences between Dominion and Ontario government representatives on relief matters, according to Premier Hepburn who headed the Ontario delegation.

Premier Hepburn, at the conclusion of the conference with Prime Minister Mackenzie King and several of his ministers said he was finished but members of his delegation would continue discussions. There would be no announcement until agreement had been reached and approved by the Dominion Cabinet, he added.

While no announcement was made before the conference, it was understood proposals for a program of road-building and public works as well as the grants-in-aid for direct relief would be discussed.

Last year the Dominion grant for direct-relief to Ontario was $600,000 a month, from December to March this was increased to $1,000,000 a month. Last month it dropped to $889,500 effectiveness of the 15-per cent reduction.

MARMORA

Marmora—A highly enjoyed three-act farce was presented in the Town Hall on Monday evening by the A.Y.P.A. of Christ Church, Campbellford, under the auspices of the Ladies Guild of St. Paul's Anglican Church. The play entitled: "Look Who's Here" drew a fairly large crowd considering the extreme heat of the evening. The plot concerned a young married couple and the difficulties they encountered trying to conceal their marriage from their wealthy Aunt Alice, a marriage hater. Some highly amusing situations arose when identities were changed and the characters continually in "hot water" carried out the performance with skill and sincerity.

The cast of characters is as follows:

Jennie, a servant, Elsie Southern; Norman Hamilton, a husband, Jerry Conbrane; Estelle Winchell, Lyman's sister, Mary Hines; Thomas Rotanah, Lyman's pal, Frank Roe; Aunt Alice, Lyman's Aunt who abhorred Mrs. J. Bence; Thomas, a delivery boy, Bob Morrison; Rose Stanford, a friend, Rose Beandoin; Irene Andrews, Estelle's friend, Vera Grant; Grace Sterling, Tommy's fiance, Margaret McGregor.

Canada Must Have Protection Of Some More Powerful Country

Sir R. Falconer Believes a Policy of Isolation Unsuited For Canada

ENVIED BY OTHERS

Saskatoon, May 13—(CP)—Comment that "if Canada takes up the policy of isolation she will envy the rest of the world, then we must eventually join with the United States" was left today with members of the Canadian Club here by Sir Robert Falconer of Toronto.

Sir Robert, former president of the University of Toronto and a student of foreign affairs said it was his belief that Canada was too rich in resources and too centrally located to remain long without the protection of some more powerful country, many nations would cast covetous eyes on the country if it tried to live entirely to itself.

Sir Robert stressed the point that there was not anti-American or a flag-waver. However he wished to keep Canada in the tradition of Great Britain. "I want my life and my son's life to remain under the same cultural influence and heritage that it has been," he concluded.

NEW HEAT RECORD 12 ABOVE MEAN

May is Likely to Establish New Temperature Standard in Toronto

By the Canadian Press

The weather man looked up some figures today and announced that at the present rate May is going to set up a new heat record in Toronto. Up to the present time the average temperature is 12 above the normal mean for May. Mean so far this month is around 63 degrees, and the hottest May on record was in 1911 when the mean was 613.

Showers were forecast in most parts of Ontario for Wednesday except in the lower lake region and Georgian Bay, where it is expected to continue warm.

At 8 A.M. Tuesday it was 62 in Toronto. Galt reported 76 with a cool breeze from the west, welcomed by farmers who resumed work on the land.

In the Brantford district the heat wave continued with a noon temperature of 82 degrees and prospects of even warmer weather.

An all-night fog in the Sarnia area lifted today and thermometers had dropped from yesterday's high of 82 to 70 degrees.

The almost complete lack of air movements contributes to the "stickiness" of which heat sufferers complain.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons get into the blood. Your whole system gets sluggish and you feel "down and out."

Then you need those famous Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Refuse substitutes. Only 25c at all druggists.

FARMING IN A BIG WAY . . . Farmers like Imperial Oil products. One Alberta farmer, who for years has used only Marvelube Oil in his tractor, decided that the eight-year-old machine would need new pistons and cylinder sleeves, but when the machine was taken down it needed only new piston rings. "I honestly think your Marvelube has had a great deal to do with the life and performance of this tractor," he wrote.

TREASURE HUNTERS . . . When prospectors and miners took to the air, mining in Northern Canada began its greatest development. A-1 pilots, dependable aircraft and quality gasoline and oils make northern flying safe. 90 per cent of every 100 miles flown in Canada are travelled with Imperial Oil products).

HIGHWAY BEACONS . . . Wherever you drive you will see the 3-Star Imperial Sign. If it could speak it would say to you, "I mark a place where everything will be done to serve you well." Get the best out of your car with Imperial Gasoline (3-Star or Esso) and Marvelube Motor Oil. While you are in the station find out about Atlas Tires and Atlas Batteries. Allow Child To Select Clothes

More Co-operation is Possible Through a Freedom of Choice

By LISA GRENELLE

FLORENCE WASN'T very nice about the clothes I selected. Whatever mother liked, she didn't, whatever mother thought becoming Florence didn't.

Back and forth mother tramped to the store changing things for Florence, dresses, hats, coats and socks that Florence didn't like and wouldn't wear, chiefly because mother chose them.

She did this although she didn't have time. She had something else to do besides run errands for a spoiled adolescent.

Besides, there's the principle of the thing. A mother's a mother, but not a slave, servant or a nonentity. She should insist upon the rights and dignity of her office and for the sake of her own self-respect, and in order that the children will respect her. How can children respect the opinion of an errand-running mother?

But then, there's the other side of the question. Just as mothers are mothers, so children are children, and not toys or possessions, something to boss and boss about. Their opinion should be respected, too, especially about the clothes they wear. After all, they must wear them.

I suspect there is more in Florence's story than meets the eye, even though Florence at present may be making a messenger of her mother. I suspect that in the past mother may have been guilty of treating Florence rather like a possession, though I wonder. I suspect Florence was not consulted as to what she should wear, not even as to the color of her hair ribbons. I suspect mother had very positive opinions about all that.

Had Own Ideas

But all the time Florence had ideas of her own. Perhaps they were not very good ideas, to be sure, but Florence didn't know that. Nor would she ever be convinced of it until she was given a chance to try them out herself.

There is, I think, too much emphasis put on the necessity of self-expression today. But every child, in order to be content, in order to develop in proper balance, should be allowed some outlet for his own preferences.

At an early age a child should be permitted some choice in his own dress, even though his taste isn't so good. Of course, mother's purse and knowledge must be considered, but otherwise, why not let Janie experiment, with the provision that she must wear the dress she has chosen, even if it turns out a mistake.

After having to wear a coat she had picked out herself for two years, even with sensitive and independent daughter has become very humble and reasonable. Instead of fussing to buy anything else without mother's advice.

I think you will find that if you give your children freedom of choice in little things, from the beginning, you will find them much more co-operative, not nasty or headstrong, and much more willing to accept your decision in important matters without argument or resentment.

WEDDING INVITATION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We have received a wedding invitation to the wedding of my husband's cousin's daughter. We never see these people, and do not know the daughter. My husband works at night, and the wedding is in the evening. We are not in a position to lose a day's salary in order to attend this wedding and send a gift. Please tell me what to do? What should we do about not going? Should we let them know or send a card?

Reader.

If you received a formal, engraved invitation to the church ceremony only this does not require an answer. If you are also invited to the reception, this does require an answer, in a form similar to the form of the invitation: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Oliver Taylor regret that they are unable to accept Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Pearsall's kind invitation for their daughter's wedding reception on Thursday, the tenth of May.

If the invitation is in the form of a note, your regret should also be in the form of a note. Like this: Dear Mary,

You were very kind to invite Charles and me to Kay-Kay's wedding and we are so sorry that we shall not be able to be with you and Tom for this important occasion. But Charlie's position means that he is employed in the evening, and so we must give up the happiness of being with you on the bride.

Do give our felicitations and best wishes to Jane and her fiance, and I hope to have the pleasure of meeting them both very soon.

Dearest love from Charlie and me to you and your family, and thank you again for your kind invitation.

Devotedly,

FORMAL DRESS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. On which side of the dress should a corsage be worn?

2. Is a lace dress (peach color) still in style for formal affairs? This particular dress is very formal and has a small jacket.

3. Is a hat worn at formal dances and can any kind of coat be worn?

1. Wear the corsage on whichever side of your dress you wish. Usually it is worn on the right, but it really is a matter of preference. Often, at a dance, the corsage is worn on the left, since this is more convenient.

2. Yes, a peach-colored lace dress is in high fashion for formal wear. And a lace dress, of any shade, that has a matching jacket is a gold mine to own, for it is adaptable to so many occasions, formal without the jacket, informal with the jacket. You're fortunate to have one.

3. Hats are not worn with formal dresses. Your coat should be some kind of coat that is an "evening wrap".

INFORMAL INVITATION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly advise me what kind of invitation to write inviting about seven couples, between the ages of nineteen and twenty-five, to a party in honor of a cousin visiting me from Montreal.

A.

Your note of invitation might be worded:

Dear Mary,

I would like very much to have you come to a little party that I am planning to give for my cousin, Grace Allen, who is coming to visit me from Chicago. It will be an informal evening party, on Thursday, the tenth of May, at my home, and I hope very much that you can come, for I want so much to have you and Grace know each other.

Dearest love.....and the hope of "yes".

Devotedly.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

SHOULD THEY HAVE A CHURCH WEDDING?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am going with a girl who belongs to one church, and I belong to another. When we get married, she wants to have a church wedding. What would you do, if you loved this girl a lot?

Undecided.

To my way of thinking, everyone should worship God in his own way, and it's up to you whether you're willing to give your fiancee her way about the church wedding or not. Men usually leave such decisions to the bride, unless they're particularly set in their ways.

Works All Day, Has to Stay Home Evenings

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I work until one o'clock every afternoon, and then have to stay home every evening. It's really discouraging. The only way I am allowed to go out is by telling my parents I'm going to visit at certain girl's house. If I don't go there, I stay home, worry and cry, because everyone else seems to be having a good time.

There's a certain boy of 30 who has been asking me to go out with him, and I just don't know what to do. The only way I could manage would be by telling my parents I'm going to this girl friend's. Would I be doing right?

Very Lonely Girl.

I hope if this letter should meet the eyes of parents who are called strict, they will take this warning to heart. When a girl works and isn't allowed to go out sometimes with other young people her impulse is to sneak. That's very "bad medicine", as the Indians say for bad business.

I trust this girl won't sneak, which is bad for one's self-respect, and that her parents will be sensible and modern, and let the boy of 30 visit her where he should — at their own home.

WANTS THIS GIRL TO COME TO HER SENSES

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I love this girl very much, but every time she goes any place with him, she seems to try and make as big a fool of herself as she possibly can. She admits that she does this, but says she gets nervous when she's in company, and can't stop acting silly.

I'd drop her altogether, if I didn't like her family so much. They're just swell. So, could you tell me any way to make this girl come to herself?

Puzzled.

If the young lady becomes silly in company because she's nervous, something should be done for her nerves. She's probably very high strung and meeting strangers upsets her mental balance. If it really is as bad as you say, why not suggest to her family that they take her to a specialist? Especially, if you are considering marrying her.

SMOKING IN BED FATALLY BURNED

Locked Bedroom Door Prevents Rescue by Wife

Smelling smoke, Mrs. Acton tried to enter the bedroom but could not get through the door. Before the fire department brought the fire under control, the elderly victim had been seared about the legs.

A QUIET DINNER is made even more soothing by a graceful hostess gown. A new model is of rich gold green crepe, in a sheath-like silhouette, with a cluster of waterlilies at the neckline. Falling from the shoulders almost to the floor is a long cape of the fabric, sunray pleated.

DOTS SWIM into the mode again. A new ensemble has a brown and white polka dotted silk frock worn with a beige novelty wool coat fitted with the dress print and having revers of the same.

COUNT BEADS as a favorite trim again. A dinner dress of sky blue crepe has a delicate fern tracery of silver leaves embroidered on its huge sleeves.

AN INVITATION TO DINNER won't chase smiles to the woman who owns this new dinner ensemble. It is of pale rose silk satin with a plain bodice and sun-ray-pleated, long, slim skirt. The jacket is a softly tailored cutaway.

WHEN IT SLOWS cool in Spring then it is time for a nice cape made of barancloth with the golden yellow and dark brown fur worked in interesting patterns. The mode is a hip-length cape having a jacket front with pockets and a square shoulder yoke.

AT HOME in town or in the country is a rough beige tweed coat done on double-breasted lines fastened with huge gold buttons. There is a blouse and scarf of printed blue and white crepe and a skirt of matching coat tweed.

"How should I know? I thought no reason..... But it did. It did. you'd like it.....That was the big idea."

"More than anything I can think of! I don't know how to thank you."

"I'll think up some way. Don't worry about that."

Jean scarcely heard. Her fumbling mind had paused in the next important question. "Should I dress?" she asked anxiously.

"I believe I'd wear something."

"You know what I mean, silly! Where are the seats?"

"Can't tell you yet. But they won't be in the balcony. I thought I'd dash off the old list once more. If I can just find somebody who'll lend me a shirt."

"It's all too wonderful to be true," Jean sighed.

When the night of the concert arrived she dressed early after dinner that Daddy Jack might see her. It was a flushed and happy face that smiled in Jean's lawyer out of the mirror on her dressing table. She hummed a little tune as she passed the coats through the dancing wave of her red-brown hair in a final touch.

"Oh, Mumsy.... Please come and inspect me. Am I quite all right?"

"You look very nice indeed, dear. Doesn't she John?" This last to the lawyer who answered the call also, lingering in the doorway.

"Indeed she does. Our little girl seems to have grown up. Very sweet you are, Bunkie. I'm proud of you in all your glory."

"I wish your dress was not quite so low in the back," Mrs. Sawyer observed in gentle anxiety. "I suppose it's all right, but....."

"Of course it is, Mumsy. I designed it myself. It's dreadfully discreet compared with some of them."

"Bunkie's got a very pretty back. If anyone is clamoring for my opinion," Sawyer remarked. "And I must be going."

Jean's heart seemed to be sinking to the vicinity of her new satin slippers as she followed the usher down the theatre aisle. Where was that boy taking them? Up on the stage? Almost as bad.... The very first row of the orchestra circle. Aisle seats! She dropped into her chair with a gasp of consternation.

"What's wrong?" Don wanted to know, settling himself languidly with a broad grin. "Class, eh?"

"I feel so terribly prominent," she whispered nervously.

"Trust me. When I go out with a beautiful lady I want to get credit. Don't worry....I'll take the bows for us both."

"You look very elegant yourself, Don. I forgot to tell you."

"Thanks. I'll tell dear Edward you admired his shirt. Maybe he'll let me have it again."

"They are marvelous seats. And such a crowd!"

"I say. Hello..... look who's here. First box on the right.

Jean already had seen. For an instant she was unable to avert her gaze.

Blythe Cannon, posing gracefully close by the plush-covered rail, directly behind her was Mr. Sturgess. The small man with the shining bald head was Mayor Jennings. Looming in the shadows, Spencer Cannon's bulky figure.

INSTALMENT II.

Blythe, in a shimmering gown of white, paused while Sturges lifted the crimson wrap from her bare shoulders and arms. In that brief instant, her gray eyes encountered Jean, passed to Don. He was rewarded by a faint nod of recognition.

"Get...that!" whispered Browne with a chuckle. "My disguise didn't fool her for a minute. She knows me behind the old fox and Jack Rizzards shirt. Took a story from Blythe this afternoon all about long..... Some charity racket. Did I tell you?"

Jean shook her head. The printed page before her had blurred suddenly. Why did it hurt? There was good time?"

"I enjoyed it immensely."

"I thought I'd—with Miss Sawyer to stare at. She seems to be stepping out these days."

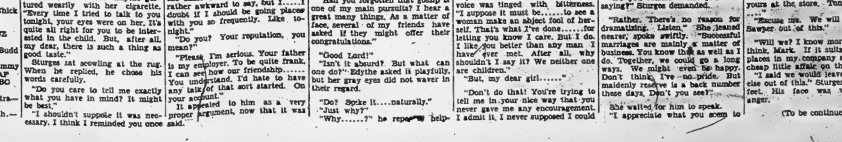
"Is she?"

"Please, Mark....." Edythe gestured wearily with her cigarette. "Every time I tried to talk to you tonight, your eyes were on her. It's quite all right for you to be interested in the child. But, after all, my dear, there is such a thing as good taste."

Sturges sat scowling at the rug. When he replied, he chose his words carefully.

"Do you care to tell me exactly what you have in mind? It might be best."

I shouldn't suppose it was necessary. I think I reminded you once said.



that Gorham has a village complex. It might be well if you would think a little about your position here..... and friends."

"I'm inclined to agree with you," Mark agreed quietly. "I've reached the same conclusion, in fact. It's rather awkward to say, but I've my doubt if I should be going places with you so frequently. Like to-night."

"Do you? Your reputation, you mean?"

"Please. I'm serious. Your father is my employer. To be quite frank, I can see how our friendship..... You understand. I'd hate to hurt any half of that sort started. On your account."

It appealed to him as a very proper argument, now that it was

Stirling and District

Stirling—The morning service of St. Paul's United Church which was specially devoted to Mother's Day was divided entirely by the Sunday School and held in the church parlours. Mr. Fred Wallis, superintendent, was in the chair and the program consisted of a group of special choruses by the junior members of the school and several excellent recitations. There was also an interesting exercise given by the members of one of the junior classes, in keeping with the day, two special addresses were given by two students from Albert College, Belleville, with each speaking on the subject of Mother Love. It was a most interesting service greatly enjoyed by the entire congregation and many friends.

Hail Were Hard on The Shrubs

The unusual heat wave of the past few days has been a constant worry to the farmers of the district who are in the midst of the Spring's work. Horses unused to the heavy work and heat, coming both at the same time suffered greatly, many farmers had to stop work until it became cooler while a couple of horses succumbed to the heat. The days however lost no time in finishing the old swimming hole and bathing suits were in evidence again on the street on Saturday. Activities have started at the popular Oak Lake Summer resorts and everyone seems to enjoy July weather in May.

Injures Hand at School

Carleton Wallace, aged eight, son of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Wallace also resides here, suffered a painful injury on the middle west of finger on the Canadian National, had the finger or his right hand badly crushed while attending Stirling Public School on Friday of last week. The little fellow along with other pupils was going out for the noon recess when the wind blew the heavy door shut, crushing the finger of the teaching staff rendered first aid and he was later removed to the office of Dr. H. H. Algar for treatment.

St. Andrew's Guild

The regular weekly meeting of St. Andrew's Guild was held in the Sunday School rooms on Monday evening with a large number of the members present. The program which was directed by Mr. Duncan Shadgett was under the supervision of the Literary Dept., led by Mrs. Alethia Spry, 2nd Vice President. After the opening exercises the Scripture lesson was read by Thos. Foster with the Rev. Howland as the assigned portion. Mr. Lorne Johnson led in prayer. Miss Gena Spry read the secretary's report of the last meeting and during the business part of the meeting it was decided to hold a social evening on the first Monday night in June to mark the closing activities for the summer season. The program arranged by the Literary Dept. was based on a study into the lives and characters of prominent Methodist poets. Mrs. Sleeper Rollins was the first speaker and gave an interesting address on Sir Gilbert Parker and several of the famous selections were given. The life and works of Paul Laurence Dunbar were very capably dealt with by Miss Gena Spry, and her famous "Canadian Boy" was given in recitation by Miss Dorothy Montgomery. Mrs. Alethia Spry then gave a word picture of the life of John Masefield. These interesting addresses were of great value from a literary standpoint and very appropriately chosen. Mrs. Fred Rollins sang a soprano solo, playing her own accompaniment. The meeting was then closed with the Benediction after which all thoroughly enjoyed a social period with Mrs Alethia Spry conducting a "Slogan Contest". This organization has reached the half-way mark in a year under the direction of the very capable executive in charge and every department of its work has progressed with rapid strides. The type of programs provided throughout the past six months have been both entertaining and helpful. The marked increase in membership gives evidence of real interest on those in charge of the work are to be congratulated.

St. Paul's Young People's Union

The meeting of St. Paul's Young People's Union held in the Sunday church parlors on Monday evening was under the auspices of the Missionary Department, led by Mr. Lloyd Rowland. Miss Mary Rollins, President of the organization, was in charge of the opening exercises and devotional period which began with a brief song service followed by a responsive scripture lesson led by L. Rowland. The secretary's report of the last meeting was read by Mrs. Nora Wescott, and the remaining part of the program directed by the chairman of the program committee. The speaker of the evening was Rev. R. W. Howland who gave a splendid address based on the theme "Christian Missions" wherein he set forth through a group of figures the vast possibilities in this work by the great United Church of Canada. This was a very educational address which emphasized the need of earnest workers in mission work which is the life of the Church. Mr. Reginald Shadgett then offered a pleasing violin solo accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Howland and the final number on this fine program was a famous character contest directed by Lloyd Rowland. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction. Next Monday evening will be the final meeting of the season, activities will then be suspended for the usual summer recess.

Mother's Day at St. Andrew's

As a part of the special Mother's Day service which took place in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning, a special baptismal service was conducted when the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Fargey was presented for Baptism (Barbara Jane Fargey) and was christened by the Rev. Howland. As a prelude to this impressive service and during the offertory, Mrs. R. H. Williams offered a group of selections from the favorite "Mother Songs". Mr. Arthur Duncan also assisted with the recitation of a tenor solo "Mother" by Rev. J. A. Kofford delivered an inspiring address based on "The love of Mother". This was a most interesting service both helpful and enjoyable to the large congregation that gathered.

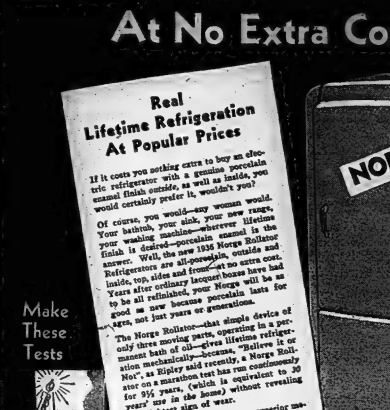
PET PUSSY CAT SAVES HER SKIPPER

Boton, May 13 —(CP)—OCapitain Gus Dunskey of the fishing trawler White Cap credited his pet cat Lizzie with saving him from a fiery death out on the western fishing banks, off the Nova Scotia coast.



"It was 5 a. m. May 2." the skipper said. "All aboard were asleep excepting the lookout and the helmsman. Lizzie clawed at my face until she wakened me, and I jumped from a briskly burning bunk."

Captain Dunskey explained a spark from the galley had blown through a ventilating shaft onto his bedding.

If it costs you nothing extra to buy an electric refrigerator with a genuine porcelain enamel finish outside, as well as inside, you would certainly prefer it, wouldn't you?
Of course, you would—any woman would. Your bathtub, your sink, your new cars, your washing machine—wherever lifetime finish is desired—porcelain enamel is the answer. Well, the new 1936 Norge Rollator Refrigerators are all-porcelain, outside and inside. And they cost not a cent more than Norges of other years. Norges will be as good as new because porcelain lasts for years, not just years or generations.
The Norge Rollator—that simple device of only three moving parts, operating in a permanent bath of oil—gives lifetime refrigeration automatically—keeps it "Silent as Sir Rollator." Rollator is equivalent to 30 years' use in the home without revealing the slightest sign of wear.
Not only is the Norge Rollator superior mechanically, but only it is all-porcelain, inside and out. Only it is all-porcelain, and the most durable with its all-welded, all-steel cabinet and seamless one-piece inner lining. Only it has curves for cleanliness, accessibility and convenience—in fact, so silent, economical operation—so quiet—so silent that you have to put your ear against it to tell whether or not it is running. So economical that it costs but a few cents a day—one-tenth as much as ordinary lasquere prices of Norge's finished in porcelain enamel, and these prices include, not only all the features listed below, but the genuine all-porcelain enamel finish, outside and inside.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, MAY 14, 1936

LORD ALLENBY, CONQUEROR OF JERUSALEM, DIES

Appeal on Behalf of G. T. R. Stock Holders Allowed by Privy Council

EXTEND SCOPE OF RADIO BOARD, URGED BY LABOR

W. T. Burford Suggests No New Licences In Private Stations

URGES NO RENEWALS

Attacks 'Closed Shop' Efforts of American Musicians' Federation

Ottawa, May 14 (CP)—Extension of broadcasting scope of the Canadian Radio Commission was urged upon the Parliamentary Committee on Broadcasting today by W. T. Burford of the All-Canadian Congress of Labor. He suggested no further licences be issued private broadcasting stations and no renewals be granted when those now in existence expire.

Congratulating the commission on the "excellent but abbreviated" news services now broadcast, Mr. Burford urged that this be enlarged.

Charging the American Federation of Musicians through its subsidiary in Canada with an effort to force a closed shop on broadcasting stations, Mr. Burford praised the manner in which the Canadian commission had dealt with the musicians' problem in 1935. If all broadcasting had been in private hands then, he said, it was evident, Mr. Burford said, "the American Federation of Musicians would have had little difficulty in establishing a closed shop in radio throughout Canada."

To questions Mr. Burford said he was not prepared to say whether the government would get the money necessary to take over at once all broadcasting stations, but thought it would be difficult, however, he said, when the government could spend $600,000,000 on relief without doing anything to remedy the unemployment.

The All-Canadian Congress was opposed to advertising on the radio.

"We do not believe a public utility should be dependent upon advertising for its existence," he said. "Broadcasting stations were on record as declaring advertising on the air is a 'nuisance.'"

Favors Proper Advertising Plan

Daily newspapers and magazines were the proper places for advertising, Mr. Burford said. "Where excesses radio advertising was a nuisance tolerated on the basis that the user could not be bothered turning the dial."

Chairman Beaubien asked the witness if he did not think air advertising "traditional." Many music lovers artists and radio workers, stimulated sale of goods and increased employment generally.

Mr. Burford said that such increase was offset by the loss of advertising and employment on newspapers and in shops.

R. W. Ashcroft, Toronto, formerly manager of the Toronto Radio Commission, Canadian Broadcasting Company, 1932 to 1936, appeared before the body solely on his own behalf, was given an opportunity to present a brief setting out his personal views.

He did not represent any organization, he said, nor any special interests, Mr. Ashcroft said. He had appeared before all previous Parliamentary Radio Committees.

Use Military Sanctions To Guarantee League Against Aggressor Foe

Premier Baldwin Declares British Attitude—Common Action by Other States is Essential—Military Sanctions 'Cannot be Avoided' in Long Run, He Says

London, May 14—(CP-Havas)—Prime Minister Baldwin told a conference of women Conservatives in a speech here today that Great Britain was prepared to use military sanctions to protect League of Nations members from aggression, provided other League States joined in common action in such a case.

Military sanctions, Mr. Baldwin said, are an essential part of the collective security system. "In the long run, and perhaps on occasion in the short run, they cannot be avoided," he added.

However, there must be no "sleeping partner" in collective security, Mr. Baldwin warned. He declared defence of world peace was not a task which should be left exclusively to the British fleet.

The failure of sanctions in the Italo-Ethiopian war, he reminded his audience, does not mean the collapse of the League. Britain is not prepared to accept the blame for the sanctions fiasco, but a concerted effort must be made to strengthen the League Covenant in order to present a united front against future aggression, he said.

To this end, Mr. Baldwin urged that prompt reconsideration of the pact, particularly the clauses referring to the economic and military sanctions obligations of all members, be effected at the League's next meeting this autumn.

"The conclusions we arrive at may be of utmost importance to the future of Europe," he declared.

"For a well try out collective security as far as we can all go together. To that I pledge you my word."

DAMAGE CLAIM SHOULD PROCEED COUNCIL FINDING

Latest Step in Protracted Legal Battle After Arbitration

LITIGATION FORECAST

Committee Finds No Beneficial Interest to C. N. Railways

Toronto, May 14 (CP)—The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council today allowed the appeal of George Lowbond, acting on behalf of a number of holders of stock in the Grand Trunk Railway, in the litigation concerning the terms on which the G.T.R. was taken over by the Canadian National Railways fifteen years ago.

Lowbond originally sought through the courts a declaration to the effect that he and other holders of first, second and third preference stock of the Grand Trunk Railway were illegally deprived of their dividends.

That Lordships of the Privy Council found that—if the above facts are found and the claim plaintiff (Lowbond) succeeds—the only person who would be deprived of the stock would be the Crown.

With respect to Lowbond's claim for damages against the defendant companies, G.T.R. and others, alleging breach of duty in connection with plaintiff's name from the register, their lordships say no ground upon which this claim could be prevented from proceeding.

The privy council decision was the latest step in a protracted legal battle which followed shortly after a Grand Trunk arbitration board, appointed by the Canadian government, decided that common and preference shares of the company having a certificate value of about $175,000,000 were worthless.

Sees Way Clear.

R. K. Hawkin, who promoted the appeal on behalf of the stock-holders, expressed the opinion that today's decision has cleared the way for further litigation.

He said he was told that the Canadian parliament, on April 22, had agreed to a motion for papers on the subject to be laid before the House of Commons. He said further he thought it was very likely that the House should read them immediately.

Rome, May 14.—(AP)—The Chamber of Deputies unanimously and unanimously ratified the bill creating an Italian Empire in the presence of Premier Mussolini and his entire government today.

The assembled Deputies were uninformed in Black Shirts. They were enthusiastic.

Famous War Hero Urged World Force for Peace

Attacked Ultra-Nationalist Tendencies in Europe— High Commissioner in Egypt For Six Years—Rector of Edinburgh University

London, May 14.—(AP)—Viscount Allenby, hero of the Palestine campaign of the Allies during the Great War, died here today. He was 75 years of age.

Viscount Allenby, who held the rank of Field-Marshal, died at 12.30 p.m.

He had been installed as rector of Edinburgh University, April 24. In his installation speech the distinguished soldier made a strong plea for international understanding and attacked prevailing ultra-nationalist tendencies in some European countries.

Allenby's forces in 1917 and 1918 captured Palestine from the Turks. The campaign was climaxed by the capture of Jerusalem but the advance from the south continued until the Turks had been expelled from the rest of the country.

Last of Great War Leaders

The last of Great Britain's outstanding military leaders of the Great War, the Viscount and Field Marshal led the triumphal Allied entry into Jerusalem, but lived to renounce "the glory of conquest with its gain of Dead Sea fruit."

Advocate of Peace

The renunciation came less than a month ago when, at his installation as Lord Rector of Edinburgh University, he advocated "enlightened" international policies for the maintenance of world peace.

That, too, was his last public appearance.

Except for his functions on state occasions, when he served as gold stick-in-waiting, Lord Allenby had taken little part in public life since he returned from Egypt in 1925. He was High Commissioner for Egypt, 1919-1925.

HAND OVER HAND HE CROSSED OVER FIRST FOOTBRIDGE

Mr. Patrick Hayes Recalls Being First to Cross Over Original Bridge

His who crossed hand over hand on the cable of the first footbridge across Moira between the Moira River today walked across the new steel footbridge, manned by the C.N.R. wooden structure. That man is Mr. Patrick Hayes, 37 Canniff Street. Many years separated these two events.

The new bridge will be officially opened on Friday.

"It was about 37 or 40 years ago, as well as I can remember" said Mr. Hayes today. "There had been no bridge across the river at this place up to that time, for the people used the upper and the lower bridges. Since then we have learned to know the convenience of this bridge. During the past two decades we have missed it very much.

Hand Over Hand Crawl

"I was with my half-brother, Danny Sullivan as the first bridge was being constructed. The men were working on it. The cross pieces had been laid and there were planks laid across them except at the ends where there were no planks for the landing place. We saw a ladder nearby which the men had been using and we got it, placed it up against the cable and climbed up. I was about the first to get started over, hand over hand on the cable the climb moved up on the other side. Reaching there we turned back, but this time we climbed down off the cable to the planking of the floor and crossed on the floor until we came near landing place. I found a quarter of a dollar on a plank and next day I asked the workmen if one of them had lost it, but no one claimed it. Reverting to the pre-bridge days, Mr. Hayes stated that there had been considerable difference of opinion as to the need of the bridge. It was back over two generations ago, but two members of the council fought it through to the end and won the bridge for the people.

Today's New Bridge

Today it is a new type bridge which spans the Moira, hanging by the old cables almost in the place on either side to the towers and to the places to which they are anchored.

The boards of the walk on the former bridge were laid longitudinal. The new walk is crosswise, affording better footing especially in wet weather. The new structure is the first steel footbridge and is not the last which is an improvement on the old type rails which guarded the pedestrians up to the time of the late flood in March.

The new bridge possesses a slight arch in the centre.

Official Opening

A wide red ribbon strung across the west entrance of the footbridge will be cut by Mayor Harry Hill, attended by members of the city council at 3.30 o'clock on Friday afternoon, signalling the official opening of the footbridge to pedestrian traffic. Owing to speedy work on the part of the men employed from Hamilton engaged in the construction of the bridge, the bridge was completed within a short of time, it was announced by Contractor Walter Patterson today.

LEAGUE AFFAIRS TO BE DISCUSSED LATE IN SESSION

Intimation Given by Premier as Woodsworth Pressed Opening Question

BENNETT UPHOLDS KING

Claims Canadians in Parliament Should be Careful of Speech

Ottawa, May 14—(CP)—League of Nations affairs will be discussed in the House of Commons later in the session at a time carefully selected by the government. This was the intimation given the members yesterday by Prime Minister Mackenzie King when J. S. Woodsworth, C.C.F. leader, pressed for an early discussion.

Today the House takes up the proposal to amend the British North America Act with a view to the creation of loan councils. It comes in by way of an address from the Imperial Parliament asking for an amendment as Canada is unable to amend its own constitution.

The discussion was scheduled for yesterday but was postponed when Hon. O. H. Caban, former Secretary of State, asked for the production of correspondence with the provincial governments on the matter and for time to read it. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, agreed to the postponement and to the production of the documents, of which he said there were few.

Mr. Woodsworth brought the League of Nations into the picture by a series of questions and a protest at the delay in holding a debate on external affairs estimates when Mr. King had agreed to a full discussion.

Not Member of League Council

Mr. Woodsworth asked whether Canada had voted for the continuance of sanctions at the recent League Council session at Geneva. Mr. King replied Canada was not a member of the League council and so had no vote.

"What is the attitude of Canada to sanctions against Italy?" asked Mr. Woodsworth.

Mr. King said there would be an opportunity to discuss that when the League of Nations estimate came up later in the session.

The Winnipeg member, a consistent pacifist, protested against this delay. He said he wanted a full discussion of the matter in the near future. The question was urgent and should not be delayed by any "pussy-footing" attitude.

"The Prime Minister has appar- ently determined to give this house no information as to the attitude of the government at his very important crisis in the world's history," he declared.

Canada was a member of the League but it now appeared the League had failed dismally. It had failed in the Sino-Japanese crisis. It had failed in the South American troubles and in most especially- ular failure was in Ethiopia.

"Is Canada to go on as a member of a League which offers no security to this country?" he asked. "This gives rise to another question as to Canada's attitude towards Great Britain. Is Great Britain to speak for Canada in world affairs and are we to be found by under-taking in which we have no say, perhaps even be asked to contribute our boys, because of the bungling of British statesmen?"

Prepared to Meet Wishes

Mr. King said he was prepared to meet the wishes of the House in this as in all other matters. He was convinced the majority of members as well as the majority of the people believed they could contribute more effectively to a solution of the problems which European statesmen were grappling by "considering very carefully the time at which we begin this discussion."

Launching a precipitate debate on the League would not be helpful, Mr. King even suggested launching it in the past month might have been harmful. The government had considered it best to proceed in the House with other matters of immediate concern on which members had full information.

Conservative leader Bennett said Mr. King had fully discharged his duty to the House by promising a discussion of League matters on estimates.

"I do not share the views of Mr. Woodsworth that discussion in this chamber is going to have any great effect on the world at large," said Mr. Bennett.

Be Careful of Speech

Canadians should be careful when speaking in parliament, to say nothing which would embarrass or retard a real solution of critical international difficulties.

"Our effort must be to uphold the hands of those who are endeavoring to maintain the peace of the world," he added. "How best to do that may, of course, give rise to differences of opinion between parties and within parties but these questions far transcend party politics."

Mr. King or Prime Minister had information other members could not have, Mr. Bennett continued. In the nature of things Mr. King had to determine when it was best to discuss league matters. He had confidence in Mr. King's judgment because no Prime Minister would fail to give his best thought to such a vital matter.

DEFALCATIONS OF SEAFORTH LAWYER REACH $120,000

Police Believe All Has Been Disputed in Stock Transactions

MANY LEFT PENNILESS

Expected $30,000 in Certificates Would be Recovered

Seaforth, Ont., May 14 (CP)—Sometime today authorities expect to know the exact amount of money and valuables missing from the 65 or so safety-deposit boxes which John J. Haggard, 36-year-old Seaforth lawyer, had in his care. At the same times they hope to have a definite line as to his whereabouts.

Crown Attorney Dudley Holmes of Huron County last night revealed that with 28 boxes still to be examined the defalcations of the one-time Toronto Argonaut oarsman and church choir singer had reached $120,000, all of which had been dissipated in stock market transactions.

At the same time, Crown Attorney Holmes said it was definitely known Haggard, without funds, was hiding in the vicinity of New York City. This information was obtained through the knowledge of a telephone conversation the absent barrister had with a Toronto friend, in which he sought financial assistance.

With Inspector Charles Gurnett of the Criminal Investigation Department in active control of the investigation, the task of delving into the affairs of the barrister continued today. A rumor circulated last night to the effect investments some $30,000 in certificates was expected momentarily and would be followed by some startling disclosures. There was no official substantiation to this report, however.

Haggard's clients, among them elderly widows and retired farmers, accepted the revelation of their losses, some despairingly, others philosophically.

Widow Nearly Collapses

Mrs. Peter Decoursy, Egmondville widow, all but collapsed when she found her bonds, valued as $6,000 had disappeared. Her widow clothed with sobs as she told officials the loss left her practically destitute. Another widow, Mrs. John Devereaux of Seaforth, bore up well when she heard of her loss, the amount of which she did not care to disclose.

A 66-year-old farmer, Fred Ickert of Mckillop Township, took some $8,500 in the disappearance of his $8,500 in the fact he was within a year of the age whereby he would be eligible for an Old Age Pension.

"There's nothing left for me to do, but to get a "pension," he said with a shrug of his shoulders. "I guess I can hold out on the farm for another year. It wouldn't be so bad for myself but I have a family to keep."

Haggard is wanted on the specific charge of stealing $2,000 in bonds from Joseph Grummett, Seaforth dairyman, who swears out a warrant after the lawyer had disappeared May 1.

The majority of those affected were original clients of the John Rankin Agency. Following the death of Rankin, Haggard married his widow and took over the business. Mrs. Haggard is confined to her home in a state of collapse.

FOXBORO

There were twenty-five at League on Monday evening and the meeting opened by singing hymn 366 and prayer by Mrs. Priest. Davis read the Scripture lesson. A poem was given by Miss Marjorie Treney and a musical selection by Mr. Leon Wilson followed. Mr. Carmen Dafoe gave a reading and Hymn 198 was sung, after which Miss Doris Horton gave a most interesting topic on "The Sacredness of Personality". TORN PAPERS ON LAWNS

Copybooks used in school and when filled, torn up and tossed on lawns which owners have striven to keep clean of debris at a great cost of effort stirred one citizen yesterday as he brought into this office a torn book which he had found on his front lawn. Discussing the carelessness of a schoolboy who would toss the discarded pages on the street or upon a lawn or into a hedge, he said that teachers could help this situation by advice to the children not to tear up their books in this way and litter lawns with them.

Any agency which will prevent the waste of that effort so many persons have put upon their lawns and properties to improve their appearance and that of the city should be courted. As the citizen suggested, parents and teachers have a great deal of influence over the young, though some of the young do not seem to follow it. In such an instance as this it might be as well were some one to make another effort and try to impress the youngsters with the injustice of scattering that which means effort to collect and which destroys beauty.

But the children are not all the offenders. Youths and adults must come in for a share of the blame, in littering streets with empty cigarette-packets, with wrappings off gum and candies, thrown from the windows of automobiles parked on the street or from the curb. Throwing torn tickets and wrappings on the street and torn pieces of paper may be a matter of thoughtlessness but it is something which the offender ought to be ashamed. It costs money and pains to keep a city clean. No city can have a finer reputation than that for cleanliness and tidy residents and thoughtful children.

LATE MISS EMILY J. GUEST

News of the death of Miss Emily J. Guest, one time teacher of the English department at the Belleville High School before the days of the collegiate, caused a deep feeling of loss among those who knew the school and its staff of twenty years ago. Since she left Belleville she had filled numerous posts particularly in institute work, served the Government in war time in England and Scotland, and took keen interest in vocational guidance. Possessed of an inquiring mind, Miss Guest found problems of interest everywhere in the world, her last trip to Russia, Denmark and Germany being an instance of that quality of mind which marked her. Besides her mental and intellectual gifts, she possessed an inspiration through her enthusiasm, her wise knowledge and her winsome and sunny personality. She had a long life of many phases, served in V.A.D. work in hospital in England and was ardently devoted to the cause of peace.

Miss Guest belonged to that class of leaders who devote themselves to the work of the public interest. In that class she was one of the outstanding workers.

Those who studied at Belleville High School in her teaching days will never forget the inspiration which came from her in the classroom and without.

HOW FICTION HELPS

Japan is too poor to buy motorcars, stated Dr. Toyohiko Kagawa of Japan in Toronto the other day, and so she buys books. There are hundreds of general book stores in Tokio, he said, compared with the few in New York, Boston or Toronto.

Then he told how a girl who had read one of Kagawa's books advised a young man who was contemplating suicide, not to do so but to get in touch with the man who had written with the background of Christian ideals. That girl herself who was a victim of the white slave traffic in Japan herself sought avenue of escape from that life through Christian literature.

Dr. Kagawa stressed the importance of fiction as explaining those principles of life which make Christianity what it is. Presented with Scripture, he said, such people would probably need explanation but presented with fiction or story on a Christian basis, they immediately imbibed and absorbed the ideals particularly because the Japanese love stories and are a nation of readers.

Those who know how many modern prurient books there are realize that these are built up just for sale, a base form of slavery which tries to break down or does not care if it does break down, Christian civilization which gave the writers the freedom they possess.

But books do not require to be vicious to appeal, books based on Christian civilization are emotional and are truer to life than vile works.

The tragedy of modern reading is that many good persons read in pernicious books what they would not themselves do or countenance on the screen, yet they condone such in books and help the sale of vicious literature, which defiles them.

The vast mass of the people are good, are dominated more or less by Christian ideals personally, though a glance at some of the books some read would not lead the stranger to think so.

Dr. Kagawa must come from Japan to show the way how to clean our literature by pointing to the direct results of literature based on proper principles. Dr. Kagawa's true story does prove that the best fiction is that which has a moral foundation, even if it treat of the sordid. The writer of books must take a stand on the side of the moral. The attitude is what counts.

THE MAGIC ISLE

"There's a magic isle up the River Time
Where the softest of airs are playing;
There's a cloudless sky and a tropical clime,
And a voice as sweet as a vesper chime,
And the Junes where the roses are straying.

And the name of this Isle is the Long Ago,
And we bury our treasures there;
There are brows of beauty and bosoms of snow—
There are heaps of dust, but we loved them so!
There are trinkets and treases of hair."

A TANK TRAGEDY

FIRST THERE WERE FIVE LITTLE TROUT SWIMMING ABOUT—then they grew up and had a fine time swimming about the brook, exploring all the caves and mystery places and eagerly waiting for a chance to go out in the big world of water beyond the creek and find out what it was all about, and see what they could see. They left the creek suddenly, not of their own accord, and next found themselves swimming about in a small tin tank in a store window, to be gazed at by people all day long. The tank had a few rocks and a few touches of its great out doors, but the various channels led nowhere but back where they started from.

x

Five pretty trout swimming in a window, drinking the water chlorined at the pump house. Two pretty trout found the Chlorine too tough for digestion and turned belly-up and died.

Then there were three.

x

Three pretty trout found the going tame and became excessively bored. One jumped over the top of the tank and died in another part of the window while trying to find a way back to that quiet, pleasant brook.

Then there were two.

x

Two pretty trout had the whole tank to themselves and kept going so that their morale should not suffer. Trusting that some miracle would happen to restore them to the brook. One got tired waiting, took an overdose of chlorine, and was found belly-up in the morning gasping for breath. That pretty trout was taken and placed in the river in the slim hope that he might live away from chlorine.

Then there was but one.

x

One pretty trout swam about the tank all alone, all his pretty companions were faded and gone. He was hard-boiled and strong and hopeful—but there seemed no way out—no pleasant path back to the creek—and so he folded up and died too, for what was the use living, one swift strong creature born for the open spaces and the swift rush of the open water—nowhere to go save around and round and not even room enough to get up a fair spurt of speed without butting headfirst into the side of the tin tank.

Then there were none.

PLAYS THE BAGPIPES UNDER THE WALLS OF THE CANADIAN PARLIAMENT does Tom Reid, M.P. for New Westminster, a brawScot who finds the atmosphere at Ottawa too thick with intrigue and soft coal dust to suit, so he steals out from his room in the Parliament Buildings at the dead of night and strides along Lovers Walk sounding the gay and martial strains of Auld Scotia. Mounted Police tired to silence this Scot M.P., but had to retire in disorder. Must be this canny Scot brought his bad with him from the Pacific Coast to Ottawa and beds down under one of the mighty pillars beneath the Peace Tower—or perhaps he boards with the Sergeant-at-Arms.

An old actor was congratulating a photographer upon the result of some photographs he had taken of the former's daughter—a very charming and pretty girl.

"Yes," replied the photographer, "but look at the subject. I could hardly fail to make something good."

A friend of the actor who was standing near chaffed him upon being so pleased and proud, and reminded him that it was only fair to give his wife some credit for the girl's beauty.

"My wife, sir?" retorted the actor. "Why she is merely the publisher—I am the author!"

HOW FAR CAN YOU GO...
BEFORE HE SAYS...
The "FIRST QUART"
Tells the Story
Out of the experience of thousands of motorists has been developed a simple method of comparing oil performance . . . the "First Quart" Test. It is just a matter of noting how many miles you go after a drain-and-refill before you have to add a quart. If you are obliged to add oil too frequently, try the "First Quart" Test with Quaker State. See if you don't go farther before you have to add that tell-tale first quart. And, the oil that stands up best between refills is giving your motor the safest lubrication. Quaker State Oil Refining Co. of Canada, Ltd., Toronto.
